Approximately 700,000 Federal employees have children under age 13; at least an equal number of Federal employees are estimated to have concerns about their elderly parents and relatives. This handbook was developed primarily to put government employees in touch with the many free resource organizations and agencies around the country that can help them meet their dependent care needs. It also provides practical tips on how to find quality child care, information about federal personnel programs that can help to balance work and family responsibilities, and places to call for further information on related topics, such as obtaining financial assistance. The handbook is divided into three parts: Child Care, Elder Care, and Work and Family Programs. Part I suggests practical steps to take in finding quality child care, including questions to ask during the initial telephone screening and a checklist of things to observe when visiting child care centers or homes. It also provides a directory of resource and referral services around the country, and a list of federal and national organizations that can help parents learn about quality child care. Part II explains a variety of community resources that are offered around the country to help older adults function independently, and discusses housing options, financial and medical considerations, nursing homes, and home health care agencies. It also provides a short summary of the services provided by federal and national organizations which can help employees meet their elder care needs. The last part provides information on the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM's) Work and Family Program Center and government-wide personnel flexibility; and on programs, policies, and leave options to help employees balance their work and family demands. The Handbook of Child and Elder Care Resources
Approximately 700,000 Federal employees have children under the age of 13. At least an equal number of Federal employees are estimated to have concerns about their elderly parents and relatives. Balancing the competing demands of work and family is often difficult. We have all experienced, or know someone who has experienced, the challenge of caring for a child or an elderly parent, while also carrying out the responsibilities of a job.

The Handbook of Child and Elder Care Resources is intended to introduce you - employers and employees - to a number of organizations and resources that can help you meet that challenge.

This handbook was developed primarily to put employees in touch with the many free resource organizations and agencies around the country that can help you meet dependent care needs. It also provides practical tips on how to find quality child care, information about Federal personnel programs that can help to balance work and family responsibilities, and places to call for further information on related topics, such as obtaining financial assistance.

The U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM) is committed to supporting Federal programs that assist employees who are caring for children, disabled adults, and elderly parents and relatives, as well as providing work and family personnel flexibilities that help balance these responsibilities. This handbook is divided into three parts: Child Care, Elder Care, and Work and Family Programs.

The child care part suggests practical steps to take in finding quality child care, including questions to ask during the initial telephone screening and a checklist of things to observe when visiting child care centers or homes. It also provides a directory of resource and/or referral services around the country, and a list of Federal and national organizations that can help parents learn about quality child care.

The elder care part of the handbook explains a variety of community resources that are offered in many communities around the country to help older adults function independently and discusses housing options, financial and medical considerations, nursing homes, and home health care agencies. It also provides a short summary of the services provided by Federal and national organizations which can help employees meet their elder care needs.

The last part provides information on OPM’s Work and Family Program Center and Governmentwide personnel flexibilities, programs, policies, and leave options to help employees balance their work and family demands.

Part I. CHILD CARE

Choosing child care arrangements is a very personal decision for parents. It is one of the most important decisions a parent can make since the care children receive influences their future development. This section of the handbook describes the types of child care available in most communities, how to find high quality child care, and provides you with resources to use in your search for high quality care. It lists resource and/or referral services around the country that can provide you with information about available child care. It describes Federal and national organizations that can help you learn about quality child care, and provides a bibliography related to finding quality child care. Finally, it gives information about a program that assists low-income parents in obtaining child care.

Section 1: Types of Child Care

There are three basic types of child care: child care centers, child care homes, and child care in your own home. This section describes these basic types and also outlines some additional child care programs that may be available in your community: before and after school care; vacation and summer programs; sick child/back-up/emergency care; part-day preschool programs and nursery schools; programs for children with special needs; and the Head Start Program.

Child Care Centers

A child care center provides care for groups of children by a staff of caregivers. The staff have some type of early childhood education training. Centers are generally licensed by the State and are generally earning accreditation through the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC). Centers are either privately operated for profit by a chain or individual, or operated by non-profit agencies, such as churches, public schools, government agencies, or non-profit vendors. (See the child care appendices for licensing and accreditation, and a listing of State and local agencies that can help you locate child care centers in your area.)

Child Care Homes

A child care home provides care for a small group of children in the caregiver's home. These homes are registered or licensed in most States. More and more homes are becoming accredited by the National Association for Family Day Care (NAFDC). (See the child care appendices for licensing and accreditation, and a listing of State and local agencies that can help you locate child care homes in your area.)

Child Care In Your Own Home

This type of care takes place in your own home. The caregiver may be a babysitter, a professional "nanny" trained to care for young children, a student "au pair" who lives in your home, or another caregiver who has some experience with young children. Parents need to check references carefully. When using in-home care, you become an employer, which requires special considerations. As an employer, you are responsible for Federal Unemployment Insurance and Social Security taxes. In many States you must provide Workers' Compensation and State Unemployment Insurance.

Before and After School Care

There are various options for before and after school care. Programs in your community may be operated by child care centers, recreation centers, churches, and youth organizations, such as Young Men's Christian Association (YMCA), Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA), Boys Clubs of America, Girls Inc., and Camp Fire, Inc. In many communities, schools provide after school care, sometimes called "extended day care" programs. If your school does not currently provide such a program, your school's principal or Parent Teachers Association (PTA) may be aware of parents' associations that are working in your community to get such programs started or to find other affordable quality options for school-age care. The resource and referral agencies listed in child care appendices will assist you in finding before and after school care. In addition, the School-Age Child Care Project of the Wellesley College Center for Research on Women and Project Home Safe located in Appendix H can provide you with booklets and other information on finding quality school-age care for your child.

Vacation and Summer Programs
Vacation and summer programs are usually for school-age children, although in some areas they are also available for preschool children. These programs provide a variety of activities such as arts and crafts, swimming, drama, and organized sports. Vacation or summer programs are often operated by the local parks and recreation departments, community organizations, and child care centers.

Sick Child/Back-Up/Emergency Care
All children get sick from time to time. Most child care centers have policies about sick children and very few allow children with contagious diseases to attend. Some day care centers set aside space to care for mildly ill children. These centers usually have a nurse on staff or on call. The need for such sick child day care centers has produced many centers opened around the country. To find out if there is a center in your area, contact the National Association of Sick Child Day Care Centers, 804-747-0100.

Caregivers also can get sick. Child care centers generally make arrangements for substitutes when a caregiver is ill; however, if you choose a child care home, you will need to ask if the caregiver has plans for someone to care for your child when the caregiver is sick. It is a good idea to plan for back-up care. When looking for back-up care, you may want to consider child care centers and homes, neighbors, close friends, or local college students. Discuss your needs for back-up care with potential providers beforehand to be sure they will be available when you need them. It is a good idea to complete the necessary documents and decide on any fees before you need the back-up care.

Part-day Preschool Programs and Nursery Schools
Part-day preschool programs and nursery schools are group child care programs which operate less than a full day. These programs are located in a variety of settings, including churches, public schools, and child care centers. State licensing regulations may be different for programs operating less than a full-day schedule. This type of care, generally for children two and a half to five years of age, provides an opportunity for interaction with other children of similar ages. These programs usually follow the same academic year and holiday schedules as the public schools.

Programs for Children with Special Needs
Finding quality child care for children with disabilities can be especially challenging for parents. However, information and assistance is available from national and community organizations and parent groups to make the search easier. One of the organizations that can help parents of special needs children find child care is the National Information Center for Children and Youth with Disabilities (NICHCY). It can send you free of charge two very useful publications, A Parent's Guide: Accessing Programs for Infants, Toddlers, and Preschoolers with Disabilities and A Parent's Guide: Accessing Parent Groups. NICHCY can also send you a State Resource Sheet that lists the addresses and phone numbers of the agencies and organizations in your State that can assist parents of children with disabilities, and a National Resource Sheet that lists addresses and phone numbers of the national disabilities organizations and clearinghouses. NICHCY's toll-free phone number is 1-800-695-0285.

It is also important to note that regardless of your child's specific disability, you may always call the local office of any of the national disabilities organizations, such as United Cerebral Palsy Association, National Down Syndrome Society, Muscular Dystrophy Association, Spina Bifida Association of America, and March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation.
The staff of these and other disability organizations generally know about the services provided in their communities and can usually help parents even if their child has a disability different from the one that is the focus of the organization.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) covers child care centers and family day care homes. Information about the requirements of the ADA, as well as informal guidance in understanding and complying with the ADA, can be obtained by contacting the U.S. Department of Justice, Public Access Section of the Civil Rights Division, P.O. Box 66738, Washington, DC 20035-6738, 202-514-0301.

Head Start Program
Head Start is a nationwide Federally-funded early childhood program for low-income preschool children, primarily ages three to five. It is designed to provide comprehensive services in preparation for public school. Services include cognitive and language development, medical, dental, mental health, nutritional, and social services. The program places particular emphasis on parental involvement. For information about specific eligibility requirements, contact your local department of social services.
Section 2: Finding Quality Child Care

Matching the needs of your child and your own needs with the child care available is a time-consuming process. It often takes extra time and effort to find high quality care. This section can help you to find high quality care by explaining the role of licensing and accreditation, and describing steps a parent can take in evaluating child care centers or homes prior to selecting one. It suggests questions to ask when you phone ahead to child care centers or homes, offers ideas of what to look for when visiting child care centers or homes, and describes how to monitor the quality of care your child receives while in the center or home you have selected. Especially useful is a checklist that can be copied and brought along on the initial visit to the centers or homes. The checklists can then be used in evaluating your choices after visits to several centers or homes.

Licensing and Accreditation

One means of determining a child care provider's commitment to quality is whether the provider is licensed and accredited (or working toward accreditation). Licensing indicates that minimum standards have been met, whereas accreditation means that the child care provider has gone beyond the minimum standards and is voluntarily striving to achieve high quality care.

Licensing

Most States regulate child care centers by licensing; some States also license child care homes. Licensing includes an on-site visit to assure that basic minimum requirements (for health, safety, and child/staff ratios) have been met and periodic inspections to monitor continued compliance. This may include inspections by the local health department, the fire department, and the licensing agency. Keep in mind, however, that States vary considerably as to the minimum standards allowed. Also, certain categories of child care centers, such as church-sponsored centers and centers in public schools, are legally exempt from licensing in some States. Most of the State licensing offices listed in Appendix A can provide you with information about the specific regulations in your State. A summary of your State's child care regulations can also be obtained from The Children's Foundation, (202) 347-3300.

Registration is a variation of licensing used by some States for child care homes. Registration relies more heavily on parents as monitors than does traditional licensing. Inspections are not usually required prior to registration, and States vary considerably in the degree to which registered homes are monitored.

Accreditation

Two organizations accredit child care—one accredits early childhood programs and the other accredits child care homes. The National Academy of Early Childhood Programs (a division of the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), accredits early childhood programs, child care centers, pre-schools, kindergartens, and before and after school programs. The National Association for Family Day Care (NAFDC) accredits child care homes. A discussion of each of these organizations follows.

The National Academy of Early Childhood Programs

The National Academy of Early Childhood Programs (a division of the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), accredits child care centers that offer high quality services. The accreditation process examines the total child care program; however, emphasis is placed on the quality of interactions among staff and children and the developmental appropriateness of the curriculum--what really happens to the children. Health and safety, staffing, staff qualifications, communication with families, physical environment, administration, and nutrition and food service are all reviewed during accreditation, but primary consideration is given to the nature of the child's experience. Programs must be operational for at least one year before accreditation may be granted. More than 1,000 programs have achieved accreditation and an additional 3,000 programs are in the process of becoming accredited. Write NAEYC, 1834 Connecticut Avenue, NW., Washington, DC 20009 for a list of accredited programs.
The National Association for Family Day Care (NAFDC)

NAFDC accredits family day care homes that offer high quality child care services. Accreditation is granted to those home care providers who not only meet the child care standards defined by State licensing and registration agencies, but also have demonstrated a commitment to reach beyond these minimum requirements to achieve standards of excellence. The dimensions of child care assessed by NAFDC are safety, health, nutrition, interaction between children and care provider, learning environment, outdoor environment, and professional responsibility. Write NAFDC, 1331-A Pennsylvania Avenue, NW., #348, Washington, DC 20004 for a list of accredited homes in your State. Include a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Keep in mind that the accreditation process of the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC) process began operation in September 1985 and the NAFDC began in June 1988. Therefore, you may wish to ask if and when the child care center/home is accredited.
Section 3: Practical Steps to Take in Finding Quality Care

The first step in finding quality care is to identify several child care providers in your area. The agencies listed in Appendix A of the Child Care Part can help you to identify your options. Once you have obtained a list of several centers or homes, you may want to phone them, using the suggested "telephone interview questions" found in Appendix B and Appendix D, to screen out those you are not interested in, and to begin evaluating those you would like to consider further. You will then want to visit several centers and/or homes to decide which is the best situation for your child. Consider the following topics below when making a decision or following up. Consult the appendix for additional information on each topic.

- TELEPHONE INTERVIEW
- ON-SITE INTERVIEW
- LOCAL CHILD CARE AGENCY REFERRALS

Section 4: Monitoring the Quality of Care Selected

Once you select a child care center or home, you will need to monitor the quality of care your child receives. This can be accomplished when you:

- Involve yourself in your child's program and parent activities.
- Observe your child in the child care setting and discuss any problems as soon as they appear.
- Ask your child what he or she does and how he or she feels about the child care center and/or home. Listen carefully to the responses. Follow up and ask questions when you have concerns.
- Drop in frequently to observe the number of children and caregivers present, whether there is supervision at all times, the conditions of the facility, and the daily activities.
- Communicate with other parents in the program.

Local Child Care Referral Agencies

Many communities around the country have free or low cost services which can help you locate quality child care centers or child care home providers. The listings in this section identify agencies and organizations that can provide you with information about child care providers in your area.

The listings do not include every child care referral service in each State. We have listed only a sampling of child care referral services in those metropolitan areas with more than 1,000 Federal employees. If you live in an area that is not listed, please note the Child Care Aware information below. You also can call the office at the State level (listed at the beginning of most of the State listings) or the child care referral service nearest to your home or workplace for a referral to the appropriate child care organization.

The services offered by the organizations listed vary considerably. Some of the organizations provide only a list of licensed child care centers and/or child care home providers in the caller's area. Other organizations do a computer search to match the specific needs of the caller with child care providers who seem most able to meet those needs. (Keep in mind, however, that resource and referral agencies do not recommend child care centers or homes.) Some organizations are equipped to provide information about vacancies and waiting lists. Some provide written materials that can help parents in choosing quality care for their children.

All of the organizations listed provide lists of licensed child care centers or home providers free of charge unless otherwise noted. They are listed alphabetically by State, with the State office (where there is such an office) listed first, followed by the other organizations. This is not intended to be a complete listing of all child care referral agencies in each area, and inclusion in this listing does not constitute an endorsement by the U.S. Office of Personnel Management.

Appendix B:
Staff/Child Ratios at Child Care Centers*

The National Association for the Education of Young Children provides the following guidelines for staff/child ratios at child care centers. To the extent possible, the care you choose should follow these guidelines.

For infants (birth-12 months), a group of six infants should be supervised by one teacher for every three infants (1:3). Eight infants is the maximum number of infants recommended and should be cared for by one caregiver for every four children (1:4). A group of six toddlers (12-24 months) should have one instructor for every three toddlers (1:3); for a group of eight, one instructor for every four children (1:4); for a group of 10, one instructor for every five children (1:5); and for a group of 12, one instructor for every four children (1:4).

For two year olds (24-30 months), a group of eight children should be supervised by one teacher for every four children (1:4); for a group of 10 children, one teacher for every five children (1:5); and for a group of 12, one teacher for every six children (1:6). A group of ten 2 1/2-year olds (30 to 36 months) should have one instructor for every five children (1:5); for a group of 12, one instructor for every six children (1:6); and for a group 14, one instructor for every seven children (1:7).

For three-year olds, a group of 14 children should be supervised by one instructor for every seven children (1:7); a group of 16 children by one instructor for every eight children (1:8); a group of 18 children by one instructor for every nine children (1:9); and a group of 20 children by one instructor for every ten children (1:10). It is recommended that four-year olds have one instructor for every eight children (1:8) in a group of 16; one instructor for every nine children in a group of 18 (1:9); and one instructor for every 10 children in a group of 20 (1:10).

A group of 16 five-year olds should be supervised by one teacher for every eight children (1:8); a group of 18 children by one teacher for every nine children (1:9); and a group of 20 children by one teacher for every ten children (1:10). In the 6-to 8-year old age bracket, a group of 20 children should be supervised by one teacher for every 10 children (1:10); a group of 22 by one teacher for every 11 children (1:11); and a group of 24 children by one instructor for every 12 children (1:12).

For 9-to 12-year olds, 24 children should be supervised by one instructor for every 12 children (1:12) and 28 children by one instructor for every 14 children (1:14).

*Small group sizes and lower staff-child ratios have been found to be strong predictors of compliance with indicators of quality such as positive interactions among staff and children and developmentally appropriate curriculum. Variations in group sizes and ratios are acceptable in cases where the program demonstrates a very high level of compliance with criteria for interactions, curriculum, staff qualifications, health and safety, and physical environment.
Appendix C: Telephone Interview Questions for Child Care Centers

The telephone interview questions provided below can help you to screen the child care centers/homes. There are separate questions for centers and homes. They can help you determine whether the provider's services meet your needs and your child's needs, and also help you reduce the amount of time spent actually visiting the child care providers. Before beginning your telephone interviews, you may want to make a few copies of these forms and have them available when calling the centers/homes on your list.

Name of center:
Phone number:
Name of person answering the questions:
Address:

Tell the person answering the phone your name and the age of the child needing care. Ask if he or she has time to answer a few questions. If not, ask when it would be a good time to call back.

1. Do you have any openings?
If not, do you anticipate having openings in the near future?
2. Is the center licensed?
By whom?
3. Is the center accredited?
If not, does the center plan to pursue accreditation?
4. What is the cost per week? $
What does this include? (e.g., snacks, meals, diapers)
5. Are there any extra costs?
6. Is transportation available?
To and from what locations?
7. What days and hours is care available?
8. Does the center close for vacations, holidays, staff training, or other reasons?
9. Is sick care available?
What are the policies regarding sick children?
10. How many children in each group?
11. How many caregivers for each group?
(See Appendix B for recommended staff/child ratios)
12. What is the total number of caregivers in the center?

6-97 33
13. How many caregivers have left the center during the past year?
14. What are the education and training requirements for the caregivers?
15. What meals are served?
16. Is there a safe outside play area?
17. What are some sample activities that my child would be involved in?
18. How does the center communicate the curriculum to the parents?
19. Is there a weekly and/or daily written plan available to parents?
20. Does the center provide written policies?
21. Are parents permitted to visit their children unannounced at any time during the day?

Add other questions you may have:

If the basic information sounds like it will meet your needs, ask when you can visit. Be sure to make your appointment for a time the children will be present.

Appendix D
Appendix E: On-Site Interview

The on-site visit will allow you to make your final decision. It is best to visit several different child care sites to give you a basis for comparison. Start with the providers who interested you most after your telephone interviews. Be sure to allow enough time for a thorough visit. You may wish to use the following points, as well as the checklist that follows, to observe and evaluate the child care centers/homes. You may want to make a few copies of the checklist and take them along when visiting the centers/homes.

- Schedule a time to visit when the program is "in session" and the children are awake. Avoid the early afternoon hours when most children are napping.
- In two parent homes, both parents should try to visit.
- Avoid asking questions that tell the provider what you want to hear such as "You always hold babies when you feed them, don't you?" Instead, ask open-ended questions such as "How do you feed the babies?"
- If you are able to see children arriving for the day or leaving at the end of the day, you can see how other parents and the staff relate to each other. You will also be able to see how other children feel about coming to the center/home and leaving.

ON-SITE INTERVIEW CHECKLIST

Center/Home Provider: ____________________________ Phone number: ____________________________

Address: ________________________________________

How does it LOOK?

1. Is it clean, colorful, and in good repair?
2. Is there a safe outside place to play?
3. Is it "child proof"?
   Medicines and cleaning supplies are out of reach.
   The fire evacuation plan is satisfactory.
   Electrical outlets are covered or above children's reach.
4. Are there different areas for each activity and are you satisfied with the amount of space for each?
5. Are there at least 35 square feet per child of usable playroom floor space inside and at least 75 square feet per child of outside play space?
6. Are there sufficient number and variety of toys that will appeal to your child and that are in good condition?
7. Are the meals nutritious? Do they include foods your child will eat? (Ask to see a weekly menu.)
How does it SOUND?

1. Do the children's voices sound happy and are they at a reasonable noise level?
2. Are the caregivers' voices calm and caring?
3. Is there children's music or singing at some time during the day?

The STAFF:

1. Are the caregivers actively involved with the children, not talking to each other, doing paperwork, or "chores"?
2. Are good health habits followed (hand washing, diaper changing)?
3. Are the parents encouraged to make unscheduled visits?
4. Do the caregivers establish rules that children can follow?
5. Do the caregivers spend time holding and talking to the children?
6. Are the caregivers warm and friendly toward the children?
7. Do the caregivers treat each child as an individual?
8. Is there a schedule of activities posted?
9. Is the discipline fair and consistent without yelling or hitting?
10. Are the children supervised at all times?
11. Do the caregivers talk to the children frequently, pleasantly, and in a way the children can understand?

The CHILDREN:

1. Do the children seem to be comfortable, happy, and enjoying themselves?
2. Are the children encouraged to be independent, allowed to "do it myself"?
3. Is there a balanced schedule that includes active and quiet times, group and individual times, and indoor and outdoor play?
4. Are the children comforted when needed?
5. Are the children actively engaged in a variety of "hands-on" activities appropriate to their age and interests?
6. Are the children allowed to make choices among a variety of activities and learning opportunities?
How do YOU Feel?

1. Do you feel your child will be well cared for?
2. Do you feel the home/center is safe and cheerful?
3. Do you feel your child can learn here?
4. Would you feel comfortable leaving your child here?
5. Would you feel comfortable calling or visiting unannounced at any time?
6. Would you feel comfortable talking and working with the caregivers?

If, after the visit, you are considering sending your child to this center or home, ask for several references, preferably parents of children already participating. You will want to contact these parents and ask them about their experiences with the center/home.
Appendix F: Federally Sponsored Day Care Centers

Many Federal agencies sponsor on-site child care centers for their employees. Agencies are authorized by 40 U.S.C. 490(b) to provide, free of charge for rent or services, space for child care centers on the conditions that: (1) space is available; (2) child care services will be provided to a group of individuals of whom at least 50 percent of the children enrolled in the center have one parent or legal guardian who is a Federal employee; and (3) priority for available child care services will be given to Federal employees.

Approximately 800 child care centers are sponsored by Department of Defense (DoD), mostly on military installations. Contact DoD's Office of Family Policy, Support, and Services at (703) 697-7191 for information about these centers.

More than 200 child care centers are sponsored by other Federal Government agencies. These centers are listed below alphabetically by State. Those marked with an asterisk are in Federal buildings that are controlled by the General Services Administration (GSA). See Appendix H for a description of GSA's role in Federal child care and a listing of GSA Regional Coordinators.

Appendix G: Financial Assistance for Low-Income Parents--Child Care and Development Block Grant Program

In September 1991, the Department of Health and Human Services' Administration for Children and Families implemented the Child Care and Development Block Grant Program to provide assistance to low-income families in obtaining child care services for their children. The program is designed to help States provide child care services to low-income families by improving the quality and availability of child care services, increasing the availability of early childhood development and before-and after-school care programs, and providing financial assistance to parents.

A key feature of the program is that its emphasis is on the importance of parental choice in child care, and permits parents to choose from a broad range of child care providers, including child care centers, family home providers, relatives, and neighbors. The address and phone number of each State block grant program office is listed below.

developing programs which address the needs of employees with family responsibilities. During the past several years, OPM has expanded and reinforced existing policies designed to assist employees in balancing their work and family responsibilities. These efforts include: developing flexible leave policies for parental and family responsibilities; establishing leave sharing programs for employees with medical emergencies; promoting the use of flexible and compressed work schedules, flexiplace, part-time employment, and job sharing; and conducting a variety of educational activities to encourage agencies to

The Department of Health and Human Services' Administration for Children, Youth, and Families administers two programs relating to child care: Head Start and the Child Care and Development Block Grant Program. Head Start is a nationwide early childhood program for low-income preschool children, designed to provide comprehensive services in preparation for public school. Your local department of social services can provide information about eligibility for Head Start. The Child Care and Development Block Grant program helps low-income families obtain child care services.

Part II.
ELDER CARE

When a parent* suddenly becomes dependent upon an adult child, the problems facing the family can be emotionally draining and complex. Elder care is a broad field that recognizes the role of the adult caregiver as one that provides essential services to an older adult. Often caregivers do not recognize their role as a caregiver nor do they realize that help may be available in the community to assist an older person. This section of the handbook attempts to introduce you to the various issues that face many adults as they age. From choosing a home to dealing with the complexities of social security income, elder care encompasses a wide range of complicated issues. You may not need to consult each topic of this section. Chances are your questions can be answered by consulting one part of the elder care section. However, the information provided here might be useful to you in the future. Many of the problems associated with elder care could be prevented or made easier if parents and children recognize potential difficulties and plan accordingly should any trouble arise.

There are six sections in the handbook. The first section explains the range of resources that are offered in many communities to help older adults function independently. The second section introduces you to the many housing options available to older adults besides living independently in one's own home. Keep in mind that a nursing home is not the only choice and is frequently not a necessity. The housing section is followed by sections on legal, financial, and health considerations. The last section offers information on taking care of the caregiver. Six appendices follow with information including a partial listing of area agencies on aging, a list of State long-term care ombudsman offices, nursing home tips and a checklist, a checklist on selecting a home health care agency, a list of Federal and national organizations that provide elder care information and/or services, and a list of elder care resources. The resource list includes publications noted throughout the text as well as new information not found elsewhere in this handbook.

Please note the Elder Care Locator information below. The Locator is a toll free number operating nationwide for people with elder care problems. It is operated by the National Association of Area Agencies on Aging with funds from the Older Americans Act of 1992 (PL 102-375). The trained elder care operators can determine who you need to contact and give you local referral numbers. If your parents live far away, the Elder Care Locator can give you information for their area.

*For editorial convenience, the phrase "parent-child" is used throughout the text, however, it is recognized that employees may care for an elderly friend or relative.

Section 1: Community Resources

Many people associate the aging process with the need for nursing home care. In fact, most aging adults do not need nursing home care. Instead, many older adults can remain independent but frequently need assistance with various daily living tasks. Communities throughout the United States offer varied services for its aging populations. Check with the social services office of your parent's local government to determine which services are available in his or her area. Utilizing these community resources can help your parent live more comfortably and remain independently in his or her home. In addition, older adults who have chosen an alternative living arrangement, such as congregate housing, can use these services as an additional tool to make daily living simpler. The list below will familiarize you with some of the community resources that may be available in your parent's area and suggest the general availability of these services across the country. Remember, you must contact the local government where your parent resides to determine if these services are available in his or her area. See Appendix F for a list of community resources.

Adult Day Care
Adult day care centers offer a variety of health care and social services for people who need assistance with personal care such as grooming or toiletting, but not around-the-clock care. Round trip transportation may be provided to the center where people may spend a few hours or all day.

Availability - Adult day care center availability varies. The centers may be operated by hospitals, nursing homes, religious organizations or privately owned care centers. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Area Agencies on Aging
The Area Agencies on Aging (AAA) provide access to a variety of services to older persons in communities throughout the United States. These services include: information and referral, homemaker/home health aides, transportation, congregate care and home delivered meals, chores, and other supportive services.

Availability - AAAs are located in every State. The types of services they offer will differ. The Handbook has a partial list of AAA addresses and telephone numbers in Appendix A.

Assistive Devices
Assistive devices are services and products that can be purchased or rented to help people function better at home. These may include devices for persons with hearing and/or visual impairments and those who need help in walking or moving about.

Availability - Assistive devices may be available from medical equipment rental stores or electronic product retail stores. Several States have assistive device distribution programs operated by the State rehabilitation agency for the disabled.

Case Management
Case management is a method of assessing a person's total care needs, arranging for necessary services, and coordinating the delivery. Since care problems rarely occur one at a time and services may be fragmented, this service can be used by caregivers to coordinate a care plan.

Availability - While availability varies, case management services are becoming more widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Friendly Visitors
Friendly visitors are volunteers who regularly visit older persons who may need companionship. They may read, write letters, run local errands, etc. for the older person.

Availability - Friendly visitors are usually provided by a religious or voluntary organization. Contact your parent's church or synagogue or the Visiting Nurses Association to see if the service exists in their community.
Home Adaptation

Home adaptation means making changes to your parent's home to accommodate his or her changed needs. Adaptation may include small changes like installing grab bars, or major changes such as widening doorways for wheelchairs or installing a bathroom on the first floor of the home.

Availability - You need a good contractor and a good idea of what your parent wants done. Seek advice from professionals you know you can rely on, such as an occupational therapist, before hiring anyone to do major jobs.

Home Chore Services

Home chore services offer minor household repairs, household cleaning, and yardwork.

Availability - Home chore services are widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Home-Delivered Meals

Home-delivered meals or "meals-on-wheels" is a service that delivers hot, nutritious meals once or twice a day, usually five days per week. Most home-delivered meal programs can accommodate special diets.

Availability - Home-delivered meals are widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Home Health Care

Home health care covers a wide variety of medical services provided by such professionals as nurses or physical therapists.

Availability - Home health care is widely available. Contact your parent's Visiting Nurses Association or Area Agency on Aging. See Appendix D of this part of the Handbook for a helpful checklist on selecting a home health care agency. See Appendix F for a list of home health care resources.

Home Maintenance and Repair Programs

Home maintenance and repair programs (usually sponsored by nonprofit organizations) provide home maintenance, home repairs, and help with emergencies such as frozen pipes. No major improvements or cosmetic changes are included. Some programs will help you work with contractors.

Availability - These programs are widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Homemaker Services

Homemaker services include assistance with grooming and dressing, and help with meal preparation, food shopping, or light housekeeping.

Availability - Homemaker services are widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Hospice Care

Hospice is a special kind of care for terminally ill people and their families. It does not focus on recovery through medical treatment, but instead helps people cope with the physical and emotional pain of dying from a clearly terminal illness. Hospice care may be given at home or in a hospice facility, and may be provided by or supplemented by trained volunteers. Insurance coverage for hospice care varies. Medicare will provide benefits to patients who are diagnosed as being terminally ill, but patients receiving hospice benefits waive their regular Medicare coverage while they are under hospice care.

Availability - Availability varies from State to State. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information. You can also contact your parent's State hospice or home care association, the Foundation for Hospice and Homecare (202) 547-6586, or the Hospice Association of America (202) 546-4759.

Nutrition Services

Nutrition services provide people with inexpensive, nutritious meals in group settings such as senior centers, churches, synagogues, or senior housing. Nutrition sites may provide transportation.

Availability - Nutrition services are widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging or senior center for information.
Personal Emergency Response Systems (PERS)
PERS are emergency alert button devices that are placed in the home and can be pressed to summon help from emergency response centers such as hospitals or 800 numbers.

Availability - Approximately ten national companies manufacture PERS. They may not be readily available in all areas.

Respite Care
Respite care provides short-term relief to people who care for an older person at home. The respite can be for a few hours or several days. It may be provided at home, at adult day care centers, or at hospitals overnight.

Availability - Respite care services are widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Senior Centers
Senior centers offer older people an opportunity to socialize and a place to meet. They offer a wide variety of social, educational, and recreational programs. Some senior centers provide transportation services.

Availability - Senior centers are widely available. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging for information.

Telephone Reassurance
Telephone reassurance is offered by volunteers who arrange to talk to older persons daily to ensure that "all is well." This service is especially helpful to people who live alone.

Availability - Availability varies in communities. Contact your parent's Area Agency on Aging, church or synagogue, or Visiting Nurses Association.

Section 2: Housing Options

Many people assume that a nursing home is the only option for older adults who can no longer live alone in their own homes. However, there are many housing alternatives. The information listed below will familiarize you with some of these options. The questions that follow each section suggest what you and/or your parent might consider before selecting an alternative living arrangement.

Having a Parent Move in With You
For many people, having a parent move in with them is the best choice when living alone is no longer possible for the older person. For other people, it can be a difficult choice (sometimes the poorest of the available options). If you are considering such an arrangement, you need to talk seriously with your immediate family and your parents to understand how each one of them feels. You also need to be sure to express all your feelings about the situation. Talk with friends whose parents live with them and try to understand what it's like for them. Think through the questions listed below for both parents and children and discuss the issues together before agreeing to this living arrangement.

Questions for the Adult Child
- Do you want your parent to move in? Have you been honest in expressing your feelings about it?
- If you don't want your mother or father to move in, but it must happen anyway, will you be able to handle it?
- How much time can you spend with your parent? Have you explained what your weeks and weekends are like?
- Do you expect your parent to do chores around the house? Is this a reasonable expectation? Have you talked to your parent about what to expect and why?
- Can you afford it?
- Are you aware of local services that could help you through difficult situations?

Questions for the Parent
- Does your son or daughter want you to move in? If not, and you move in anyway, will the emotional strain be too much on you?
- How will living expenses be shared?
- What will you use for transportation? Will you have easy access to shopping, a place of worship, friends, and other interests of your own?
- Do you have friends in the area where your children live? Are there people close by with whom you can create friendships?
- Will you be able to accommodate your child's lifestyle?
- Will you be able to live with your children's children?
- Can your children afford to have you live with them?
- How will your presence affect family relationships?
- How much time will you expect your child to spend with you?

Foster Care
Foster care is a social service that places an older person who is in need of a modest amount of daily assistance into a warm home environment. The costs vary, and may be covered by the State social services program. The older person may be expected to contribute to the stipend paid to the family providing the foster care. The availability of this program is limited. Contact your Area Agency on Aging for more information. (See Appendix A).

Home Sharing
As an alternative to moving into your home, your parent may want to consider sharing their home with others, moving into someone else's home, or finding a new house that can accommodate them and several other people of your choice. Shared households can be arranged either by sharing expenses or by exchanging services or rent. For example, a homebound homeowner... might prefer having someone do housework, shopping, yardwork, or other errands in exchange for free lodging. This sort of arrangement should be put in writing, so there are no misunderstandings later.

Consider these issues:

- Do local zoning laws in your parent's community permit two or more unrelated people to share a house? Check with your local zoning or planning board.
- Will your parents want to share their home or move to share another's home?
- How will your parent's personality fit with a potential housemate's?
- How will sharing affect your parent's finances?
- How will your parent resolve differences that arise?
- What will new income do to your parent's eligibility for certain public benefits like Supplemental Security Income and Food Stamps?
- What will your parent's responsibility be if his or her housemate becomes ill?

Adding an Accessory Apartment
Another way your parent can remain at home is to add a separate, self-contained apartment unit to his or her house, called an accessory apartment. This allows your parent to stay in his or her house but not be alone, and the rental income will provide him or her with additional living resources. Creating a new kitchen, bath and access are usually the most expensive changes to be made; however, your parent's home may only require minor changes to accommodate an accessory unit.

Before your parent starts building, you might consider:

- Do zoning laws allow accessary apartments? Check with your parent's local zoning or planning board before making plans.
- Will the cost of the renovation, increased utility bills, higher taxes, and insurance premiums be covered in the rent your parent receives?
- Will the benefit of having someone nearby be worth the expenses?
- Will your parent expect his or her tenant to be a companion or will your parent have a landlord/tenant relationship?
- Is sufficient parking available?
- How will your parent divide costs like taxes and utilities between himself or herself and the renter?
- Will your parent be able to manage the responsibilities of a landlord?
- Will your parent be able to find tenants?

Before your parent searches for a tenant, consider whether he or she wants a companion, someone who provides home services, or just a renter. If your parent needs help around the house, some tenants may be willing to exchange services for rent. Any arrangement for exchange of services in lieu of rent should be put in writing as part of the rental agreement.

ECHO Housing
If you and your parent don't wish to live together, having your parent live in a cottage on your property might be a workable alternative. Elder Cottage Housing Opportunity (ECHO for short) units are small, self-contained, portable housing units that can be placed in the back or side yard of a single family house. They were first manufactured in Australia to enable parents to remain near their adult children and families. ECHO units provide closeness, while retaining privacy for both parties. The cost of ECHO housing is less than a new home. For example, companies in California and Pennsylvania offer completely installed one-bedroom units with more than 500 square feet of living space for around $25,000.

Consider these issues:

- Do zoning laws restrict this type of structure? Check with your local zoning or planning board.
- Is there adequate yard space for both structures?
- What will the local tax treatment be? Will it add to the value of your property?
- Are utility hook-ups available?

Board and Care Homes
Board and care homes go by many names (including personal care homes, residential care facilities, assisted living, and domiciliary care). In exchange for rent, generally they provide room, meals, laundry and housekeeping, and regular contact with staff to ensure that "all is well." The daily contact with staff is what distinguishes "board and care" homes from the more familiar boarding houses. Your parent would share this home, of course, with a number of other residents.
Visit the home with your parent before a decision is made. Look at the private room your parent may occupy. Ask lots of questions about the services and evaluate the staff. Ask for references and check the home's record with the local or State licensing agency.

Consider these issues:

- Will your parent have privacy and independence?
- Is common space available?
- How much will it cost, including add-ons to the rent?
- Is it near public transportation, places of worship, and shopping?
- Can your parent's special dietary needs be met?
- Does the home comply with local licensing, fire, and zoning laws? Is it licensed by the State?
- What are the arrangements for sharing bathrooms?
- Will your parent have to climb stairs?
- Are there security locks on each room?
- Will your parent have access to a telephone?
- Are pets allowed? Who will care for them?

Congregate Housing

Congregate housing is usually an apartment complex that provides each tenant a full apartment, serves meals in a central dining room, and provides housekeeping services. It is different from board and care homes because the individual units include kitchens and because it provides a professional staff that may include social workers, counselors, or nutritionists.

Today, most congregate housing facilities are sponsored by non-profit agencies and range in size from 35 to 300 living units. You may find congregate housing facilities listed under "Retirement Communities" in your local telephone directory.

The rents vary, and Federal subsidies often help cover a portion of rental fees.

Consider these issues:

- Is transportation to stores, places of worship, and other services available?
- Can the facility accommodate your parent's special dietary needs?
- Is there adequate security for your parent's personal belongings?

- What in-house services are available? (Look for services such as occupational and physical therapy, counseling, recreational and social activities, a library, and daily telephone monitoring.)
- Do services like physical therapy cost extra? Be sure to check for all costs in advance.
- What are the policies on bringing personal furniture?
- Are pets allowed?
- How does your parent feel about the overall atmosphere of the facility?

"Life Care" or Continuing Care Retirement Communities (CCRCs)

Continuing care communities offer the benefit of independent living in apartments and houses, but with health care services and a nursing facility on the premises. Payment for nursing care and many other services is sometimes made in advance.

The cost of a continuing care community can be high. The entrance fee can range from $50,000 to $250,000 (which may or may not be refundable) and you must also pay monthly fees (that can increase while you are a resident).

The difference between a continuing care community and board and care homes or congregate housing is that continuing care communities provide a commitment to take care of residents regardless of any changes in their health, for as long as a person resides in the community.

If your parent is considering a move to a continuing care community, BE CAUTIOUS. Some continuing care communities have financial problems. You may wish to review the facility's financial statement with an attorney or accountant and note its cash reserves and its policy for using them. Check with the local or State Long-Term Care Ombudsman and the Better Business Bureau or the Consumer Protection Office in the CCRC's locality to be sure it has not generated complaints of any kind.

Consider these issues:

- How complete is the nursing facility? What services does it provide?
- What medical costs does the contract cover?
What is the policy for transferring residents between apartments and the nursing facility?
Is the management open and responsive to resident concerns?
Do the fees cover all of your parent's costs?
Does your parent have to pay extra for anything (such as laundry)?
Are places of worship nearby?
Is transportation to needed services, like grocery stores, available?
Is there access to a telephone?
What is the refund policy for deposits and entrance fees? How is the amount of the refund calculated? When is your parent entitled to receive a refund?

Nursing Homes

Nursing homes are for people who need extensive and extended health or personal care. Many people live in nursing homes unnecessarily because they thought they had no other alternatives. Nursing homes are intended only for those who are seriously ill—not for people who feel they have no other options.

There are two levels of care:

- Skilled Nursing—is for persons who need intensive care, 24 hour-a-day supervision, and treatment by a registered nurse under the direction of a physician.
- Nursing Facility—is for persons who need 24 hour-a-day supervision under the direction of a registered nurse and a physician.

The level of care required is determined by a person's physician. In addition, many States require and conduct pre-screening of potential nursing home residents to determine the level of care needed. Your parent's local social service agency or the admissions person at any nursing home can direct you to the agency that makes this determination.

There are about 20,000 nursing homes in the United States, serving about 5% of the older population. The chances are about one in four that an individual will need to reside in a nursing home at some time in his or her life. The cost for staying one year in a nursing home generally ranges between $20,000 and $48,000. Medicare and private medigap insurance plans reimburse very little of the cost. An extended stay in a nursing home can wipe out a family's savings, so advance planning for this eventuality is critical. Only when a nursing home patient becomes impoverished does Medicaid begin to pay the cost of nursing home care.

Before entering a nursing home, ask yourself:

- Have you explored thoroughly with your parent the home and community-based options described in this book?
- How will your parent meet the expenses?
- How will your parent cope with the institutional atmosphere? The loss of independence?
- Is the home convenient for visiting by family and friends?
- Is the home clean and odor free?
- Can the home ensure the security of your parent's possessions?
- What levels of care are available? Are they appropriate to your parent's needs?

Ombudsman

To help you in selecting the right nursing home for your parent, consider contacting the local ombudsman. The ombudsman program is a significant part of the nursing home system. Federal law requires each State Agency on Aging to have an Office of the Long-Term Care Ombudsman, and more than 500 local ombudsman programs now exist nationwide.

These offices provide help and information to older Americans, their families, and friends regarding long-term care facilities. The local ombudsman also can help to ensure that your parent receives good care throughout his or her stay. Keep in mind that the ombudsman cannot advise you on one particular nursing home, but will supply current information regarding nursing homes near you or your parent.

Ombudsman functions include:

- Visiting nursing homes on a regular basis;
- Receiving and investigating complaints made by or on behalf of nursing home residents and working to resolve the problems;
- Referring unresolved problems or findings of serious violations of standards in a nursing home facility to State Health Departments for action; and
Providing information on licensed long-term care facilities in the State or local area including the number and nature of complaints against a facility, the results and conclusions of the investigation into these complaints, and advice on what to look for as tell-tale signs of good care in facilities.

See Appendix B for a list of State long-term care ombudsman offices.

See Appendix C for a list of helpful tips and a checklist that can be used when you visit nursing homes.

Nursing Home Telephone Interview

Once you identify what you want and need in a home, simply telephoning some of the nursing homes on your list may eliminate the need to visit them. Some of the key questions that you may ask over the phone to facilities are:

- Is the nursing home certified for participation in the Medicare or Medicaid programs?
- What are the facility's admissions requirements for residents?
- What is the "typical profile" of a resident in the facility? For example, if a family member requires temporary rehabilitation services and the nursing home specializes in Alzheimer's disease care, it's probably not a good match.
- Does the nursing home require that a resident sign over personal property or real estate in exchange for care?
- Does the facility have vacancies, or is there a waiting list?

People To Talk To

- Your family (or a trusted advisor) about their reactions to the plans your parent is making;
- At least one person who lives in the type of facility your parent is contemplating;
- The Better Business Bureau and Consumer Protection Office in the area where the facility or service is located, to check on its reputation;
- An attorney if your parent will be required to sign a contract; and
- State and local Long-Term Care Ombudsman Programs that are set up to investigate complaints and mediate disputes between residents and/or their families and nursing home facilities. You can find them through your State Agency on Aging.

Section 3: Legal Considerations

When an aging family member suddenly needs help with daily living tasks or must enter a nursing home, the emotions of such a change can interfere with a family's ability to make decisions. The decision making process can seem overwhelming, particularly if legal concerns are involved. While dealing with your parent's legal concerns may seem difficult, you need not feel overburdened. The best defense against confusion and uncertainty in coping with legal issues is to prepare ahead for change. The information in this section offers some suggestions for preparing you and your parents for the day they may need your assistance in handling their legal affairs. "Getting Your Affairs in Order" provides an easy process for aging parents to organize their legal affairs should they need assistance later on. The second part defines legal terms that relate to the aging field. Regardless of your circumstances, everyone should read this section and become familiar with the legal issues that affect many aging adults and their children.

GETTING YOUR AFFAIRS IN ORDER

Relatives and friends sometimes must help older people manage their legal or financial affairs temporarily or even gradually assume these responsibilities. Often the person who provides care has little knowledge of vital information and records. If papers are in order, the task is much simpler.

Although each situation is different, the following suggestions can help most people begin creating a financial and personal records file.

Personal Records File
A personal records file should include the following information:

- Full legal name;
- Social Security number;
- Legal residence;
- Date and place of birth;
- Names and addresses of spouse and children (or location of death certificates if any are deceased);
- Location of will or trust;
- Location of birth certificate and certificates of marriage, divorce, and citizenship;
- List of employers and dates of employment;
- Education and military records;
- Religious affiliation, name of church or synagogue, and names of clergy (if desired);
- Memberships in organizations and awards received;
- Names and addresses of close friends, relatives, doctors, and lawyers or financial advisors; and
- Requests, preferences, or prearrangement for burial.

A family member or friend should know the location of this personal records file and the location of all important papers and documents, although it is not necessary to reveal the contents of wills or trusts.

Financial Records File
In making a financial records file, list information about insurance policies, bank accounts, deeds, investments, and other valuables, using this outline:

- Sources of income and assets (pension funds, interest income, etc.);
- Social Security and Medicare information;
- Investment income (stocks, bonds, property);
- Insurance information (life, health, and property), with policy numbers;
- Bank accounts (checking, savings, and credit union);
- Location of safe deposit boxes;
- Copy of most recent income tax return;
- Liabilities—what is owed to whom and when payments are due;
- Mortgages and debts—how and when paid;
- Credit card and charge account names and numbers;
- Property taxes; and
- Location of personal items such as jewelry or family treasures.
Having this information available can help you or a family member plan for any change in later years—retirements, a move, a death in your family—and can help you or a family member make wise decisions.

LEGAL DEFINITIONS
Many communities offer legal services. For those elderly who are unable to manage their own affairs appropriately, legal and/or protective services may be needed. Such services are designed to safeguard the rights and interests of older persons, to protect them from harm, to protect the property of older persons, and to provide advice and counsel to older persons and their families in dealing with financial and business concerns. Older persons and their families should become familiar with the following legal terms.

Power of Attorney
This is a legal device which permits one individual (the Principal) to give to another person (the attorney-in-fact) the authority to act on his or her behalf. The person with power of attorney is then authorized to handle banking and real estate, pay bills, incur expenses and handle a wide variety of legal affairs for a specific period of time. This can continue indefinitely as long as the person granting power of attorney remains competent and is capable of granting power of attorney. This kind of power of attorney expires when the Principal becomes comatose, mentally incompetent, or dies.

Durable Power of Attorney
Most people feel more secure knowing that, in the event of incapacity, a trusted person and not the courts will make decisions and carry out their wishes. A Durable Power of Attorney gives a specified person this right despite the physical or mental incompetence of the elder. It terminates only upon the death of the grantor (Principal) or if revoked by a legally appointed guardian or by the grantor if he or she remains competent.

Guardianships or Conservatorships
A guardianship or conservatorship, arranged through an attorney, blocks a person from acting on his or her own behalf. This arrangement is useful when a person is incapable of managing financial and/or personal affairs, or does not know that he or she is managing poorly and this incapability poses a major threat to his or her well-being. All guardianships must be approved by a court and actions taken by a guardian are overseen by the court.

Social Security Representative
In the event an elder cannot sign a Social Security check, the Social Security office will appoint a person, institution, or community association as representative payee. The name on the Social Security check is changed from the direct beneficiary's to the payee's, and the payee is then responsible for distributing the money on behalf of the beneficiary. Social Security checks can also be directly deposited in most situations.

Making a Will
A will is a legal declaration of how the deceased wants his or her money, property, and other possessions disposed of after death. A will also can be used to determine guardianship of minor children and to set up trusts for heirs who may have an inadequate knowledge of how to manage inherited money or property.

Without a doubt, every person with property of any value should have a will. However, many people delay thinking about death and then die intestate, that is, the State distributes their estate according to the laws of the State. When drawing up a will, an individual should make a list of his or her resources and clarify and write down his or her wishes. The elder must choose an executor and witness to the will. The elder also has the responsibility to review it periodically, to keep it up-to-date, and to see that it is stored in a safe place. You should know where your elder's will is kept.

Living Wills
A living will is a document that allows people to state, while they are still able, their wishes regarding the use of extraordinary measures or procedures to keep them alive when it is evident that they are dying. The living will may also appoint someone else (a relative, friend or attorney) to direct health care if the person signing the living will is unable to do so.

In most cases, people who sign living wills want to be certain that they will not receive unwanted or unwarranted treatment if death is near and they have no reasonable expectation of recovering. Others may want to make clear that they want to be at home when death is imminent, or that they want to donate their organs after death. Currently, 38 States and the District of Columbia have recognized the Living Will as legally binding under most circumstances.

Legal Aid

There are a few programs that will provide low-cost legal services to elders. Legal aid offices are set up to provide low income individuals with legal services if they meet eligibility guidelines. Elders can sometimes receive help with government forms, tax forms, wills, etc., from retired attorneys, volunteers from the Bar Association or paralegals who are supervised by an attorney. Some States have toll free telephone numbers that elders can call and talk with an attorney. Contact your local AAA or senior center for further information on these programs.

Section 4: Financial Considerations

The information in this section briefly discusses financial considerations that you and your parent may wish to consider. The information is in no way intended as financial advice nor as a comprehensive overview of older adult financial concerns. Instead, this section is intended to introduce you to or remind you of some common financial topics that concern older adults.

Most of the information concerns Social Security income. To receive additional information on any topics listed below contact the Social Security Administration. The Social Security Administration can answer many questions about the Social Security system and can send you free informative brochures on its programs. Refer to the resources listed at the end of the Social Security and health insurance sections for a partial listing of these publications.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Security--The General Idea
The basic idea behind Social Security is a simple one. An individual pays taxes to the system during his or her working years, and the individual and members of his or her family receive monthly benefits when he or she retires or becomes disabled. Or, survivors collect benefits when an individual dies.

Here's An Important Point: Social Security is not intended to be an individual's only source of income. Instead, it is meant to be used to supplement the pensions, insurance, savings, and other investments accumulated during the working years.

There are three types of Social Security benefits:
1- Retirement Benefits provide retirement income to retired workers and their families.
2- Survivors Benefits provide income security to family members upon the death of a breadwinner.
3- Disability Benefits provide protection against the loss of family income due to the disability of a breadwinner.

What is Supplement Security Income?
SSI is short for Supplemental Security Income. It pays monthly checks to people who are 65 or older or disabled, or blind and who have low incomes and few assets. SSI isn't just for adults. Monthly checks can go to disabled and blind children, too. People who get SSI usually get food stamps and Medicaid, too.

The amount of SSI money your parent receives depends on where your parent lives. The basic SSI check is the same nationwide. However, many States add money to the basic check. Call the Social Security Administration's toll free number - 1-800-772-1213 - to find out the amounts for your parent's State.

Signing Up
For disability, survivors, and SSI benefits, your parent should apply as soon as he or she is eligible. When signing up for retirement, Social Security asks that an individual do so about three months before he or she wants the benefits to start.

When Individuals Need Help Handling Their Benefits
Sometimes Social Security or SSI recipients are not able to handle their own financial affairs. In those cases, the Social Security Administration turns to a relative, a friend, or another interested party to handle a person's Social Security matters. This person becomes the "representative payee." All Social Security or SSI benefits due are made payable in the payee's name on behalf of the beneficiary. Contact the Social Security Administration for more information.

Section 5: Health Insurance

The information listed below briefly describes Government funded health insurance programs for older adults. To receive further information on any of these programs contact the Social Security Administration toll free at 1-800-772-1213 or contact your local Social Security office.

Medicare
Medicare is our country's health insurance program for people 65 or older, certain disabled people under 65, and people of any age who have permanent kidney failure. It provides basic protection against the cost of health care, but it doesn't cover all medical expenses.

Medicare has two parts: Hospital Insurance (Part A) and Medical Insurance (Part B). Hospital Insurance helps pay for inpatient hospital care, skilled nursing facility care, home health care, and hospice care. It is paid for by the payroll tax Federal Insurance Contribution Act (FICA) that also pays for Social Security. Medical Insurance helps pay for doctors' services, outpatient hospital services, ambulance services, diagnostic tests, therapies, durable medical equipment, medical supplies, and prosthetic devices. Medical Insurance is financed by monthly premiums paid by people who choose to enroll.

Medicaid
Many people think that Medicaid and Medicare are two different names for the same program. But actually, Medicaid is a State-run program designed primarily to help the elderly and others with low income and little or no resources. Each State has its own rules about who is eligible and what is covered under Medicaid. However, all States cover basic inpatient and outpatient medical services, and various additional services may be provided at the option of the individual States.

QMB
If your parent gets Medicare, and has little income or resources, he or she may be eligible for the "Qualified Medicare Beneficiary" -- or QMB -- Program. If your parent qualifies, the State he or she lives in will pay their Medicare premiums, deductibles, and coinsurance. If you think your parent may qualify, contact his or her State or local medical assistance (Medicaid) agency, social services office, or welfare office for information.

Medigap
Medicare provides basic health care coverage, but it doesn't pay all medical expenses, and it doesn't pay for most long-term care. For this reason, many private companies sell insurance to fill the gaps in Medicare coverage. This kind of insurance is often called "Medigap" for short. Contact the Health Care Financing Administration's Medigap Hotline toll free at 1-800-638-6833 for more information on Medigap.

Section 6: Caregivers

Sometimes it is difficult for a caregiver to remember that he or she has needs that should be met. Often, a caregiver does not even realize that he or she is a caregiver. Ask yourself the following questions:

- Am I concerned about the safety or welfare of an aging relative or friend?
- Do I help an older person from time to time with household tasks such as grocery shopping, paying bills, or house cleaning?
- Am I providing personal care -- bathing, feeding, grooming -- to an older adult who needs assistance in these areas?

If you answered YES to any of these questions, you are a caregiver. Caregiver is a term describing a person who is concerned about or provides assistance to another because of physical or mental limitations. A caregiver can help anyone -- a child, a disabled person, or an aging individual. However, this handbook is intended to help people like yourself, caregivers of older adults.

Your agency's Employee Assistance Program (EAP) may be helpful in assisting you with problems or concerns you may be experiencing as a caregiver. An EAP counselor also can direct you to the appropriate resources that will help your parent. In addition to the listings in this book, there are many other resources available to help caregivers do their jobs. If you would like to receive a fact sheet on caregiving, a pamphlet titled "Caregiving: 1st Line of Defense," or a resource list of national organizations that offer free or low-cost resources, contact the Older Women's League (OWL) at 1-800-TAKE OWL from 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. (eastern standard time). The OWL is a non-profit organization that seeks to educate the public about issues affecting middle-aged and older women.

This section of the book was written with the assistance of the Older Women's League.

Area Agencies on Aging (Partial Listing)

Area Agencies on Aging (AAA) are located in approximately 300 communities throughout the United States and are there to assist you in obtaining services for your elderly parent or relative. Among the variety of questions the AAA staff can answer for you are:

- What types of day care or nursing care are available in my parent's community?
- How can I arrange to have meals delivered to my parent's home?
- Can transportation be provided to bring my parent to doctor appointments?
- How can I find someone to help my parent with household chores and home maintenance?
- Where can my parent get financial counseling?
- Where can my parent get legal counseling?
- How can I arrange for my parent's Social Security check to be deposited directly into his or her checking account?
- How can I learn whether my parent is covered by Medicaid and what types of services are covered?

To keep the handbook to a manageable size, we have listed only those AAAs in metropolitan areas which have more than one thousand Federal employees. They are listed alphabetically by State. If the AAA in your parent's community is not listed in this directory, you can phone the Eldercare Locator toll free at 1-800-677-1116, the State AAA office, or the AAA in your own local community to obtain the phone number of the AAA in your parent's community.

Appendix C: Nursing Home Tips and Checklist

Keep these suggestions in mind when visiting a nursing home:

- Visit a nursing home more than once and during different times of the day.
- Make an appointment to meet with the administrator or admissions director for your first visit and ask for a guided tour of the facility.
- Make sure that you are given the opportunity to talk to residents and observe conditions in the nursing home by yourself.
- Meet with members of the nursing home family council, which is composed of family members of the facility's residents. If the nursing home doesn't have a family council, ask to speak with family members of residents of the facility.
- Review the facility's fire safety training program.

Nursing Home Checklist

When you visit a nursing home, you should carry this checklist with you. It will help you to compare one facility with another, but remember to compare facilities certified in the same category; for example, a skilled nursing facility with another skilled nursing home. Because nursing homes may be licensed in more than one category, always compare similar types of service among facilities.

Appendix E: Federal and National Elder Care Organizations

A number of Federal and national organizations can provide you with information about elder care issues such as housing, health care, and legal matters. Some of those organizations are listed below; however, this is not an exhaustive list. Each organization's mission, address, and telephone number is included. Many of the organizations offer free publications that address numerous aging issues. There may be a charge for some materials. Contact the organizations to obtain a list of available publications.

FEDERAL ORGANIZATIONS

 Administration On Aging
 U.S. Department of Health and Human Services
 330 Independence Avenue, SW.
 Washington, DC 20201
 (202) 619-0641

The Administration on Aging (AoA) is the focal point and advocacy agency for older persons and their concerns at the Federal level. It develops Federal Government policy and programs and coordinates community services for older people. AoA assists State and Area Agencies on Aging in developing community services to meet the social and human service needs of older persons.

Health Care Financing Administration
 7500 Security Boulevard
 Baltimore, MD 21244-1850
 (410) 786-3000
 Medigap Hotline: Toll Free 1-800-638-6833

The Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) coordinates the Federal Government's participation in Medicare and Medicaid. HCFA also sponsors health care quality assurance programs such as the Medigap Hotline. The Medigap Hotline answers questions about Medigap insurance (health insurance to supplement Medicare). It also takes reports of suspected Medigap and Medicare fraud.

National Institute on Aging
 Department of Health and Human Services
 Building 31, Room 5C27
 31 Center Dr. MSC2292
 Bethesda, MD 20892-2292
 (301) 496-1752
 Publication Service:
 Toll Free 1-800-222-2225

The National Institute on Aging (NIA), part of the National Institutes of Health, is the Federal Government's principal agency for conducting and supporting biomedical, social, and behavioral research related to aging processes and the diseases and special problems of older people. The Public Information Office prepares and distributes information about issues of interest to older people.

Social Security Administration
 Office of Public Inquiries
 6401 Security Boulevard
 Baltimore, MD 21235
 (410) 965-1234
 Information Service:
 Toll Free 1-800-772-1213

The Social Security Administration is the Federal Government agency responsible for the Social Security retirement, survivors, and disability insurance program, as well as the Supplemental Security Income program. Social Security Administration offices, which are located in every State, are listed in the telephone directory under "Social Security Administration" or "U.S. Government." A toll free service is also available throughout the Nation.
NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Alzheimer's Association
Suite 1000
919 North Michigan Avenue
Chicago, IL 60611
(312) 335-8700
Information and Referral:
Toll Free 1-800-272-3900

The Alzheimer's Association is a voluntary organization that sponsors public education programs and offers supportive services to patients and families who are coping with Alzheimer's disease (AD). A 24-hour toll free hotline provides information about AD and links families with nearby chapters, which are familiar with community resources and can offer practical suggestions for daily living.

American Association of Homes for the Aging
Suite 500
901 E Street, NW.
Washington, DC 20004-2037
(202) 783-2242

The American Association of Homes for the Aging (AAHA) is the national nonprofit organization representing more than 4,500 not-for-profit nursing homes, continuing care retirement communities, senior housing facilities, and community service agencies for the elderly. AAHA is headquartered in Washington, DC, with regional offices in Albany, Orlando, Chicago, and Denver.

American Association of Retired Persons
601 E Street, NW.
Washington, DC 20049
(202) 434-AARP

The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) is a nonprofit membership organization of persons 50 and older dedicated to addressing their needs and interests. AARP seeks through education, advocacy, and service to enhance the quality of life for all by helping older persons achieve lives of independence, dignity, and purpose.

WORK AND FAMILY
PROGRAMS

Section 1:
OFFICE OF PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT’S (OPM)
WORK AND FAMILY PROGRAM CENTER

The Work and Family Program Center (Center) provides leadership in developing work and family policies, practices, guidance, information, and technical assistance to agencies in developing comprehensive family-friendly programs. To help employees with responsibilities for children and elderly relatives, the Center encourages the use of flexible work schedules and sites; leave programs (leave sharing, leave banks, leave for medical conditions and family responsibilities); part-time employment and job sharing; telecommuting; Employee Assistance Programs; on-site child development centers; and information and referral services. The Center works with the General Service Administration’s (GSA) Office of Workplace Initiatives to provide information about Federal child care center programs and telecommuting.

On July 11, 1994, President Clinton issued a memorandum challenging Federal agencies to create a “family-friendly” model workplace by expanding work arrangements, including job sharing and part-time employment, alternative work schedules and telecommuting. On June 21, 1996, President Clinton reaffirmed his strong commitment to help families in the Federal workplace by issuing another memorandum to executive departments and agencies directing them to review their family-friendly programs, expand such programs to the extent feasible, and report on their progress. Both memoranda direct OPM to work with agencies to create a family friendly work place culture. To help agencies, managers, and employees balance work and personal life demands, the Center offers the following resources/programs, workshops and publications.

Resources/Programs

♦ Work and Family Speakers Bureau - The Bureau lists speakers, who at no cost, can address topics such as Alzheimer’s disease and related disorders, dependent care resource and referral services, child and adult day care centers, child care financial assistance, long-term care for older people, single parenting, medicare and medicaid, latchkey children, selecting quality day care, child safety, etc. The list is an excellent source for identifying lunch-time, panel, and keynote speakers on work and family program topics.

♦ Award for Outstanding Work and Family Programs - The OPM Director’s Award recognizes those Federal organizations that are providing innovative and effective work and family programs. It is intended to encourage the establishment and improvement of effective work and family programs throughout the Government and to publicize exemplary work and family programs as models for other Federal agencies.
Interagency Adult Dependent Care Working Group - This group promotes and provides awareness of Federal elder care programs and activities that help employees care for an older relative or friend. The working group meets bi-monthly to exchange ideas, share information, and hear guest presentations on elder care issues. Information and knowledge presented at these meetings can be replicated by agencies to address and incorporate elder care programs and activities for their employees.

Child Support Enforcement Activities - The Center and the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Office of Child Support Enforcement (OSCE) conduct seminars, distribute child support information kits, and promote awareness of issues and resources to help Federally-employed custodial parents who are having difficulty collecting child support payments and to ensure that Federal employees meet their child support responsibilities. The Center and OCSE work collaboratively in support of Executive Order 12953 (February 1995) which calls for the Federal Government to become a model employer in the enforcement of child support.

Work and Family Clearinghouse - The Clearinghouse contains current work and family research studies, examples of work and family programs and survey instruments, and child and elder care resource and referral information. Agencies may phone or visit the Center to obtain information from the Clearinghouse.

Workshops

Balancing Work and Family Lives - This workshop provides a general overview of such programs as alternative work schedules, leave, telecommuting, part-time employment and job sharing, and various child and elder care resources that help employers understand the changing workforce demographics and the need for work and family programs.

Working-at-Home or at an Alternative Work-site - This workshop gives an overview of Federal telecommuting initiatives, benefits, pitfalls, and tools available to help build and support agency programs.

Publications

A Study of the Work and Family Needs of the Federal Workforce (April 1992) - A report to the U.S. Congress that assesses the use of work and family flexibilities and discusses measurements and recommendations to increase the effectiveness of work and family programs.

The Work and Family Kit * (March 1995) - The Kit is a comprehensive tool that provides agencies and employees with resource information and guidance on family-friendly programs, practices, policies and cost-neutral measures to help employees balance work and family needs. The Kit outlines the key components of a successful agency work and family program and gives specific “how-to” guidance that agencies might undertake to get programs such as alternative work schedules, part-time employment, job sharing, telecommuting, leave programs and child and elder care resources and referral information off and running.

The Handbook of Child and Elder Care Resources * - The Handbook provides employees, managers, and employee assistance program counselors with information about organizations and agencies across the country that can help employees with their dependent care needs. The Handbook also includes sections on child care, elder care, and personnel flexibilities that can help employees balance work and family demands.

Balancing Work and Family Demands: The Federal Response - A Report to the President* (January 1995) - A report to the President on the progress made to help all employees meet their work and family responsibilities. The report was in response to the President's July 1, 1994 directive to expand family-friendly work arrangements and the U.S. Department of Labor “Working Women Count” Survey.
Balancing Work and Family Demands Through Telecommuting* (September 1995) - The booklet outlines the key elements that agencies, managers, and employees need to consider when establishing and/or participating in a telecommuting program. Some topics covered include: reasons that agencies offer telecommuting, the basic components of a telecommuting program, and personnel policies and issues that apply to telecommuting employees. The booklet also provides a list of resources, a sample agreement between an agency and a telecommuter, and answers to frequently asked questions about telecommuting.

Balancing Work and Family Demands Through Part-Time Employment and Job Sharing* (September 1995) - The booklet outlines and provides tips on how to successfully manage and/or participate in part-time employment and job sharing. Some topics covered include: defining part-time employment and job-sharing; benefits for permanent part-time employees such as leave, retirement, health and life insurance; and how a reduced schedule affects personnel issues such as pay, adverse actions/grievances, service credit and reduction in force.

Work and Family Personnel Flexibilities Fact Sheets - A series of fact sheets are available on topics, such as Alternative Work Schedules (AWS), Federal Employees Family-Friendly Leave Act and Sick Leave Recredit, Leave for Adoption and Bone-Marrow or Organ Donation, Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), Federal Leave Sharing Programs, Telecommuting, Part-time Employment and Job Sharing, and OPM’s Work and Family Program Center and Publications. These fact sheets are available at the Center or through OPM’s FedFax document information system. FedFax is an on-line system available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week service that provides information to callers instantly by using a touch-tone telephone or fax machine handset and dialing any one of the numbers listed below which is nearest to you.

How to Do a Fair - A Guide to Successfully Putting on a Child or Elder Care Fair - The Guide provides step-by-step instructions, including sample letters and forms, to assist agencies in conducting a successful child and/or elder care fair.

Personnel Research Bibliography on Workplace Practices and Programs (July 1996) - This bibliography presents public and private research on work place practices and programs that include alternative/flexible work schedule arrangements, telecommuting/flexiplace, and job sharing.

Publications that have an asterisk (*) are available on OPM’s ONLINE computer bulletin board at (202) 606-4800. To use the bulletin board, you need a computer, communication software, a modem, and a telephone line. These publications will be listed under the Work and Family/Flexiplace Forum. Agencies may also obtain copies of any Work and Family publication on computer disk in WordPerfect format by sending a blank diskette and postage-paid, self-addressed envelop to:

SECTION 2: PERSONNEL FLEXIBILITIES

The Federal Government offers its employees many personnel flexibilities that can help in balancing work and family responsibilities. The list below contains a short description of these Federal personnel programs. For further information about these programs, contact your agency's personnel office. Agency personnel offices will also be able to tell you about other programs offered at your workplace.

Flexible and Compressed Work Schedules
Flexible and compressed work schedules allow Federal employees to adjust their work schedules to accommodate changing family needs. Flexible work schedules give employees considerable leeway in setting arrival and departure times at work, provided that they are present during a fixed "core time" and their schedule is not disruptive to supervisors and co-workers. Under a compressed work schedule, employees can complete their 80-hour biweekly work requirements in less than 10 workdays. For example, they may work eight 10-hour days and have two days off per pay period. Flexible and compressed work schedules are established on an agency-by-agency basis. (See 5 U.S.C. 6120 - 6133; 5 CFR part 610, subpart D.)

Family-Friendly Leave Policies
Federal leave policies can work together to help you manage your work and family responsibilities. Here are some examples of how employees may use leave when facing a personal, medical, or family emergency.

Annual Leave
Annual leave is designed to provide vacation periods for rest and relaxation and time off for your personal business or family needs. Annual leave must be scheduled and approved in advance to the extent possible.

Sick Leave
Sick leave may be used when you--
- Receive medical, dental, or optical examination or treatment;
- Are incapacitated by physical or mental illness, injury, pregnancy, or childbirth;
- Would, because of exposure to a communicable disease, jeopardize the health of others while on the job; or
- Must be absent from work for adoption-related activities.

In addition, you may use a limited amount of sick leave to--
- Provide care for a family member who is incapacitated as the result of physical or mental illness, injury, pregnancy, childbirth, or medical, dental, or optical examination or treatment; or
- Make arrangements necessitated by the death of a family member or attend the funeral of a family member.

A full-time employee may use up to 40-hours (5 days) of sick leave each leave year for family care and bereavement purposes. An additional 64-hours (8 days) may be used as long as at least 80-hours of sick leave is maintained in the employee's sick leave account. Part-time employees and employees with uncommon tours of duty are also covered, and the amount of sick leave they may use for these purposes is prorated.

Family and Medical Leave
Under the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (FMLA), covered employees are entitled to a total of 12 administrative workweeks of unpaid leave (leave without pay) during any 12-month period for--
- The birth of a son or daughter and care for a newborn (within 1 year after the birth);
- The placement of a son or daughter with an employee for adoption or foster care (within 1 year after placement);
- The care for a spouse, son, daughter, or parent of the employee with a serious health condition; and
• Your own serious health condition that makes you unable to perform the functions of your position.

Upon return from FMLA leave, you must be returned to the same or equivalent position. While on FMLA leave, you are entitled to maintain health benefits coverage. If on leave without pay under the FMLA, you are responsible for paying the employee share of the health benefits premium.

You may choose to substitute annual leave for unpaid leave under the FMLA. You may also substitute sick leave in those situations in which the use of sick leave is permitted.

Leave for Bone-Marrow or Organ Donation
As a Federal employee, you are entitled to use seven days of paid leave each calendar year (in addition to annual or sick leave) to serve as a bone-marrow or organ donor.

Leave Sharing
If you have a medical emergency and have exhausted your own leave, the leave transfer program allows other Federal employees to donate annual leave to you. There may also be a leave bank program where you work. These bank programs allow members (those who contribute a specific amount) to apply for leave from the leave bank in the event of a medical emergency.

(For these leave policies, see 5 U.S.C. 6307-6387; 5 CFR part 630, subparts D-E, I-J, and L.)

Telecommuting
Telecommuting permits Federal employees to work-at-home or at other approved sites away from their offices for all or part of the workweek. This program assists employees who need flexibility in work scheduling and commuting. For example, flexiplace assignments can benefit an employee coordinating dependent care responsibilities, a handicap making it difficult to travel, or a long commute from home to the conventional office. (See OPM’s booklet, Balancing Work and Family Demands through Telecommuting, OLRWP-15.)

Employee Assistance Programs
Employee Assistance Programs (EAP’s) are ideally suited to assist employees with dependent care problems and other marital, family, legal, financial, substance abuse, and emotional difficulties. EAP’s, available to all Federal employees, provide confidential counseling and referral services to employees and, where feasible, family members. EAP’s also play a key role in educating the workforce on a variety of health and assistance topics, such as substance abuse, AIDS, money management, parenting, and emotional or psychiatric illness.

Part-time Employment and Job Sharing
Part-time employment is the answer for many employees who are successfully balancing work and family responsibilities. Nearly 50,000 permanent Federal employees are working part-time in agencies across the country. Job sharing, a relatively new idea, is steadily gaining ground. (When two part-time employees fill one full-time position, the employees are job sharing.) Each Federal agency determines where part-time or shared jobs are appropriate, and what work schedules will be set. Full-time employees at any grade level may request a shift to a part-time schedule. (See OPM’s booklet, Balancing Work and Family Demands through Part-time Employment and Job Sharing, OLRWP-16, and 5 U.S.C. 3401 - 3408; 5 CFR part 340, subparts A and B.)
