FOREWORD

As a result of the growing awareness that language is the natural vehicle of world communication, the realization has emerged that language study is necessary and imperative in order to adequately communicate our interests and concerns, dreams and aspirations, experiences and ideas, as well as to permit us to identify the world around us.

With this in mind, the Yonkers Public Schools have, in recent years, expanded foreign language programs to include elementary through high school offerings. The talents of the district's professional staff have been tapped to develop appropriate materials to support this effort.

Committees comprised of foreign language teachers, as well as school and central office administrators, developed guides to facilitate the teaching and learning of foreign language.

The curriculum guides use a spiraling pattern thus paralleling the language development process with which students are familiar. A communicative approach has been consistently incorporated throughout to insure skill competency building, enhance learning and provide consistency with State Education Department mandates.

The development of the Yonkers Public Schools' Foreign Language Curriculum Guides will contribute to consistency in content and overall improvement in second language acquisition. This is another step closer in our journey toward academic excellence for all Yonkers Public Schools' students.

INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE:

Teaching the Curriculum was specially designed as a unified, objective based curriculum guide for foreign language instruction with respect to Checkpoint A of the New York State Syllabus.

The format of Teaching the Curriculum is based on the newly developed State Syllabus and is designed so as to clearly and concisely present the major topics and situations pertinent to foreign language instruction. A resource packet containing supplemental activities and suggestions has been compiled. Its purpose is to provide teachers with start-up materials.

This curriculum, aided by the classroom teacher's skill and creativity will serve as a catalyst in transforming abstract concepts into instructional realities. This format was designed with this purpose in mind.

PHILOSOPHY:

Facility in a foreign language is an invaluable asset to our ability to communicate effectively in the world totality. It enhances our opportunities to achieve peace and provide socio-economic and political stability in an increasingly mutually-dependant world. In addition, foreign language ability offers obvious benefits through expanded employment and career opportunities.

Consequently, the study of a foreign language should be an integral part of each student's educational experience. It is incumbent upon today's educational leadership to make this opportunity available so that they may better prepare themselves to play a productive and meaningful role in the future.

This document is an expression of hope that the development of a course of study in the knowledge of foreign languages will stimulate students, parents and community to support knowledge of languages and understanding of other cultures. The goals, objectives, and suggested activities have been selected to revitalize the approach to the acquisition of a second language with emphasis on communication competence.

To that effect, we present this curriculum as a symbol of our commitment to provide our students with skills valuable not only in socio-economic terms, but also useful towards a greater understanding of our world, towards peace and stability.
The Regents have incorporated cultural goals, into the Action Plan in the following statements:

Each student will acquire knowledge, understanding and appreciation of artistic, cultural, and intellectual accomplishments of civilization and will develop the skills to express personal aesthetic judgments.

These include:

- ability to use cultural resources of museums, libraries, theaters, historic sites and performing arts groups
- ability to make aesthetic judgments, and ability to apply them to works of art

Each student will learn methods of inquiry and knowledge gained through the study of language and literature in at least one language other than English and will use the methods and knowledge in interdisciplinary applications.

Each student will acquire knowledge of political, economic, and social institutions and procedures in various nations; ability to compare the operation of such institutions; and understanding of the international interdependence of political, economic, social, cultural and environmental systems.
REQUIREMENTS

The New York State Board of Regents, through its Action Plan, reinstated the requirement of a second language. The Part 100 Regulations of the New York State Education Department introduces a two tier approach to the acquisition of a second language.

Part 100.2 (d) Second Language Requirement

(1) Public school students graduating in 1992 and thereafter shall have completed at least one unit of study in a second language at some time during grades kindergarten through nine. Public school students graduating in 1994 and thereafter shall have completed at least two units of study in a second language at some time during grades kindergarten through nine.

(2) Beginning September 1, 1988, the Board of Education of each public school district shall make available instruction in a language other than English in grades 8 through 12.

(3) Beginning in May, 1989, all students who pass an approved second language proficiency examination shall be awarded the first unit of credit in second language instruction, unless the student has already been awarded such first unit of credit in second language instruction as set forth in section 100.1 (b) of this part.

The goal of the Modern Language Syllabus, in the spirit of the Regents Action Plan, which we enthusiastically endorse, addresses the needs of today's students as they prepare to meet the challenges of the 21st Century in a rapidly changing world.

The underpinnings of the Regents Action Plan - critical thinking, reasoning skills, the synthesis of knowledge, humanistic understanding, social awareness, creativity and self-esteem - are the foundation of the three major goals of Modern Language Syllabus: Communicative Goals, Cultural Goals and General Educational Goals. Although the three major goals are listed separately, they are not intended to be isolated objectives, but rather to be woven together into a communicative whole.

General Educational Goals

Second language learning is an integral part of the student's total learning experience and provides a basis for interdisciplinary activity.

The following goals stated in the Regents Action Plan address the interrelationship of disciplines and the need to coordinate separate entities into a meaningful unity:
Each student will master communication skills enabling him/her to:

- think logically and creatively
- determine what information is needed for particular purposes and acquire, organize, and use that information for those purposes
- apply reasoning skills to issues and problems

Each student will respect and practice basic civic values and acquire the skills, knowledge, understanding, and attitudes necessary to participate in democratic self-government.

Included are:

- understanding and acceptance of the values of justice, honesty, self-discipline, due process, equality, and majority rule with respect for minority rights
- respect for self, others, and property as integral to a self-governing, democratic society

Each student will develop a commitment to lifetime learning with the capacity for undertaking new studies, synthesizing new knowledge and experience with the known, and refining the ability to judge.

Communicative Goals

The goal of second language teaching is the achievement of functional communication in the context of the target language culture.

The goal expressed by the Regents Action Plan delineates specific areas of concentration related to second language instruction:

Each student will develop proficiencies in the communication skills enabling him/her to:

- speak, understand, read and write at least one language other than English
- comprehend written, spoken and visual presentations in various media

Each student will develop the ability to understand, respect, and accept people of different races, sex, ability, cultural heritages, national origin, values, beliefs and attitudes.

Cultural Goals

The understanding and appreciation of different cultures in other countries, as well as in our own community, are integral elements in second language education. The foreign language curriculum, in collaboration with other curricular areas, makes a major contribution to the Regents' goals.

FORMAT
FORMAT

The foreign language curriculum is based on the New York State Syllabus for Modern Languages for Communication, New York State Education Department. The format used throughout the curriculum guide consists of topics and instructional objectives leading to communicative competence. Throughout the guide, the topics are further developed in units. Most topics and units are introduced and presented at various times during the instructional period, but with varying degrees of intensity and execution. The same topic/unit will be presented with increasing emphasis in the development of communicative skills.

Following the instructional objective, a series of suggested activities are presented for use by the teacher. These will give the students the opportunity to develop the four language skills: listening, speaking, reading and writing. These activities also provide for opportunities to understand cultural differences and appreciate similarities.

The instructional program follows the curriculum. The textbook and other supplementary materials enhance the objectives. The overall goal is to produce a student who can communicate needs and knowledge in a second language.

SCOPE AND SEQUENCE

The progression of skills, concepts, and competencies is positive and increases in intensity. The topics/units are the same throughout the curriculum, however, the enhancement of the skills is greater according to the level and the group.

PROFICIENCIES - Listening, Speaking, Reading, Writing and Culture

The term "proficiency" should not be confused with native or near-native "fluency." Instead, it refers to the degree of control of the basic elements of the language that the student should be able to demonstrate at each checkpoint. The proficiencies in the syllabus and the curriculum are stated in such a way as to accommodate the learning styles and abilities of all students. They are designed to stress the successful communication of meaning rather than placing undue emphasis on attaining structural accuracy, particularly at the early stages of language learning.

PROGRAM OF INSTRUCTION

The program is based on the curriculum and the curriculum guides. The program of instruction is the actual instruction provided by the teacher to the students.

OBJECTIVES

The objectives are specific overt changes in student behavior that are expected to result from participation in the program.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Learning activities are those specifically designed to transmit the objectives of each unit. The learning activities are suggested pathways for the teacher to travel through a lesson. They are intended as a springboard for other activities and ideas.

VOCABULARY

The introduction of vocabulary is usually devoted to words that tend to promote the learning of relevant communicative skills in simple structures. The vocabulary will reflect the particular TOPIC as related to the students' experiences and to their environmental context. The introduction of new vocabulary and structural complexity will respond to the needs and interest of the classroom context, as well as curriculum design. The vocabulary which appears is suggested vocabulary and is not in any way all inclusive. Teachers are encouraged to supplement the suggested vocabulary lists with additional relevant words and expressions.
CHECKPOINT A – PROFICIENCIES

LISTENING
1. Students will develop a level of comprehension which will enable them to grasp simple statements and questions.

2. Students will develop an ability to comprehend the basic thrust of simple messages and conversations. Repetition is frequently required to effect comprehension even when speakers are accustomed to conversation with non-natives.

SPEAKING
1. Students will develop a facility to initiate, and provide appropriate responses to simple statements, as well as carry on elementary face-to-face conversations.

2. Students will be able to function within the vocabulary structure and phonology commensurate with the situations, functions and topics prescribed for this level. This ability level, with repetitions and gestures, will foster comprehension by native speakers accustomed to non-natives attempting the target language.

READING
1. Students will develop a comprehension level adequate for the assimilation of simple informative material or for social purposes.

2. Students will be able to comprehend the important elements of brief general public statements and common messages.

3. Students will be able to comprehend the basic concepts of passages containing simple grammatical structure and appropriate syntactical models. This is accomplished while relying on visual cues and prior topical familiarity. Comprehension is accomplished within the parameters of simple language using common grammatical patterns and vocabulary.

WRITING
1. Students will be able to express basic needs, as well as initiate short written messages concerning familiar topics with respect to personal experience.

2. Students will be able to produce short and correct written expressions. This will be accomplished through the use of selected, mastered vocabulary and syntactical structures appropriate to the level. The written material will be comprehensible to native speakers even though spelling and grammatical errors may occur.

CULTURE
1. Students will be able to understand the cultural aspects of the target language speakers.

HOW TO BEGIN GATHERING AUTHENTIC MATERIALS

1. Copy the preceding list and give it to principals, department chairpeople, budget committees, travelers to the target country, contacts or pen-pals in the target country, or anyone who might be able to supply items on the list.

2. At requisition time, set aside department funds to purchase currency, stamps, blank audio and video cassettes to record native speakers, T.V. programs.

3. Draft a flexible form letter asking for brochures, forms, etc. and whenever you come across an address from an ad, product, newspaper, etc. send off a request. Some companies are most happy to share.

4. Purchase or get your librarian to requisition telephone books from target culture.

5. Old, out-dated newspapers and magazines can be cut up and useful parts laminated for classroom use.

6. Contact ethnic organizations in the community which might want to help or which might have members who can contribute items.

7. Contact local book/music stores to see what they have and ask for their contact addresses, etc.
