
This curriculum guide presents the components of a U.S. history course examining the causes and immediate effects of the opening of Japan to American trade and diplomacy by Commodore Matthew C. Perry's 1853-1854 Japanese expedition. The first part of the guide introduces the goals of the course. Next, the student objectives of the course are listed, emphasizing the basic understanding of the following: (1) the social institutions, political institutions, economic institutions, and international relations of the Tokugawa Shogunate at the time of the expedition; (2) political and economic motivations of the Fillmore administration to send the expedition to Japan; (3) the roles of Commodore Matthew C. Perry and Masahiro Abe; and (4) the general provisions of the Treaty of Kanagawa. The student learning activities of the course are then detailed, highlighting the pre-test, an essay, group discussions, and an oral presentation. The remainder of the curriculum guide provides the method of student evaluation, the time frame for the exercise, and the pre-test instrument. Contains a bibliography. (TGI)

1. Goals

To introduce students to the causes and immediate effects of the opening of Japan to American trade and diplomacy by the expedition of Commodore Matthew C. Perry to Japan in 1853-1854.

To have students develop a knowledge and understanding of the events, personalities, and ideas surrounding the Perry expedition to Japan from American and Japanese points of view.

2. Student Objectives

a. The student should have a basic understanding of the social institutions of the Tokugawa Shogunate at the time of the expedition.

b. The student should have a basic understanding of the political institutions of the Tokugawa Shogunate at the time of the expedition.

c. The student should have a basic understanding of the economic institutions of the Tokugawa Shogunate at the time of the expedition.

d. The student should have a basic understanding of the international relations of the Tokugawa Shogunate at the time of the expedition.

e. The student should have a basic understanding of the political motivations of the Fillmore Administration to send the expedition to Japan.

f. The student should have a basic understanding of the economic motivations of the Fillmore Administration to send the expedition to Japan.

g. The student should be able to identify and explain the role of Commodore Matthew C. Perry.

h. The student should be able to identify and explain the role of Masahiro Abe.

i. The student should be able to identify and explain the general provisions of the Treaty of Kanagawa.
3. Student Learning Activities

   a. A pre-test will be given prior to the assignment. See attached.

   b. The following materials will be put on reserve in the Library for students to check out and read:

   Peter Duus, The Japanese Discovery of America: A Brief History with Documents. Boston, Bedford, 1996. The student will read Part 1 and Sections 1-4 of Part 2. (This book will also be available in the College Bookstore for purchase.)

   Treaty of Kanagawa, March 31, 1854.

   Students with special needs will be able to check out the all materials and take them to the Access Office on campus where they can receive the type of support services best suited to their needs.

   c. After reading the articles the student will write an out of class essay which will “Compare and Contrast the Japanese and the American positions as to why Japan should or should not end its policy of isolation.” This essay will be turned in for evaluation.

   d. During the class period in which the essay has been turned in the students will be divided up into groups of three to discuss “Why did Japan End its Isolation?”

   e. After the discussion each group will submit a written statement of their conclusions and be prepared to present an oral summation to the rest of the class.

4. Student Evaluation

   Evaluation will be based on the out of class essay (80%) and the group statement (20%) and how well they demonstrated a basic understanding of the objectives as outlined above in item #2 (a through i). The essay and group statement will constitute the post-test for the material.

5. Time Frame

   The suggested time frame for this exercise is two hours of class time.
