The Orange Public Library (California) conducted a project that involved recruitment, retention, coalition building, public awareness, training, basic literacy, collection development, tutoring, intergenerational/family, and English as a Second Language (ESL) programs. The project served a community of 100,000-200,000 and targeted workforce/workplace learners, intergenerational/families, and ESL learners. Tutoring was done one-on-one and in small groups, using the Laubach, Literacy Volunteers of America (LVA), and Michigan methods. The report provides a comparison of actual accomplishments to goals and objectives set forth in the grant application; comparison between proposed and actual expenditures; specific details of activities undertaken; the role the library played in the accomplishment of the goals and objectives; agencies and organizations that assisted in the project; and the impact of the federal project on the ongoing program of the library. Appendices include: tutor training manual--"Active Learning and Whole Language: An Introduction for Tutors" (Evelyn Renner); program publicity--brochures and news releases; program newsletters; tutor and learner materials; lesson plan; progress evaluation process form; and a tutor/learner survey. 5. If this project involved tutoring, how was it provided? (check as many as applicable)

- [x] one-on-one tutoring
- [ ] small group instruction
- [ ] classroom instruction

6.(a) If this project involved tutoring, was the learning progress of the adult literacy students quantitatively measured?  [x] yes  [ ] no

(If "yes", identify any tests, questionnaires, or standard methods used and summarize student results.)

Partners in Reading uses a "Where We Started" form and correlated "Six Month Evaluation" form to determine quantitative progress. These forms are based upon those used by the California Literacy Campaign and developed by the Educational Testing Service (ETS). Student results have been outstanding.

6.(b) If this project involved tutoring, were qualitative outcomes of student progress documented?  [x] yes  [ ] no

(If "yes", briefly describe how progress was determined and summarize student results. You may attach samples of any documents used to record observations or demonstrate outcomes.)

The literacy program office requires a monthly report from every active tutor. More than a record of hours, the monthly report asks for "Important literacy related events in the life of the student," a good indicator of qualitative progress.

PART III: Narrative Report

Provide a narrative report that includes the following information:

1. A comparison of actual accomplishments to the goals and objectives set forth in the approved application. Describe any major changes or revisions in the program with respect to approved activities, staffing, and budgeting, including unspent funds. Explain why established goals and objectives were not met, if applicable.

Beginning in February 1993 three Orange Public Library staff members transferred into the Partners in Reading Orange Public Library Literacy Program due to vacancies. February 1, 1993 Rosanne Miller became Literacy Services Coordinator and on February 22 Cynthia Torres began as Literacy Services Clerk. Paula Shepherd entered into the program as Literacy Services Assistant on March 29.

Objective 1: Recruit an additional 100 volunteer tutors and 100 students through September 30, 1993. Recruitment of volunteer tutors and learners was done through an extensive publicity campaign and as a result Partners in Reading exceeded their goal with 114 new tutors trained. Seventy-four new learners were assessed and matched. The publicity campaign is described in detail in the narrative of Objective 3.

Objective 2: In addition to monthly tutor orientations, provide workshops for the enrichment and continuing education of tutors. Upon talking to other literacy coordinators the original objective to offer monthly tutor orientations was reevaluated. Originally tutors were trained during a four hour session. Partners in Reading now provides a 12 hour session to tutors on a bi-monthly basis.
Quality in-service workshops were provided for the enrichment and continuing education of tutors. Creative Ideas for Tutors, offered March 30, 1993, taught tutors creative ideas to make tutoring sessions more interesting. A Tutor Roundtable was held May 11, 1993 which focused on learning disabilities. Jim Macon, Partners in Reading tutor and teacher/trainer at Cal State Long Beach, presented "S.O.S. - Strategies Offering Success" on June 29, 1993. Jim and his learner, Henry, conducted a mock tutoring session and discussed strategies that make tutoring more successful. Partners in Reading met their goal by providing three workshops this grant year.

Objective 3: Continue a strong publicity campaign throughout the community to promote Partners in Reading and the nationwide literacy effort. The goals of the publicity campaign were to: (1) ensure a steady supply of tutors and students; (2) make the public aware of the problem of illiteracy in the community and the library's role in combating it; and (3) involve community service organizations and local businesses in promoting and contributing to the literacy program. Partners in Reading participated in the publicity campaigns of the Southern California Library Literacy Network's (SCLLN) poster campaign which seeks to raise community awareness of the issue of literacy and to provide the Partners in Reading phone number and an 800 referral number. KBIG, a music radio station which broadcasts to Orange County, Los Angeles County and the Inland Empire, has donated quality air time to SCLLN promoting the literacy effort and running the Southern California 800 number with its public service announcements.

Partners in Reading has also affiliated with the Orange County Literacy Network (OCLN), a highly visible coalition that works closely with the Orange County Register, one of two major newspapers in the county, and other large businesses to promote the literacy effort.
The Los Angeles Times, Orange County Edition, continues their support of Partners in Reading, by printing press releases and by covering literacy related events.

Publicity about the literacy program also appeared in the Orange Progress, a quarterly city publication which highlights community activities and programs and is mailed to each resident of Orange.

Partners in Reading publishes a bi-monthly newsletter which is a motivational and instructional tool for learners and tutors. In addition the newsletter is mailed to businesses, churches, civic organizations and City leaders. Newsletters have been attached to the paychecks of all City of Orange employees and are available to the public at all facilities of the Orange Public Library.

The Literacy Services Coordinator is also available to speak about Partners in Reading to local businesses and community organizations.

Books in the Hood, a free book fair to promote the joy of reading and literacy, was held on November 21, 1992 and featured guest authors and celebrities. Literacy staff manned a booth at this Orange Public Library sponsored event and distributed information about Partners in Reading.

With respect to our target learner population, a message about the literacy program was included in the City water bill announcement which ran from April to May and is sent to each Orange resident. Since Orange is a close-knit community, local specifically directed publicity has been quite effective.
In August 1993 Partners in Reading participated in the Orange Public Library's 108th birthday celebration by providing informational materials.

Literacy Services Coordinator, Rosanne Miller, attended Bergen Brunswig Corporation, one of Orange's largest businesses, LifeBeat Fair. Informational materials were distributed and questions answered.

Partners in Reading's most successful event was their participation in the Orange International Street Fair on September 3, 4, and 5. The attendance according to the Orange City News was estimated at 400,000. Balloons were handed out with the literacy program logo, name and phone number along with other literacy/library literature.

A Reading Celebration was held on September 30, 1993 at which tutors and learners were recognized for their program participation. The Mayor of Orange and other City officials were present to honor these individuals. Children were encouraged to attend and were entertained by a puppeteer while adults listened to learners speak about their successes.

Partners in Reading has developed a video in conjunction with the Orange Public Library Media Assistant highlighting literacy services and learner/tutor testimony for local cable television. The video program was shown at the Reading Celebration and resulted in the General Manager of Cablevision of Orange requesting ten promotional spots for local origination playback of the video programs on channels, CNN, TBS, MTV and the public access channel, 21.

September 1993 was proclaimed Literacy Month in the City of Orange by the Mayor and City Council. A proclamation was presented to Partners in Reading at a City Council meeting.
By continuing a strong publicity campaign Partners in Reading has increased community awareness about literacy which has resulted in additional tutor and learner referrals.

Objective 4: Directly promote workplace literacy involving the local business community in the literacy effort. Partners in Reading has formed an alliance with Saint Joseph's Hospital through Employee Assistance Counselor Janice Tully. Saint Joseph's Hospital is the second largest employer in the City of Orange according to the 1990 City of Orange Chamber of Commerce Report. Saint Joseph's provides space for tutors and learners to meet and refers hospital employees as needed. This meets Partners in Reading's goal of developing a workplace literacy program this grant year.

In addition over 500 letters and newsletters were sent to local businesses advising them of various ways their business could take advantage of free literacy services offered by Partners in Reading. Some of the suggestions highlighted in the letter were providing tutoring space at the worksite, referring employees to the program, encouraging employees to become tutors and providing incentives to employees who participate in the program.

Letters were also sent to local fraternal and civic organizations informing them of literacy services available and requesting their support. Rotary Club of Orange has shown their support of Partners in Reading by providing assistance in the form of air conditioners for the literacy office.
Another large manufacturer in the City of Orange, Bergen Brunswig Corporation, held a LifeBeat Fair for their employees in which Partners in Reading was asked to participate. Literacy information was provided. Participation at this event has increased awareness within the Bergen Brunswig Corporation of literacy services available to their employees.

Objective 5: Through cooperative efforts with government agencies, become a vital presence within the City of Orange. Partners in Reading, through newsletter distribution to each employee and the Orange Progress, a quarterly city publication, has become a vital presence within the City of Orange. The Mayor, City Council and City Manager declared September 1993 as Literacy Month. They continue to demonstrate their support for the literacy program.

Partners in Reading continues to supply tutors to the City of Orange Resource Center. These tutors work on basic skills with day workers to improve their basic reading, writing and conversational skills.

Partners in Reading has formed an alliance with Rancho Santiago College's Orange Adult Learning Center through Margaret Manson, Dean of Continuing Education, Orange Area. The Orange Adult Learning Center has agreed to offer Partners in Reading's 12 hour tutor training sessions through their college catalogs beginning March 1994. Training would continue to be free of charge with the Learning Center paying for the tutor trainers resulting in a savings to the program. Additionally a wider audience would be reached through the distribution of the catalogs.
Concerning the goal of setting up a workplace literacy program in one or more City departments this grant year, Partners in Reading is a service offered through the library, which is a City department. This fiscal year the City of Orange experienced financial difficulties, as did many cities, which resulted in layoffs and the combining of several city departments. Tutoring sites are available throughout city departments and city employees have taken advantage of literacy services. However, it would not be cost effective or provide additional benefits to city employees to duplicate the program in each department.

Objective 6: Establish additional sites throughout the city for tutoring and orientations. Due to budget cutbacks the Santiago Hills Branch closed in June 1993 and the El Modena Branch is open two days a week for a total of 14 hours and the Taft Branch is open two days a week for a total of 12 hours. Partners in Reading has sent over 600 letters and newsletters to businesses and service organizations requesting tutoring sites. A tutoring site has been established at Saint Joseph's Hospital as well as at City Hall. We are aware of the need for more tutoring sites and are trying to meet this need. The Orange County Literacy Network (OCLN), also recognizes this need as a priority. By participating in this organization hopefully sites will be found.

Objectives 7: Seek future funding to continue the literacy program. Partners in Reading was awarded a five year grant from the California Library Services Act (CLSA) which began in fiscal year 1992/93. The Library Director will seek future funding from the City to continue the literacy program prior to the end of the grant. Donations from local businesses and service organizations continue to be sought.
2. Provide a comparison between proposed and actual expenditures by budget category, i.e. personnel, travel, materials, etc.

3A. LIBRARY MATERIALS ACQUIRED

Literacy materials were purchased for the library's "New Reader" collection at each library site. The Literacy Coordinator selected materials to provide a balanced collection.

- Fearon Series i.e. Fearon's Basic English, Fearon's Basic Mathematics, etc.
- ESL Teacher's Book of Lists
- Building Real Life English Skills
- English Day by Day
- Culturgrams: The Nation's Around Us
- Entry to English Literacy, Book 1 and 2
- Essential Life Skills Series
- Keystrokes to Literacy
- English for the Word of Work
- Pacemaker Practical English series
- Patterns in Spelling
- Structures in Spelling

3B. NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Partners in Reading was the fortunate beneficiary of a needs assessment done by the independent Coro Foundation of Southern California on behalf of the Orange County Literacy Network (OCLN). The study: "Adult Literacy Needs in Orange County: May 1, 1992," surveys various indicators and comprehensively documents illiteracy in this region. The report states, "In Orange County alone it is estimated that between 270,000 and 455,000 adults have literacy deficiencies [including the ESL population] ... Based on a county-wide profile of selected demographic indicators, the areas in greatest need of literacy services are located primarily in the Central and Northern regions of Orange County" (Adult Literacy Needs, p.1). This region includes the City of Orange, Santa Ana, Anaheim and nine other cities adjacent to Orange. (Attached is the Coro Foundation statistical breakdown specifically for the City of Orange).

Acknowledging that illiteracy cuts across all demographic lines, the study points out that population provides a good general indicator of literacy need. The City of Orange has the 6th largest population in the county (29 incorporated cities surveyed) with 110,658 people (1990 U.S. Census). Moreover, Orange has the 6th largest adult population in the county. Eighty three thousand seven hundred one (83,701) people or 75.6% of the city population is adult (1990 U.S. Census). (Adult Literacy Needs, p.12.)

According to Orange County Register Research Unit figures, of 29 cities surveyed, Orange also has the eighth highest percentage of low income households: 10.3% of its households make less than $15,000 and 2,742 of these Orange households receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). AFDC numbers translate into literacy need because according to the 1986 Senate Office of Research study, "One-third of AFDC recipients are illiterate ... Again the Central and North regions of the County have the greater numbers of AFDC recipients" (Adult Literacy Needs, pp. 13-14).

Finally, of the 15 school districts surveyed, Orange Unified School District (OUSD) has the second highest percentage of high-school drop-outs for 1990-91 according to California and Orange County Departments of Education. Twelfth grade average reading scores for OUSD based upon the California Assessment Program (CAP) are the sixth lowest in the county. The CAP provides very broad notions of the skills level of adults upon high school graduation (Adult Literacy Needs, p.15).

3C. TUTOR TRAINING

Partners in Reading provides a twelve hour tutor-training workshop designed to train tutors how to teach adults the basic skills of reading, writing, spelling and mathematics. Upon completion of the workshop participants receive a certificate certifying them as a Basic Literacy Tutor. Tutor training is conducted by Lietta Wood and Evelyn Renner, contract literacy consultants, who provide a training packet to each participant. Some of the topics covered are goal setting, assessment, language experience, phonics, word patterns, speech patterns, grammar rules, learning styles, lesson planning, and cultural considerations (packet enclosed). Each participant also receives a copy of the book Tutor by Literacy Volunteers of America, Inc. The Literacy Coordinator also informs participants how a learner is assessed, how tutors and learners are matched, about the monthly report and where we started forms, and answers questions about the literacy program. Since the tutor training workshops are held in the community room of the Main Library, a tour of the library is given, and there is emphasis on the New Reader collection.

3D. CONTRACTED SERVICES

Partners in Reading offered six Tutor Training Workshops and three "Continuing Education" programs for tutors with contracted presenters:

Lietta Wood and Evelyn Renner, Literacy Consultants, taught the Tutor Training workshops which were described under 3C Tutor Training. Lietta Wood also conducted the Creative Ideas for Tutors continuing education workshop and the Tutor Roundtable on Learning Disabilities. Creative Ideas for Tutors presented various ways to make tutoring sessions more interesting. The Tutor Roundtable on Learning Disabilities illustrated various types of learning disabilities and teaching methods.
Jim Macon, Partners in Reading literacy tutor and a teacher-trainer at Cal State Long Beach, presented "S.O.S. Strategies Offering Success." Jim and his learner, Henry, conducted a mock tutoring session and presented strategies that work.

4. Describe the role the library has played in the accomplishment of the goals and objectives set forth in the approved grant, including whether the library was involved in the project's implementation or as a resource and site only.

Staff members of Orange Public Library have definitely become involved in the implementation and continuation of the literacy program. Rosanne Miller, Literacy Coordinator, has worked as a Librarian at the Orange Public Library for over 12 years. The Literacy Assistant and Literacy Clerk also worked at the Orange Public Library for a number of years. This benefits Partners in Reading in many ways including a working knowledge of the library and city policies and procedures.

"Literacy Liaisons" - one staff member at each library site - have provided tutors and students with direct support at the site at which they are meeting. Partners in Reading developed a Literacy Liaison Informational Packet which lists the questions most asked about literacy services so the Liaison can readily help anyone with inquiries. Literacy Liaisons meet with the Literacy Coordinator periodically to discuss concerns and new developments.

Hazel Ho Wang, Branch Services Manager, provided general supervision to the literacy program, reviewed grant proposals and publications, submitted quarterly reports and was the literacy contact to the City departments. Connie Westrick, Branch Services Senior Administrative Secretary, helped with word processing, collating of grant proposals and reports, mailings, and provided other secretarial support. Library Director, Gary Wann, met with the Literacy Coordinator as needed. Jan McGovney, the Library Director's Administrative Secretary helped with tutor/learner relations and scheduling of meeting space.

Rosemarie Williams, Library Staff Artist, has done the high quality graphic details and layout of some flyers for Partners in Reading. Kathy Kelton, the Library Media Assistant, provided audiovisual support to the program.

5. Provide names of agencies and organizations recruited to volunteer their services for the literacy program or that were involved in the coordination and planning of the literacy program. Describe the nature of their role.

Partners in Reading has contacted many agencies and organizations requesting assistance in the areas of tutoring, tutoring site availability, donations and assistance with special activities.

7. Describe the impact of the Federal project on the ongoing program of the grantee.

On November 18, 1992, Orange Public Library and Partners in Reading were informed that they had been awarded the five-year California Literacy Campaign (CLC) grant by the California State Library. This grant award provides five years of funding for Partners in Reading: Year one (1992-93) the literacy program will receive $65,125; in years two and three (1993-95) will receive 100% funding at $91,937; in year four, $69,953; and in year five, $45,969.

On October 14, 1992, Orange Public Library and Partners in Reading were notified that they would be awarded $4,500 from the State Library to fund a Families for Literacy program from January to June, 1993.

The funding from the U.S. Department of Education has given Partners in Reading a tremendous start in developing the literacy program for the City of Orange.

Affective Filters

Communication
All information, stimulus, input, and interaction between people is filtered through and affected by these elements:

* PERSONALITY
* FEELINGS
* SECURITY
* MOTIVATION
* ANXIETY LEVEL
* SELF ESTEEM
* CULTURE Gestures

Sometimes, what you see isn’t what you said

The "Pinkie" Finger
In Puerto Rico, it means "skinny",
In Korea, Japan and Taiwan,
it means girlfriend, or mistress
It can also mean "Number 1"

The "OK" Sign
In the United States, it means "OK".
In Japan, it means money
In Korea, it is an obscenity
In many Latin cultures, it is sexually suggestive
DON'T STRETCH!!!

Body language can be potentially offensive!

Asians, Arabs, and Latin Americans find some body language offensive!

* Setting your hands on hips * Using your index finger to count people while using broad, sweeping motions * Slouching in a chair * Pointing to a person with the index finger * Using the index finger to stress a point * Sitting on a desk * Giving someone something with the left hand * Yawning, even if you cover your mouth * Stretching in public.

And, East Asians are easily offended by;

* Touching a person of the opposite sex * Touching a person on the head * Hugging someone * Pointing with the foot * Pushing something with the foot * Passing an item over someone's head

Arabs can be offended by;

* Interaction with the opposite sex, such as touching or hugging * Exposing the sole of your foot to someone * Handing something to someone using the left hand * Turning your back to someone while carrying on a conversation with the person

Language Acquisition Principles

* Language fluency is acquired more than learned.

* Comprehensible, genuine messages in a comfortable environment promote language acquisition.

* Language is acquired by understanding language that contains structures that are a bit beyond the student's current level.

* Speaking emerges on its own over time and can't be rushed.

* Early speech is usually grammatically inaccurate, but becomes increasingly more accurate with increased exposure to language over time.

* The ability to comprehend forms the basis for the ability to speak.

* Speech will emerge on its own in natural stages.

* Students need to use their newly acquired English skills in the environment outside the classroom.

* It's important to accept all attempts of communication by students.

* Listening comprehension skills are the most important indicator of a student's progress, not their ability to produce speech.

* There is only a small percentage of language that may need conscious study.

* Language structure is acquired by understanding messages, not by learning form or structure of pronunciation.

* Instructors need to create a need for communication, and communicate the message without modifying speech significantly.

* Dictionaries, lists, and glossaries don't work well to address vocabulary.

* Vocabulary is best addressed with context-based interactive exercises.

* Check frequently for understanding

* Facilitate genuine task oriented communication, with interdependent dialogue.

* Contextualized language enhances language acquisition.

* Minimal stress enhances language acquisition.
The Four Stages of Language Acquisition

Stage One - Pre-Speech

Students can listen, move, point, choose, match, mime, draw, act out scenes.

Stage Two - Early Production

Students can speak a few words, and progressively speak more multi-syllabic words, and 2-3 words sentences.

Activities include naming, listening, categorizing, responding with one or two words.
The Four Stages of Language Acquisition

Stage Three - Intermediate Fluency

Students can speak in 'connected narratives'.

Activities include describing, defining, explaining, recalling, retelling, summarizing, role playing, comparing, and contrasting.

Stage Four - Near Native Fluency

Students can speak fluently.

Activities include giving opinions, defending, debating, analyzing, justifying, examining, creating, evaluating, reading, writing.
Informal Assessment

Using any series of pictures, formulate three questions for each of the categories shown that will evoke a response in that category.

Pre-Production/Pre-Speech

Listening, non-verbal responses
"Point to the Boy" "Point to the dog" "Point to the ball"

Early Production/Speech Emergence
One word responses
"What is this?" (Response "Boy")

Intermediate Fluency
Small sentences or phrases
"What is the boy doing?" (Response "Boy is running")

Near Native Fluency
Answers questions, makes predictions
"Why is the boy running?" (Response "Because it’s raining and he’s getting wet.")

One error in any stage- OK. Two errors in any stage, use activities from previous stage.

Certain gestures and movements can be offensive to some cultures and stop the learning process.

Potential offensive gestures in Asians, Arabs and Latin Americans include:

* Resting hands on hips
* Sitting on a desk
* Stretching
* Using the index finger to count people with wide arm movements
* To beckon or point to someone or to point for emphasis

Potential offensive gestures to East Asians:

* Touching a person of the opposite sex
* Touche a person on the head
* Hugging
* Passing something over a person’s head
* Pointing or pushing with the foot

Potential offensive gestures to Arabs:

* Hugging/Touching person of the opposite sex.
* Showing someone the sole of your foot.
* Handing a person something (particularly food) with your left hand.
* Turning your back on someone while you talk to them.

Activities for ESL Students

Cut and Paste - Students make collages around a topic or domain, such as transportation, food, clothing, etc. Categorize the items. Introduce an item and ask the students to find any representative picture they can of that item, and to cut the items out and paste them on paper. Discuss the activity.

EXAMPLE: Ask students to find all the chairs they can in pictures. When they have their collages completed, you can discuss easy chair, patio chair, deck chair, chaise lounge, stool, work stool, bar stool, stuffed chair, office chair, etc.

Vocabulary Scenes - Glue a picture of a vocabulary word in the center of a piece of paper and have the student create a scene using crayons, colored pencils, felt pens, etc. Use the pictures later on for oral discussion.

Picture Matching - The teacher displays a drawing, photo, etc., and the students select words from a vocabulary list that they have collected in previous sessions, or at the beginning of the session, which can apply to that visual aid.

Follow My Directions on Tape - Make your own audio tapes of commands, such as "Draw a large blue square at the top of your paper. Then draw a red triangle inside the square." Students are encouraged to do the work at home.

Board Games - Make up games. Use any path-type game board with vocabulary cards that are slightly modified to include a number from one to six on the same side of the card as the word. The student rolls the dice, draws a vocabulary card, and identifies the word. If the student can use the word in a sentence, or discuss the word, he can move forward the number of squares indicated on the card. If the student is incorrect, he has to move backward the same number of squares. Use board games like Yahtzee, Spill and Spell, Boggle, and Games of the States.

Flash Cards - Use flash cards with their vocabulary words on them. Give each student a card. Then give them commands to do with their cards and ask other students to report what was done. For example, "Maria, give Thomas your card with the word 'flower' on it. Thomas, can you put the card with the word 'chair' on the table next to Pedro?" "Who has the word 'vehicle'?"

Picture Dictionaries - Student pastes the pictures he has identified in a composition book and writes the name of the object beside the picture and a description of the object if possible. Encourage the student to also write the word in a few sentences in the Picture Dictionary as well. Pictures can be categorized or alphabetized in their dictionary as well.

Recordings - Pre-recorded stories can be checked out of the library, or made by the tutor, that the student can use while reading. This provides a language model when the tutor is not present and provides the student with opportunities to hear the language.

Early Writing - Discuss a picture with the student(s) and have them cluster words describing the picture or telling what is in the picture. Use this cluster to construct small sentences with the students. If possible, encourage the students to write the sentences on cards. Use this exercise to select sounds, patterns or sight words to learn.

Visual Arts and Crafts/Cooking - On a piece of paper, show the various steps one goes through to make a certain product, such as popcorn or candied apples. Have examples available at various stages of completion. Beside each example, write the instructions in very simple sentences. Those that can't read can follow the visual aids.

Line Out - The tutor writes words on a sheet of paper or the board. Most of the words should be in the same domain, but some should not be related at all. The tutor discusses each of the words and uses them in the discussion in sentences. The students must identify words that don't belong and erase them or put a line through them.
Connecting Words - This is similar to Scrabble. Give a student a sheet of paper with a key word from their vocabulary or discussion and ask the group or student to connect as many vocabulary words to it as they can. See the example, below.

Context Clues - The tutor invents a nonsense word and continues to add context clues until one of the students identifies what the word should be. For example:

Nerglit
A Nerglit helps
A Nerglit helps people
A Nerglit helps sick people
A Nerglit helps sick people at the hospital.
A Nerglit helps sick people at the hospital by operating.

Students can also construct these for the class once it has been modeled.

Language Experience Mapping or Clustering - The tutor or students write a word on a piece of paper. The students respond with any words or phrases that come to mind. These phrases are attached to the original word. This exercise is great to precede a Language Experience Story.

Minimal Pairs - The activities involved with Minimal Pairs are for use with a student who has two words that are pronounced similarly, but are distinctly different, such as "Body and Buddy". The use of minimal pairs can help students understand the impact of their pronunciation while enhancing comprehension of words.

Have one student draw a picture of a body, and label it "1". Ask another student to draw a picture of a buddy - label it "2".

Develop a sentence that could be used with both words, such as "He has a good..." "He has a good body", "He has a good buddy."

Ask the student having difficulty with the words to say one of the sentences. Ask the rest of the students to identify if the number of the picture showing that sentence.

A variation of this activity is to have one student say the sentence, and the other student respond with "because". For example Student 1 says "He has good body." Student 2 responds "Because he lifts weights".

Preposition Games - In order to assist students with prepositions, use a beach ball and ask the students to throw the ball to each other using a sentence such as "I am throwing the ball at Jim." "I am throwing the ball under Sue." "I am throwing the ball over Pedro."

Acting Out/Role Playing - Discuss a situation with the students, such as calling 911, going to a job interview, etc. Develop dialogues and phrases to use during these activities and invent a play or skit with the students.

Statement Discussions - Select statements from the newspaper or magazine article for discussion. As the student become comfortable talking, select statements that the students have to challenge or defend, or statements that they need to investigate in order to decide how they feel about them.
SMALL GROUP INSTRUCTION FOR ADVANCED ESL LEARNERS
Adapted from materials by By C. Ray Graham
Brigham Young University, 1990 Literacy Volunteers of America

TWENTY QUESTIONS

OBJECTIVES: To have students practice asking questions. To practice vocabulary relating to a domain of the teacher's or student's choosing.

Description: This activity is a questioning game in which the group establishes a particular domain or subject area of interest. (e.g. famous people, events in history, living things) and a member of the group who is "it" thinks of a particular member or instances within the established domain and the others try to identify the member or instance by asking yes-no questions or single alternative questions. Members of the group take turns asking questions and the entire group may ask up to twenty questions. The first person to correctly identify the member or instance becomes "it". If no one achieves this goal within the twenty questions, then "it" chooses another item and the game begins again.

(Variations may include having "it" write down the topic s/he has chosen prior to the game starting, or writing brief sentence or two about the topic. After the topic is identified, "it" reads the sentences. A cluster, and collaborative language experience can be developed by each group and read to the class. Encourage a lot of discussion)

FOLLOW MY DIRECTIONS

OBJECTIVES: To be able to give accurate verbal directions. To be able to accurately follow verbal directions. Level: Intermediate to Near Native Fluency levels

Materials: A piece of cardboard, cloth or other material to serve as a screen between students. Pictures, pencils and paper, blocks and other materials to be manipulated. Begin any exercise with modeling. Divide the group into pairs.

Description: One member of each set is given a picture, an object, or configuration of objects to describe. She must describe the thing assigned well enough for the other member of the pair to reproduce it without being able to see it. The pair must have their backs to each other, or there must be obstacle high enough between them to conceal the materials being described.

(Variations; Have the instructions written down by one of the partners, then have the other partner try to reproduce the item. The instructions can not contain any diagrams.)

VOCABULARY BY DOMAIN

OBJECTIVES: To develop vocabulary in a specified domain. Levels: Intermediate to advanced. Materials: flip chart or blackboard. This exercise can be used with a whole class or small group.

Have the group select a topic to discuss, such as family, job, feelings, hobbies, television shows, plants, furniture, transportation, houses, customs, telephones calls, emergencies, relatives, money, shopping, movies, government, police, occupations, health, safety, time, weather, measurements, vegetables, meats, fruits, shopping, clothing, medical, emotions, anger, fear, happiness, actions, traveling or sports.

Have the group suggest words they know in the same domain. Have them use the words in a sentence. Discuss degrees of these words, or sequence, which ones are nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, etc. Make up sample sentences, poems, stories with these words.

Many tutors are concerned about the very first contact with their student. Here's a list of ideas collected for the survival kit to help with the first meeting between a new student and a new tutor.

For ESL Students - For lower level students you may want to have some of this information translated into your student's primary language and bring the information with you to the first session.

* The most important thing to do is to have a good time, enjoy yourself and smile!
* Be sensitive to the student's feelings and interests.
* Let the student talk about their lives, families, etc., and you do the same.
* Review the specifics about the date and time for the meetings.
* Exchange phone numbers and discuss the procedure to use in the event one of you must cancel the meeting.
* Discuss the supplies, such as notebooks and workbooks, that might be needed.
* Discuss the materials and techniques you will be using.
* Ask the student for suggestions on materials or topics they'd like to learn.
* Review the student's responsibilities that were discussed in your tutor training.
* Bring a World Atlas, or map of their country and the U.S. with you to the first class. Let them show you where they lived, and then show them where they are now. This leads to some great discussions!

For Basic Reading or ESL Students

* The most important thing to do is to have a good time, enjoy yourself and smile!
* Bring a newspaper or other material to read for fun.
* Be sensitive to the student's feelings and interests.
* Let the student talk about their lives, families, etc., and you do the same.
* Review the specifics about the date and time for the meetings.
* Exchange phone numbers and discuss the procedure to use in the event one of you must cancel the meeting.
* Discuss the student's expectations and goals - what does s/he want to achieve from the tutoring experience?
* Discuss the supplies, such as notebooks and workbooks, that might be needed.
* Discuss the materials and techniques you will be using.
* Write a paragraph about the student's family or goals and read it together.
* Ask the student for suggestions on materials or topics they'd like to learn.
* Review the student's responsibilities that were discussed in your tutor training.
* Read the student something short and funny to show that reading is fun!
Strategies in Talking about Vocabulary Words

All words should be introduced in context only. Here are the types of context clues and examples to help define words.

Definition
A wind tunnel is a machine used to control wind speeds for scientific experiments.

Restatement
The mother kangaroo has a pouch, or bag, on the front of her body for carrying a baby kangaroo.

Example
"Go to your room!" is an example of a command.

Comparison
A sieve, like a filter, can strain liquids.

Contrast
In winter, bears hibernate. In summer, they are awake and moving about.

Description
A raccoon is a small, furry animal with a striped tail and markings on its face that look like a mask.

Synonym/Antonym
The trolley, or streetcar, carried many passengers in the city.

Association
She was as protective of her children as a mother tiger is of her cubs.

Reflection of Mood
Sarah saw the rattlesnake move closer. She knew it was poisonous, and it seemed about ready to attack. Sarah was terrified.

Summary
He knew his products well and could talk about them easily. He has many customers and makes many sales. He was a very capable salesman.
The Sounds of Speech
Whole Language Activities
The Language Experience Approach

The stages that add meaning to the language experience approach are those activities that contextualize the language and add process to the activity. They include:

- Conversation
  The tutor and student discuss information and topics of interest to the student. The Tutor should take the opportunity to add new words and concepts to the conversation.

- Clustering
  The tutor never does anything the student can do!

- Using each clustered word in a sentence
  The tutor never does anything the student can do!

- Writing each clustered word in a sentence on a small card
  The tutor writes the cards only if the student can’t.

- Sequencing these cards into some order the student feels is appropriate
  The tutor never does anything the student can do!

- Spell Checking
  The tutor never does anything the student can do!

- Writing the Language Experience Story
  Even if the student’s writing skills need improvement, the student can copy the information off the cards.

When writing the language experience, remember to;

1. Print
   It’s easier to convert their activities involved with using the language experience into activities related to reading when the printed words from their story look somewhat like the printed words on the page. Cursive writing is too different for some students to be of much value at this point.

2. Separate each line of writing by two or three blank lines.
   You’ll be using this space in between each line to insert small flash cards in activities later on.

3. Use upper case letters only when appropriate.
   Don’t print using different sizes!

4. Only do what your student can’t do. Don’t deny them PROCESS!

Once the language experience is written, read the story together. Encourage your student(s) to read with you. After the student is familiar with the story, you can use this contextualized story to select sight words, phonics and word patterns to help the student decode the language.

Sight Words

1. Ask your student to select words they want to learn.
2. The tutor also selects a few words they feel would be good sight words, or that they want to use later in the session for the word pattern or phonics activities.
3. The student writes the words on a card.
   If the student can’t write, the tutor can print the words on the cards.
4. The student says each word, uses it in a sentence, and then places the card beneath the word in the story.
5. When all the cards are matched, mix the cards and repeat the activity once again.
6. As words are learned, they can be removed farther from the context of the story.
7. The student files words that are known for future review and use in games.

Rev10/92
Establish a system with your student that can be used for these cards. It's the student's system and the student's responsibility to manage the cards.

Phonics

1. Select a consonant sound from the language experience that has been identified as a sound the student(s) need to work on.
2. Using a dialogue, link the word and sound with the language experience. This dialogue could look something like this:
   "From the story, let's take a look at the word 'sink'.
   Tutor writes the word and says 'This is the word 'sink'. The first sound in this word is s/s/s. This is the letter 's'. What is the sound of this letter?'
   The student responds.
   "Can you think of any words that you know that begin with the sound s/s/s?"
3. The tutor and student can collect words at this point that begin with that sound. When the student suggests a word that doesn't belong in the group, simply tell the student that the word chosen has a similar sound, but English is a bit crazy and that word doesn't start with the letter "s". Then, on a separate sheet of paper, show the student how the word suggested is spelled, and go back to the original activity.
4. When a list of words has been produced, the dialogue could continue with something like:
   "From the words you've listed, (say them all), which word would you like to pick as a key word to remind you of the sound of the letter 's'?"
   Student response.
5. Ask the student to make a card for that letter and key word. The card should show all forms of the letter, which might include any variations of that letter. Variations, for example for the letter 'g' might include like this 'g'. Variations for a 't' would include the 't' with the little hook, and the 't' without the hook, since the student will see both in the printed form.
6. Always remind your student why he has the key word. Say something like, "Whenever you want to know what the letter 's' sounds like, you can think of your key word."

Word Patterns

In order for words to be in a pattern, they must sound alike and be spelled alike. For example, "cloth" and "both" don't belong in the same pattern, but "cloth" and "moth" do! The phonogram is spelled the same ("-oth") but they don't sound the same. In a similar manner, "gate" and "eight" do not belong in the same pattern They sound alike, but are spelled differently. But "gate" and "mate" do belong in the same pattern! The words 'eight' and 'sight' don't belong in the same pattern either.

1. Select a phonogram from the story.
2. Link the activity you are about to do with the story. Explain that the word you're going to work on was taken from the words and story they wrote.
3. Write the word on a piece of paper.
4. Using a column format, add words to the pattern by saying something that links the spelling and new word with a word just said by the student. For example;
   "If m-a-k-e is make, what is b-a-k-e?"
5. Keep adding words to the list by always linking the word they just said to the new word and spelling.
6. If the student seems unsure, there may be a problem with rhyming or consonant sounds.
7. After the pattern has several words, check that the student understands the meaning of each word.
8. Ask the student to add this new pattern to his collection.

Here are some examples of questions that can be used to assess a student's understanding of materials read. The student has read a story about Billy the Kid. Here are some examples of questions using this expanded form of Bloom's Taxonomy.

Knowledge - "How did Billy the Kid end up in Jail?"

Comprehension - "How did Billy the Kid feel about the handcuffs?"

Application - "How can Billy the Kid be helped to be rehabilitated?"

Analysis - "How does the author develop sympathy for Billy?"

Synthesis - "How would Billy the Kid summarize his life now?"

Evaluation - "How well has the author established Billy's guilt or innocence?"

WAYS TO MOTIVATE A STUDENT
by Lou Sutcliffe, Columnist

The following ideas demonstrate how creativity can help bring success and enjoyment to both tutors and students during the tutoring experience.

Take a look at these ideas and think about selecting a few to use during your next tutoring session! They'll add great fun while motivating both of you!

Devise an incentive plan.

* Use a credit or point system that both you and the student devise. Establish exactly when points will be given, perhaps for those skills or tasks that have been a particular challenge to the student.

* Design some type of competition to offer more of a challenge.

* Begin the student's introduction to charts and graphs by making progress charts for their work. Students can check off what consonant sounds or which words from the sight word list they have learned.

* One of the goals set by the tutor and student can be a subscription to a magazine that the student wants. Pay for it by giving the student a nickel for each word learned.

* List the words the student wants to learn. When each is learned, transfer it to a Learned Words List.

Use a tape recorder

* Encourage the student to tape whole lessons to use as review between sessions.

* Ask the student to record his/her progress in reading aloud. Remember that when we hear ourselves reading, we can identify areas that need to be addressed.

* Record directions or lessons for the student to complete during the week. This encourages the development of good listening skills.

* Ask the student to tape some of his/her favorite music. Work on writing down the lyrics together. Use the lyrics as you would other reading material, eventually leading to a Language Experience.

* Record special reading material. Perhaps the tutor can read the student's favorite book, and the student can read the book and follow along on the tape between sessions. The student can develop summarizing, critical thinking, and sequencing skills with these activities.

Games

* Together, design fantasy trips with the use of pictures, music, travel guides, and magazines. Then the team can develop a budget and schedule or itinerary. Use this information eventually to develop a series of Language Experiences.

* Use games such as Scrabble, Anagrams, Boggle, Spell n' Spill and Perquackey. With Anagrams, for example, the student can use his/her name, or a family member's name, and develop other words from it.

* Together, modify existing games like Wheel of Fortune, Pictionary, Concentration and Trivial Pursuit. Design activities that integrate current work in class with these games.

* The student and tutor can create board games including words/topics currently under study.

* Use Post It notes to identify items around the house, covering a different room in each session. Then, develop sentences together for these words. Integrate the new words into their Language Experience and other related activities. This can be very intrusive, and can really involve the student!

* A game of "Word Dominoes" could be created using hand-drawn or cut out pictures on index cards in combination with words. For example, a picture of a car on one domino would be matched with its written counterpart on another domino.

One variation is to use jigsaw puzzle pieces of word/picture pairs. It's great fun to make them!

* Use repetition of words to draw its picture with letters. For example:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>lit</th>
<th>lit</th>
<th>lit</th>
<th>lit</th>
<th>lit</th>
<th>lit</th>
<th>lit</th>
<th>lit</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
<td>lit</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* Demonstrate how a student can finger an alphabet so that spelling becomes a physical experience.

Reading Activities

* Work with the student to rewrite materials to a more comfortable level for the learner.

* Between sessions, encourage the student to find a "Word of the Week" in the materials he uses at work and at home.

* Plan Field Trips to places of interest or importance to the student, like the grocery store, child's school, movie theater, etc.

When new words are encountered, ask the student to write them down for follow-up study and activities.

* Together, go to a bookstore and buy a book the student has selected.

* Watch a movie together as basis for language experience.
Work regularly with a comic strip the student enjoys. Cut up frames for sequencing practice. “White Out” the dialogue and work together on new dialogue for the strip.

From a rented movie or taped TV show, write a transcript of some of the favorite scenes or dialogue. Replay the tape and work on a “read and watch/watch and read” activities.

Go to local sports event while taping it at home. Use the experience as the basis for Language Experience.

Follow a sports team in the paper together. Use the information in the papers about the team to chart their progress and plot their trips on a map.

Maps

Plan a trip, whether it’s real or imaginary, using tour brochures from a travel agency. Find out about the countries or states included in the trip, and plot the route on a map. Discuss how to calculate the miles involved.

Plot specific locations in the city or neighborhood on a local map. Discuss the legend or key, and how to estimate the distances involved.

Encourage the student to learn the names of all the streets on the way to work, to the doctor, the library, etc. Find them on the map.

Use a camera

Ask the student to take pictures during the coming week, including warning signs, street signs, places visited often, and signs of special importance to the student. Use these pictures for discussion and activities leading to sight words, word patterns and consonant sounds. Discuss whether the pictures can be developed into a story that can be written as a language experience.

Plan a field trip of the student’s neighborhood, and take pictures of items of interest to the student. Together, make notes on their locations an importance, and review/integrate this information and the pictures during the lesson.

Writing Activities

Encourage the student to keep a daily journal of student’s thoughts. This can be either a private journal, or one that is shared with the tutor. Encourage the student to review the journal to see the progress made. It can provide an avenue for self-expression not available to the student until now.

Begin to exchange notes and messages. Encourage the student to write notes to himself.

List the names of the TV programs the student has watched in the past week. Make a chart of these programs by day and time. Review the charts in the TV guide and other TV logs.

Write letters, send post cards to one another on trips.

Together, complete a charge card application or order form. Discuss credit buying and its implications.

Together, prepare a card, such as a Christmas Card, that can be sent to family and friends.

Work together to write a story that the student can read to a child or grandchild.

Together, develop a play and write down the dialogue that can be read aloud. Perhaps the student and tutor could write their own parts.

Put words in “Thought Balloons” over photos.

Together discuss and then list several things the student plans to do in the coming week. At the session a week later, go over them together to see which ones were accomplished.

Together, write a poem using known vocabulary, possibly from word patterns. Encourage the student to begin doing this as an independent activity.

Writing Activities

Give the student a pocket calendar to help keep track of tutoring sessions and other important dates.

Have student write a hard-to-remember word on something unusual, such as a banana or orange.

Introduce and encourage the use of electronic equipment, such as typewriters, computers or word processors.

If the student has young children, plan a birthday party including recipes, a shopping list, the games planned, a guest list, invitations, a time line, calendar, and budget.

Using Real Life Materials

Using the menu from a local restaurant, plan a meal together and then go to the restaurant to order it and enjoy!

Ask the student to bring some kind of reading materials that is regularly found around his house. Discuss the information and scan the materials together. As soon as possible, begin reading the material together.

Use materials related to the student’s interests, such as an auto repair manual, cookbook, appliance manual, hobby text, etc., as the basis of the phonics, sight words and patterning.

Find out a student’s life involvements, job, hobby, past experiences, and incorporate them into the lesson plan.

Word Construction

Spell out words using a tactile method such as:

Mix 1/4 cup liquid laundry starch and 3 Tablespoons powdered tempera paint in a large resealable plastic bag. Squeeze out air and seal. Put bag on table and spell out words on plastic bag using a finger. Erase by smoothing out bag.

Use pieces of felt or a stack of old buttons to construct letters for spelling.
1. Make two cuts in one card. See Figure 2.

2. Determine what part of the machine will include the consistent sound(s) and place the letter(s) on the card with the two cuts.

3. Determine the part(s) of the word(s) that should be placed on the second card. These sounds or word parts will create new words once the second card is placed properly in the card with the two cuts. See Figure 1

4. When inserted properly, the word machine makes new words. See Figure 3

5. The word machine can be used with prefixes, suffixes, blends, word patterns, and other combinations too! Use your imagination!

CAREFULLY FOLD AN 8 1/2 X 11 SHEET OF PAPER INTO EIGHTHS AND CREASE. MARK PAGES LIGHTLY IN PENCIL AS SHOWN, AS A GUIDE. TYPE OR DESIGN EVERYTHING ON ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER ACCORDING TO THE SEQUENCE OF NUMBERED PAGES.

CREASE PAPER IN OPPOSITE DIRECTIONS SO THAT FOLDS ARE FREE TO BEND EITHER WAY. MAKE A CUT ALONG THE CENTER FOLD FROM POINT "A" TO "B" WITH A SHARP RAZOR BLADE.

RE-FOLD SHEET INTO BOOKLET FORM. THE KEY IS THE CENTER OPENING, WHICH ALLOWS THE NEW FORMATION.

NOW THE SHEET HAS BECOME A HANDY BOOKLET, WHICH CAN BE USED IN A VARIETY OF WAYS - SUCH AS A REFERENCE TOOL, SMALL WORKBOOK, SING-ALONG HANDOUT, OR WHEREVER YOUR IMAGINATION LEADS!

Pre-Speech or Speech Emergence

Domain Books

Each student has a notebook that they'll use to collect or draw pictures for different domains, such as for colors, shapes, food groups, clothing articles, street names they need, emergency procedures or articles, family names, etc.

The items should reviewed frequently. It can also be helpful if they write the words of the items in their language by the illustration. Refer to the book frequently.

Domain Cards

Using card stock, the student can glue pictures on the cards and punch holes in the corner of the cards to hang on a ring. The cards can have the picture and the word in their language on them, but they should be encouraged to begin saying the English word corresponding to the picture as soon as they can.

Card Games

Using the Domain Cards, the student can select three or four cards and put them on the table. The tutor talks about the cards and uses the names of the objects on the table. The student is asked to point to the objects on the cards, or the student is asked to pick up a specific card. As the student becomes proficient at identifying the objects, the tutor can point to, for example, the apple and ask the student "Is this a banana?". The tutor can model a positive and/or negative response.

Object Games

The tutor and student can select objects from the domain to use in this adventure. The objects are placed on the table, or on the floor. The tutor discusses each item and uses the names of the items as often as possible. Then, the tutor moves/removes one of the object and asks the student which object has been moved/removed or is missing. Additional objects can be added as the student masters their names.

Simon Sez

The tutor can point to particular objects or parts of the body and discuss them, saying things like "This is my nose" or "This is my ring". The tutor then asks the student to point to his/her nose, or ring. If the student is hesitant to use parts of his/her body, you can use a puppet or picture.
Intermediate Fluency/Near Native Fluency

Cutting Parts

The student can cut out parts of pictures from various pages of a magazines that are related, like bumpers, windshields, wheels, etc., and reconstruct the item by cutting and pasting on blank paper. This gets to be great fun when the parts are all different sizes, and the reconstructed object has an amusing look to it.

Parts can also be collected on separate sheets of paper, such as a page for bumpers, wheels, etc. Label the pages. Individual bumpers can also be labeled as the smaller bumper, the Ford bumper, the dented bumper, etc. Be sure student can talk about the object and what it represents. The student should be able to discuss how he/she made the object.

BINGO!

You and your student can make a grid on a piece of construction paper large enough to hold small pictures from your collection. The student pastes the pictures on the grid. The tutor is discussing and pointing to the items describing what the items are and what they are used for. The student can then cover the picture with a blank card when that item is named. If the student can, he should be encouraged to say the name of the item in order for him/her to cover the item with the blank card. Continue until all the pictures are covered. This is also great with numbers, different domains, etc. Encourage the student to find and collect pictures for this game.

Numbers and Symbols

Work with your student to identify pictures of items that represent numbers, such as THREE people, 25 Cents, One car, Five dollars, etc. Paste the pictures on one half of a 3 x 5 card. On the other half of the card, write the words or number that represents the picture. Cut the card in half using a jagged uneven pattern to make puzzle pieces out of the two halves.

Mix up the collection of cards halves. Depending on the level of the students, the tutor can have the students point to the correct pictures, say the correct word, develop a sentence, or even play card games with the halves.

Simon Says

The tutor or student plays the role of the leader. Simon gives all directions verbally while modeling them (TPR). Students are out of the game if they do not point or say the correct word. This game is great only when students feel very comfortable with using the TPR format. This works well to identify body parts, parts of machines, houses, cars, etc., and math, such as "Here are four fingers", "Let's take two steps forward".
Domain Pictures

As a class activity, collect pictures of a kitchen, bathroom, tools used at work, or other relevant domain. Students complete collages with these domain oriented pictures while the tutor is discussing the items. Students can label the items in the collages. Tutors and students can ask "Where is the....", "How many ...", "What color is...". In a work oriented environment, the collage should also include supervisors, bosses, company logos, safety signs, etc., even if these pictures are hand drawn by the students.

Concentration

The student names the pictures on the cards he has made that represent objects at work, home, etc. The cards are laid face down in some sort of grid, such as 4 across and 4 down. The students turn over two cards. If they can use the words in sentences, they keep the cards. If they cannot, another student can offer a sentence for the word. Students keep score by how many cards they have at the end of the game.

Tell Me a Picture

What I Like

Using a blank piece of paper, ask each student to fold the paper in quarters. Ask the student to draw a picture of something they want to buy in the first quarter. In the second quarter, ask them to draw a picture of someplace they want to go. In the third quarter, ask them to draw a picture of something they have that they like, and in the fourth quarter, a picture of an animal they like. Give them plenty of time. Ask them to label each quarter if they can.

In small groups, they can then share their pictures and explain each of them. Ask for a volunteer to explain the pictures he drew. This can also be adapted to work oriented domains, such as tools used; machines used; the largest machine, the noisiest machine; items made, etc.

A variation of this is have them complete the sentence "I like..." for Food, clothing, movies, television, movie stars, desserts, sports, colors, cars, etc., and draw pictures for each.
Do I Have Enough??

Ask the student to make a list of things he wants to buy, and if the student doesn't know how much the items cost, develop activities to assist him with the process to find out. Then, using monopoly money or pictures of money, give the student amounts of money that may or may not be enough to buy a certain item. Ask the student if he has enough to buy the item, and discuss his responses. Discuss how much change the student would receive if he has enough money to buy the item, or how much more money the student will need to obtain the item.

My Very Own Calendar

Using a current calendar, discuss such things as "the second Tuesday" or "every other Wednesday." Ask about their schedules and have them put their activities on the calendar. Ask questions such as "What will you be doing on the 2nd?", or "Are you free on the 24th?"

Polaroid Please

When students are from a common area of a plant or workplace, use polaroid pictures of the equipment to make games, discussions, and other activities. Convert some of the activities described in these handouts to activities that can be used with the polaroid pictures. Many times, the polaroid, or other types of snapshots, can be duplicated on a Xerox machine and used in these games. Whenever possible, duplicate several pictures so games like concentration can be played.
So, Your Student Wants a Workbook???

If your group of students has notebooks, you can make worksheets that are context based for them to use as homework. In many instances they don’t feel like they are learning without a workbook. Remember to use this only as one of many activities, and that this is not the way people acquire language.

If they have a section of new sounds, like "t" and "k", then you could have worksheets that have:

1) Find six words in your work area that begin with the letter "t".
2) Use each of these words in two sentences.
3) Find a picture or illustration of five words that begin with the letter "k".

If they have a section of new words they have learned, like "acid" and "truck", then you could have worksheets that have:

1) Can you find the word "acid" on three things in your kitchen?
2) Do any of your cleaning supplies contain an ingredient that is an acid?
3) List three things to do if you have spilled acid on your arm.
4) Find a picture of an acid in an advertisement in the newspaper.
5) Can you find any larger words that have the word "acid" in it?
6) Can you use these new words in a sentence?
7) Find a picture in a newspaper or magazine that illustrate a word from your list. Use that word in a sentence that describes the picture.

If they have a section with new verbs, you could have worksheets with questions like:

1) How many definitions does that verb have in the dictionary?
2) Can you use the verb in a sentence if the event happened yesterday?
3) Can you use the verb in a sentence if the event will happen tomorrow?
4) Can you list five verbs that describe actions at work?
5) Can you use these five verbs in sentences?
6) (If "talk" is one of the verbs....) Find pictures in a newspaper or magazine that illustrate the verb "talk".
7) (If "hold" is one of the verbs....) Find pictures in a newspaper or magazine that illustrate the verb "hold".
8) Find a picture in a newspaper or magazine that illustrate a verb.

If they have a section on Idioms, you could have worksheets with questions like:

1) Use the idiom "caught cold" in two different sentences.
2) Can you define the idiom "That’s OK".
3) Can you find a picture in a newspaper or magazine that has an idiom in the caption?
Lesson Planning is a process that begins with sharing information and skills, and ultimately concludes with the transfer of ownership of the information and skills from the tutor to the student.

The process includes:

- Review of information they already own.
- Survey of new information they have identified as a priority.
- Develop an understanding of new information.
- Transfer ownership of the new information to the student.
- Restate the information to insure understanding.
- Confirm the information is now part of the student's environment.
- Plan as a team for the next session.

Here's a description of each of these elements of the process:

Review of information they already own.

This can be a variety of activities including discussions, demonstrations, illustrations, outlines, quizzes, questions and answers, graphs, charts, etc., that indicate the student has received the information and skills contained in previous lessons.

Survey of new information they have identified as a priority.

In a student-centered approach, the student is empowered with control over much of the information being discussed and learned.

This information is the vehicle for the tutor to enhance the student's skills and enable the student to leave with vital information and skills that can be applied immediately to the student's life. The skills and information learned using the student's own questions and issues is retained by the student because of its relevance to the student's life.

Develop an understanding of new information.

The tutor combines his or her own experiences, skills, and information with the materials available through the library, bringing in other resources and activities as necessary, first to model and then to encourage the student to interact and interpret the information and skills for themselves. The tutor continuously checks for understanding and accuracy during this development stage.

Transfer ownership of the new information to the student.

A person retains only 20% of what they see and hear, but 90% of what they teach. By developing activities that ask the student to interact and interpret the information and skills in the form of a report, diagram, demonstration or other activity that changes the role of the student to one who can report and interpret what he/she has learned.

Restate the information to insure understanding.

The tutor restates the information, reviews key points, key skills learned to correct any misinformation or weaknesses. Throughout this activity, the tutor is continually encouraging the student to interpret the information and skills for their own use. The student can then transfer the information and skills to their own notebooks for future reference.

Confirm the information is now part of the student's environment.

Ownership can be considered transferred if the student can discuss the information, their opinion of the information, and explain the skills learned. The team may, for example, discuss the student's notes to confirm the information and skill transfer has been complete.

Plan as a team for the next session.

Cooperative planning of the next session can help the student and tutor focus on what pieces need to be reviewed or further developed.
I believe that the tutor must be very flexible in their planning. One way to accomplish this is to provide the tutor with a series of frameworks to guide them, but not provide such specific information that they tutor is too focused on the specific information to adjust to the student's needs. The time frames are shown as a percentage of the whole, since I have found that lessons can be anywhere from 1 hour to 2 1/2 hours.

In light of this, I usually use a lesson plan framework for ESL that looks something like this:

Review - 15%
The tutor should review, model and restate words, concepts and activities from the last session. The tutor could use pictures, objects, or props from the previous lesson to remind students of words or concepts. Once this is modeled the tutor could encourage the students to respond/interact and review this information. This could be a clustering activity with small groups clustering key words that describe what they did during the last lesson, and ultimately an outline or narrative that is presented to the class by someone from the small group.

Questions/Priorities of Student - 10%
It is important that the tutor take the time to discover any 'hidden agendas' or issues that any of the students may have, such as a bill received in the mail, something that happened at work, or a question about a sign or advertisement someone observed. The students should be encouraged to make a note of any questions they have between classes, and these questions should be addressed at this time, too.

This activity serves several purposes:

1) It provides the tutor with the opportunity to identify topics of high interest or high priority that could be further explored as the content for future lessons.

2) It provides the students with informal conversation to practice their skills and listen to the tutor's use of/modeling of English.

3) It demonstrates to the students that their questions and needs are being addressed by the tutor.

4) It provides them with information that is relevant and important to the learner and therefore, easily retained.

Modeling - 15%
The tutor utilizes the Context-Level/Method/Activity framework previously discussed. The tutor models the information or the activity to be done by the students, providing the most language rich environment possible for the students to hear.

Activity - 15%
The class breaks into smaller groups and conducts the activity modeled. Higher level students can be asked to work with lower level students, but English must be the language spoken.

Reports/Demonstrations - 15%
The class reconvenes and each group reports its findings, shows its activities, and/or generally reports their activities to the group. The tutor encourages and supports these reports, and continuously restates the information in the report before the next report is given.

Review/Summarize - 10%
The tutor continues to model the language by restating what was done today, what the key concepts were, and what was accomplished.

Students Individually Review - 10%
Each student is given a few minutes to enter some of this information in their notebooks. Notebooks could include sections on:

- New Words
- New Sounds
- Idioms
- Stories (LEA)
- Word Patterns Learned
- Calendar of Events
- Handouts provided by Tutor

Next Week's Activities - 10%
Based on what the lesson accomplished, the tutor could discuss with the students what the next week's context may be. It may include:

a) Continuation of today's context and activities, or
b) A new topic chosen by the students and tutor.

In either case, the group should discuss what they need to bring to the next meeting, such as supplies, magazines, photographs, etc., in preparation for the activities. The tutor should delegate as much of this as possible to get the students involved, and enable the students to 'own' the lesson. (It also improves attendance!)
Tutor's Instructions

Here's a look at the tutor's responsibilities. Remember-it's not going to work unless we accept all the responsibilities involved. These responsibilities will help both the tutor and student have a successful experience.

YOUR Class - During the tutor training, your responsibilities include:

1] Participating at all sessions.
2] Completing the homework and class work assignments successfully.
3] Agreeing to actively comply with the responsibilities of being a tutor as outlined in the materials presented to the tutor by the program.

YOUR Match - During the work with the student, the responsibilities include:

1] Planning for quality lessons.
2] Addressing the student's needs.
3] Using approved student-centered, context-based tutor training techniques.
4] Attending any required follow-up sessions, continuing education classes, or support meetings.
5] Keeping accurate records, including the tutor's and student's hours.
6] Reporting any changes in the status of the match; changes in any addresses or phone numbers.
7] Reporting the hours for the tutor and the student at least quarterly using the post cards or sheets in the newsletter.
8] Returning the student records to the program in the event the tutor and the student are no longer meeting.
9] Asking questions whenever necessary to insure success for you and the student.

YOUR Program - During your volunteer work with the program, your responsibilities include:

1] Attending any required follow-up sessions, continuing education classes, or support meetings.
2] Keeping accurate records, including the tutor's and the student's hours.
3] Reporting any changes in the status of the match; changes in any addresses or phone numbers.
4] Reporting the tutor's and student's hours at least quarterly using the reporting forms from your program.
5] Returning the student records to the program in the event the tutor and student are no longer meeting.
6] Attending our program's activities, and encouraging the student to also attend program activities that 'connect' the tutor and student with their peers.
7] Responding to the program's phone calls.
8] Asking questions whenever you feel you need clarification.

Library offers steps to literacy

By Anne M. Peterson
North County News

Some people escape to the library to enjoy a little peace and quiet.
But for 32-year-old Ken Camarena, his weekly visits to the Taft Library mean he's one step closer to being able to read more than he could the day before.

As a member of the Orange Public Library's adult literacy program, Camarena is able to receive free tutoring from volunteers who donate time to teach adults how to read.

Camarena said learning to read means he'll be able to earn more.

money driving big rigs.

"I had to prove to myself that I could do it," he said. "Other people give up. If you have a negative attitude, you can't do it. It's helping me a lot."

The program began in September 1991 and more than a year later, it's flourishing with approximately 70 students. Students' ages range from 19 to 70.

"I was a teacher in New Zealand so I naturally want to teach people to read," said Iona Waller, Camarena's tutor. "I have that natural link between books and the library."

As of Jan. 1, the program, which began through a federal grant, will run on state grant dollars for the next five years.

Kerry Duff, literacy program assistant, said the grant's intent is to eventually wean the program of all state funding.

"The intent is to make it such a necessary program for the city that one day it'll be taken over by the city," she said.

Duff said the program begins at a very elementary level so someone who doesn't know how to read doesn't get frustrated.

"They've been dealing with lying their whole lives," she said. "They're very clever and have amazing ways to get around reading and writing."

Tutors receive a one-hour orientation before working in pairs or one-on-one with their students.

Camarena said working with Waller is helpful.

"It's like in school, one-on-one is better than teaching a whole class," she said.

Waller teaches according to the student's needs.

"It's best to go with what they're interested in," she said. "If they're interested in football, you don't mess around with growing roses."
NEWSFLASH...

International Literacy Day

On September 8 Partners In Reading celebrated International Literacy Day. A proclamation in honor of literacy was read at the City Council Chambers, and student Crystal Husband read an essay that she had written. The Mayor recognized all those involved in the literacy program.

A reception and open-house followed on the literacy office lawn. Students, tutors, librarians, members of the community, and interested bystanders attracted by the balloons, music, and food had a chance to mingle and find out more about the program. Those present also had a chance to see the first edition of Voices, a book of student stories. These books are available at the literacy office.

International Literacy Day was proclaimed by UNESCO and is celebrated around the world.

Literacy Program Re-funded!

The Orange Public Library is extremely happy to announce that the U.S. Department of Education has awarded a $35,000 grant to continue Partners In Reading for another year. Congratulations to those who worked on the grant application.

Reading Educators Question Program's Advertising

The International Reading Association is voicing concern about the marketing and advertising of "Hooked on Phonics," a reading instruction program published by Gateway Educational Products, Inc. of Orange, California.

Reading educators are concerned that advertising for the program makes unreasonable promises that no single reading program can keep.

Dear Al,

How can I improve my spelling?

Mistakes A. Plenty, Orange

Dear Mistakes,

Remember even the most educated people have problems spelling. As for me, I keep a dictionary nearby so I can check the words I’m not sure about.

However, spelling problems can also be related to a weakness in phonics—the sounds each letter of the alphabet makes. If you know the sounds of each letter, when you hear a strange word you can "sound it out."

There are some words that defy being sounded out. For some of these you just have to rely on memory.

In short, to improve your spelling:

1) Review your phonics,
2) Know how to use a dictionary,
3) See the book reviews of Patterns In Spelling. Maybe this workbook will give you the practice you need.

Good Luck (oops),
Al

Move the letters of the underlined word around, and you'll have the answer.

ACROSS CLUES
1. Joan did not ____ to say my name wrong.
4. Sue likes to ____ big words.
7. ____ said he saw a rat down by the dock.
8. Who knows how to fix this television set?
9. How long did it ____ Kate to paint that picture?
11. The robber took Dave's ____ box as well as other loot.
12. We ____ sad when all the kids left.

DOWN CLUES
2. Let's have a cup of tea after we ____ dinner.
3. Our team has ____ won six games.
5. I ____ that he always wears the same pants.
6. I ____ that the house was dark, so I knew no one was home.
8. I really hate to work outside during this ____.
10. It knocked me for a loop when Dad jumped into the ____.

Various ads for the product suggest that "Hooked on Phonics" can successfully teach reading to adult learners, young children, people with reading problems, and people learning English.

Here's what an expert, Dr. Jean Osborn has to say:

"So what does 'Hooked on Phonics' offer its students (we are told it doesn't matter if these students are children or adults) who sit down and plug into the tapes? How does the program move through 10 years of reading instruction, practice, and experience in a mere two hours?...

If children and adults can learn to read using 'Hooked on Phonics' it would seem a wonderful thing. That they can learn to read with such a program seems unlikely."

Both the International Reading Association and the Center for the Study of Reading have requested data on the program's success and information about its authors. "We have not been successful in acquiring this information...," says Dr. Osborn.

The Very Cool Pool Party

Those who attended the student/tutor pool and barbecue party on July 18th kept cool during the 90 degree plus weather by lounging around (and in) the pool, drinking June's amazing homemade lemon-limeade, and eating barbecue chicken and other picnic goodies.

A million thanks go out to June, Super Tutor of the Month, for hosting the party.
Lori and I left from home to have a good and fun weekend. We arrived in Bakersfield at three a.m. Saturday morning, and went to bed. We woke up at eight a.m. Saturday morning and got ready to go to the race track. We realized that I forgot my helmet. After Lori bought me a new one we went on to the track. When I got to the track I had a flat tire and had to switch the spare tire which was in good shape. My trouble started when I pulled the car off the trailer and it ran out of gas. I put some gas in the car and again trouble struck— it wouldn’t start! I finally got it started and drove it over for our tech check. The car was still not running right, so I worked on it to get it to run better. The fuel dampened the engine and it caught fire. Somebody put it out.

I made one pass down the track, but the car was still not running well. I worked on it again and took the carburetor apart. But I had a tricky time finding gaskets to fit it. We decided to pack up and go home. On the way going up the "grapevine", there were a lot of cars running hot! And so was I! Our good weekend turned into a bad weekend.

My Mother-in-law came from Guadalajara, Mexico, Sunday night at 9:00 p.m. My wife was so happy. She telephoned her sister Maria and brother Tino. By 9:30 p.m. all the family was together. My mother-in-law was so happy to be with us.

--Salvador Ponce

Sunday morning the traffic was speeding too fast. One car I saw went out of control. It was on the 22 Freeway. It was approaching the on ramp to the 5 and 57 freeway. When he started the turn, his car went out of control and went into a spin. The driver was able to control the car.

Workshop Generates Ideas

The continuing education workshop on "Encouraging Writing in the Tutoring Session" proved fun and informative. Special thanks to the following tutors in attendance for their extra measure of dedication: Sue Burns, Stephanie Files, Rosalind Gardner, Patty Harp, Jim Macon, LeAnne Pleasant, Miriam Rosen, and Janet Templeton. Guest speaker Jerry Edwards, the Santa Fe Springs Literacy Specialist, suggested many creative activities for tutors and students to use together:

FILL IN THE BLANK -- the tutor writes out a sentence with a key word missing. The student then supplies a word of his/her own choice to the sentence. (There are no right or wrong answers)

Ex. I feel _______ on Monday morning.

The student might say "grumpy" or "cheerful" or whatever comes to mind. Reverse roles and have the student dictate a sentence with a blank for the tutor to fill in.

COMIC STRIP CAPERS -- white out the words of your favorite comic strip. You may also want to photo-copy and/or enlarge it. Have the student create the captions.

CAN YOU TOP THIS? -- Together think of a noun and write it down. Build a sentence by adding words or phrases. Continue as far as you can.

EX. Student: Let's do a sentence about a horse.
Tutor: The fat horse.
Student: The fat horse hates to gallop.
Tutor: The fat horse that eats too much hates to gallop.
Student: The fat horse that eats too much hates to gallop during feeding time.

The sillier the better! Run-on sentences are okay.
Last Chance for Freedom

This was a great book. I would recommend everyone to read it! It is very easy to understand and read. If you hate to read 'baby' books because you do not think you can read a book about something that really happened, I am telling you, read this book!

The author of the book is Marcie Miller Standelhoten. I would also recommend you read The Freedom Side. It is the first story about Last Chance For Freedom.

These books are located on the first time reader shelf of the library (the New Reader Collection). I hope you will enjoy these books as much as I did. Remember, we can all read, so do not give up on yourself if you think these books are too hard.

Patterns In Spelling

Since choosing to use this series, my student and I have completed three lessons of Book 3. In general, my impressions of the series are quite favorable. The series focuses on the patterns of words in an effort to aid in spelling. The idea of finding and learning patterns seems to be a logical way to improve spelling abilities.

Breaking down words into sections and patterns enables the student to see the correctly spelled portions of a word that he or she has written. Thus, the learning process is more positive, focusing on what the student has spelled correctly, rather than what is wrong. When certain patterns are learned, the student realizes that he or she is able to spell many more words, all of which use that same pattern.

My one objection so far involves the use of lengthy and complex rules to determine whether or not a final consonant is doubled when adding an ending. These rules seem too lengthy and confusing to be especially useful.

Overall I am quite pleased with the "Patterns In Spelling" series and I hope that my student and I will have continued success.

"The Range of Light"

Multi-Media Presentation Featured at Friends' Semi-Annual Meeting Nov. 3

"The Range of Light," a musical and photographic interpretation of the Sierra Nevada, will be the featured program at the Friends' semi-annual meeting Wednesday evening, Nov. 3. The program begins at 7:00 p.m. in the Main Library Community Room, 101 N. Center St.

Admission is free, and the public is welcome.

Presented by Ranger Jim Long, "The Range of Light" portrays the spirit of California's mighty mountain range as reflected in the writings and philosophy of John Muir. This professional four-projector multi-image program was photographed throughout the Sierra Nevada wilderness over a 30-year time span by Ranger Long, who grew up there and has combined his love of the mountains with his love for classical music and knowledge of computers in creating this work.

The program brings to life the mountains in all their glory, depicting sequences of natural cycles: dawn to dusk; the meadows and flowers; a Sierra river from its birth as a single drop of melting snow, passing in turn through forest glade, rapid waterfall, moonlit canyon, and underwater grotto, before disappearing in a cloud of mist in Yosemite's falls; and the cycle of the seasons amidst the red fir forests and quaking aspen groves.

With an introduction in Muir's own words, spoken by naturalist Carl Sharsmith and accompanied by musical selections from the works of Greig, Smetana, Dvorak and others, "The Range of Light" offers a moving and inspirational portrait of what John Muir called "... the most divinely beautiful of all the mountain chains I have ever seen."

Since 1980, "The Range of Light" has been seen by more than 100,000 people, including groups from the Sierra Club, parks, schools, churches, libraries, governmental organizations and, in 1989, the House Appropriations Committee in Washington, D.C.

Mark your calendar now for this exciting program -- and join the Friends on Nov. 3 for a most enjoyable evening high in the Sierras.

Dear Friends,

Were you at OPL's Birthday Party? If not, you missed a real whiz-bang affair! Arline Minor outdid herself this time. She had help from a lot of truly wonderful Friends members of course, but it surely wouldn't have all come together so spectacularly without Arline's direction. Way to go, Arline!

Sadly, the Board has decided to discontinue Silent Auctions at El Modena and Taft Branch Libraries. Shorter hours and fewer days open have made auctions at the branches not only far less profitable, but also much more difficult for those in charge to service. The Silent Auction at Main Library will continue, however, and we hope you will find time to check it out each month. The crew has lots of incredible and fascinating offerings for you.

Hope to see you at our Fall General Meeting on Wednesday, November 3. Other than at book sales, there aren't too many opportunities to meet other Friends members --and OUR Friends are definitely worth knowing.

In Friendship,
Sherry Cooper

OPL Birthday Party Report

What a time we had at the Library Birthday Party on August 14th. Never have we had so many people at a book sale. There must have been 2500 there as people kept coming and going all day.

We do appreciate our Seniors who are always supportive of our community...their band played, they sang and danced for us, and everyone enjoyed them. "Bo the Clown" entertained the big people and the little ones with bubbles and balloons. "Opal the Clown" gave out lots of hugs...there is a four year old who is still talking about you. She was out there waving the cars in from Chapman. The Tinman and Officer McGruff were a big hit. Jan Harrison had an adoring group of little people listening to stories.

Our City Council showed they had that volunteer spirit. Mayor Beyer and his wife welcomed people. Councilman Mike Spurgeon sold books and popcorn. Councilwoman Joanne Coontz sold books, and then turned into an ardent shopper. Councilman Fred Barrera and Councilman Mark Murphy also sold books. They all worked hard all day.

All the heavy work of hauling boxes of books, setting up tables, and getting a piano out to the driveway was accomplished by: Robert Buchtel, Rudy Estrada, Manny Puentes, Bill Hagblum, Richard Jeffs, Alberto Vaca, and Luther Broome. I hope they are still talking to me. Thanks fellows.

We had some new helpers that we hope will work another time:
Helen Viviano, Jean Amos, Helene Taylor, and Marjorie Rice.

Our community joined together in friendship, we had fun, and made $1,660.00, which will buy books and magazines for everyone to enjoy.

Dear Business Leader,

Thank you for taking the time to review our newsletter!

Let me just highlight the fact that there are several ways your business can make use of the free literacy services offered by Orange Public Library.

- You may want to refer employees who need help with their reading and writing as the need arises. Keep our phone number (714) 282-8916 in a convenient place. We will set up an appointment to meet and assess each student.

- You may have space at your work-site - a conference room or meeting place - which could be set aside for your employees to receive their one-on-one tutoring.

- You may want to set up incentives for your employees to participate in the program and improve their literacy skills. Perhaps you could underwrite the cost of their workbooks (about $6 each) or give them compensated time.

- You may want to encourage your employees to become tutors.

Our tutors are trained to be "student oriented" and this often means concentrating on work-related materials. If your employees wish to sharpen their reading and writing as it pertains to work, this can be an emphasis in the one-to-one tutoring sessions.

Please call if you have any questions. Library literacy programs exist to serve the community so we want to make sure you are well informed about what we can offer.

Sincerely,

Rosanne Miller

THE GRADED WORD LIST: QUICK GAUGE OF READING ABILITY
Margaret LaPray and Ramon Ross

ADMINISTRATION

1. Type out each list of ten words on an index card.

2. Begin with a card that is at least two years below the student's grade level assignment.

3. Ask the student to read the words aloud to you. If he misreads any on the list, drop to easier lists until he makes no errors. This indicated the base level.

4. Write down all correct and incorrect responses, or use diacritical marks on your copy of the test. For example, lonely might be read and recorded as lovely. Apparatus might be recorded as a par' a tus.

5. Encourage the student to read words he does not know so that you can identify the techniques he uses for word identification.

6. Have the students read from increasingly difficult lists until he misses at least three words.

The list in which a student misses no more than one of the ten words is the level at which he can read independently. Two errors indicate his instructional level. Three or more errors identify the level at which reading material will be too difficult for him.

An analysis of a student’s errors is useful. Among those which occur with greatest frequency are the following:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Error</th>

<tr>

As with other reading tasks, teacher observation of student behavior is essential. Such things as posture, facial expression, and voice quality may signal restlessness, lack of assurance, or frustration while reading.

Story Frame
by G.L. Fowler

Purpose  To focus the reader on basic story content, including the setting and the main characters.

Grade Levels  Regular students in primary grades; less able readers in middle and upper grades.

Description  The Story Frame requires that a student focus on the main characters, the setting, the major events, and the conclusion in a story. Enough information is given in the frame to enable students to put together the basic information required. In primary grades, the teacher will want to work with students as a class or in smaller groups and develop the Story Frame with student input. In middle and upper grades, less prepared readers can complete the activity on their own, filling in the essential information. The Story Frame may be simplified or made more complex by reducing or increasing the number of main events in the story that are to be included. It is an excellent device to use with students who need to work with basic information in a story in order to comprehend the idea of story grammar and to apply this concept to an appropriate literature selection.

Sample Story Frame for Cinderella, by Charles Perrault

The story takes place in a make believe kingdom where Cinderella lives with her stepmother and sisters in a nice house.

Cinderella, a stepsister, is a character in the story who has to do all the chores around the house like a servant.

The fairy godmother is another character in the story who does magic and helps Cinderella go the to ball.

A problem occurs when Cinderella is hurrying home at midnight and drops one of her glass slippers at the ball.

After that, the handsome prince searches in the kingdom for a young lady who can put on the glass slipper and have it fit, and the shoe doesn't fit any of the young ladies who try it on.

The problem is solved when Cinderella tries on the glass slipper, and it fits perfectly.

The story ends with the handsome prince and Cinderella getting married right away, and they live happily ever after.
The teacher may wish to make the Story Frame simpler by providing space for only one character and fewer major events in the story. On the other hand, the teacher may desire to make the outline more complicated by adding more spaces for additional characters and events. Also, the teacher may want to vary the space provided for the various entries. He or she no doubt will want to tailor the Story Frame to fit a specific title, thereby providing a more prescriptive outline, once he or she becomes more familiar with the activity.
Plot Chart
by Barbara Schmidt

Purpose  To focus the reader on basic story content, including the setting and the main characters, while requiring students to supply more verbal or written information on their own.

Grade Levels  Regular students in primary grades; less prepared readers in middle and upper grades.

Description  The Plot Chart requires that students focus on the main characters, the setting, the major events, and the conclusion in a story. However, it asks students to use more verbal and written skills in recording this information. The four guide words Somebody, Wanted, But, and So provide enough structure to enable students to work through the task. In primary grades, the teacher will want to work closely with students in class groups or smaller groups, eliciting from them the necessary information. Generating this data as well as refining it through discussion provides a productive learning action. In middle and upper grades, less able readers may meet with the teacher to discuss various possibilities for completion of the Plot Chart, but will work on their own (possibly with partners or in cooperative groups as determined by the teacher) to complete the task. The chart gives enough guidance for students, yet provides some open endedness to accommodate lengthier responses. The Plot Chart is a step up in difficulty from the Story Frame and is designed to give the reader an opportunity to use his or her own language and ideas.

Purpose To make readers focus on the essentials in the story, thereby increasing their comprehension and analysis of the story.

Grade Levels Use with primary and less prepared students with teacher help and guidance. In grades 4-8, students may complete the chart on their own or in cooperative learning groups.

Description The teacher uses the basic design in the Story Chart and gives each square a title. Titles are selected by the teacher because of their importance in the story, and because the teacher wants students to focus on these areas and generate full comprehension of each one. Titles will vary with each story, although some of them will remain the same, e.g., main characters, setting, the problem, resolution of the problem, and theme. Students read a chapter or segment of a story, then begin filling in the chart. By the end of the story they should have completed the chart and made the necessary conclusions. In class or small group discussions, students share their chart or part of it, depending on the teacher’s purpose or the time available. In another strategy the teacher puts the basic design, including titles for a specific book, on large pieces of butcher paper and has students add their information (no duplications). When this task is completed, the possibilities for discussion and writing are virtually limitless. This is one of the most comprehensive and challenging Engagement Activities available to students, and is invaluable in developing a high level of story comprehension.

Knowledge Chart
by Jim and Joan Macon

Purpose  To enable the reader to activate prior knowledge concerning a specific topic, then listen to or read about that topic, and finally list new knowledge gained.

Grade Levels  Regular students in primary, middle, and upper grades; less prepared readers in the middle and upper grades.

Description  The Knowledge Chart is a very versatile Engagement Activity that can be used in a variety of settings. A good strategy is to have students pool their information about a certain topic, clustering it on the chalkboard, a transparency, or on paper, thereby making it available to all students. However, encouraging individual students to access their own prior knowledge is also an effective practice. You may wish to vary the procedure. After a plan is adopted, students read or listen to a selection on the same topic, with students listing new knowledge gained individually or in a group, or with the teacher doing so. The Knowledge Chart works best if students have some knowledge about the topic but don’t know a great deal. If no prior knowledge exists, the teacher must build a knowledge bridge by discussing similar topics or information. This activity is also very effective with nonfiction materials. After the prior knowledge and new knowledge have been recorded and discussed, the teacher may move into the scheduled lesson, since a knowledge bridge now exists.

International Literacy Day

On September 8 Partners In Reading celebrated International Literacy Day. A proclamation in honor of literacy was read at the City Council Chambers, and student Crystal Husband read an essay that she had written. The Mayor recognized all those involved in the literacy program.

A reception and open-house followed on the literacy office lawn. Students, tutors, librarians, members of the community, and interested bystanders attracted by the balloons, music, and food had a chance to mingle and find out more about the program. Those present also had a chance to see the first edition of Voices, a book of student stories. These books are available at the literacy office.

International Literacy Day was proclaimed by UNESCO and is celebrated around the world.

Literacy Program Re-funded!

The Orange Public Library is extremely happy to announce that the U.S. Department of Education has awarded a $35,000 grant to continue Partners In Reading for another year. Congratulations to those who worked on the grant application.

"Hooked on Phonics"

Reading Educators Question Program's Advertising

The International Reading Association is voicing concern about the marketing and advertising of "Hooked on Phonics," a reading instruction program published by Gateway Educational Products, Inc. of Orange, California.

Reading educators are concerned that advertising for the program makes unreasonable promises that no single reading program can keep.

Dear Al,

How can I improve my spelling?

Mistakes A. Plenty, Orange

Dear Mistakes,

Remember even the most educated people have problems spelling. As for me, I keep a dictionary nearby so I can check the words I'm not sure about.

However, spelling problems can also be related to a weakness in phonics—the sounds each letter of the alphabet makes. If you know the sounds of each letter, when you hear a strange word you can "sound it out."

There are some words that defy being sounded out. For some of these you just have to rely on memory.

In short, to improve your spelling:

1) Review your phonics,
2) Know how to use a dictionary,
3) See the book reviews of Patterns In Spelling.

Maybe this workbook will give you the practice you need.

Good luck Luck (oops),
Al

Move the letters of the underlined word around, and you'll have the answer.

ACROSS CLUES
1. Joan did not ____ to say my name wrong.
2. Sue likes to ____ big words.
3. ____ said he saw a rat down by the dock.
4. Who knows ____ to fix this television set?
5. How long did it ____ Kate to paint that picture?
6. The robber took Dave's ____ box as well as other loot.
7. We ____ sad when all the kids left.
8. It knocked me for a loop when Dad jumped into the ____

DOWN CLUES
1. Let's have a cup of tea after we ____ dinner.
2. Our team has ____ won six games.
3. I ____ that he always wears the same pants.
4. I really hate to work outside during this ____
5. It took me a while to ______ when Dad jumped into the ____

Various ads for the product suggest that "Hooked on Phonics" can successfully teach reading to adult learners, young children, people with reading problems, and people learning English.

Here's what an expert, Dr. Jean Osborn has to say:

"So what does 'Hooked on Phonics' offer its students (we are told it doesn't matter if these students are children or adults) who sit down and plug into the tapes? How does the program move through 10 years of reading instruction, practice, and experience in a mere two hours?...

If children and adults can learn to read using 'Hooked on Phonics' it would seem a wonderful thing. That they can learn to read with such a program seems unlikely."

Both the International Reading Association and the Center for the Study of Reading have requested data on the program's success and information about its authors.
"We have not been successful in acquiring this information...," says Dr. Osborn.

The Very Cool Pool Party

Those who attended the student/tutor pool and barbecue party on July 18th kept cool during the 90 degree plus weather by lounging around (and in) the pool, drinking June's amazing homemade lemon-limeade, and eating barbecue chicken and other picnic goodies.

A million thanks go out to June, Super Tutor of the Month, for hosting the party.
Lori and I left from home to have a good and fun weekend. We arrived in Bakersfield at three a.m. Saturday morning, and went to bed. We woke up at eight a.m. Saturday morning and got ready to go to the race track. We realized that I forgot my helmet. After Lori bought me a new one we went on to the track. When I got to the track I had a flat tire and had to switch the spare tire which was in good shape. My trouble started when I pulled the car off the trailer and it ran out of gas. I put some gas in the car and again trouble struck— it wouldn't start! I finally got it started and drove it over for our tech check. The car was still not running right, so I worked on it to get it to run better. The fuel dampened the engine and it caught fire. Somebody put it out.

I made one pass down the track, but the car was still not running well. I worked on it again and took the carburetor apart. But I had a tricky time finding gaskets to fit it. We decided to pack up and go home. On the way going up the "grapevine", there were a lot of cars running hot! And so was I! Our good weekend turned into a bad weekend.

My Mother-in-law came from Guadalajara, Mexico, Sunday night at 9:00 p.m. My wife was so happy. She telephoned her sister Maria and brother Tino. By 9:30 p.m. all the family was together. My mother-in-law was so happy to be with us.

--Salvador Ponce

Sunday morning the traffic was speeding too fast. One car I saw went out of control. It was on the 22 Freeway. It was approaching the on ramp to the 5 and 57 freeway. When he started the turn, his car went out of control and went into a spin. The driver was able to control the car.

Workshop Generates Ideas

The continuing education workshop on "Encouraging Writing in the Tutoring Session" proved fun and informative. Special thanks to the following tutors in attendance for their extra measure of dedication: Sue Burns, Stephanie Files, Rosalind Gardner, Patty Harp, Jim Macon, LeAnne Pleasant, Miriam Rosen, and Janet Templeton. Guest speaker Jerry Edwards, the Santa Fe Springs Literacy Specialist, suggested many creative activities for tutors and students to use together:

FILL IN THE BLANK -- the tutor writes out a sentence with a key word missing. The student then supplies a word of his/her own choice to the sentence. (There are no right or wrong answers)

Ex. I feel _______ on Monday morning.

The student might say "grumpy" or "cheerful" or whatever comes to mind. Reverse roles and have the student dictate a sentence with a blank for the tutor to fill in.

COMIC STRIP CAPERS -- white out the words of your favorite comic strip. You may also want to photo-copy and/or enlarge it. Have the student create the captions.

CAN YOU TOP THIS? -- Together think of a noun and write it down. Build a sentence by adding words or phrases. Continue as far as you can.

EX. Student: Let's do a sentence about a horse.
    Tutor: The fat horse.
    Student: The fat horse hates to gallop.
    Tutor: The fat horse that eats too much hates to gallop.
    Student: The fat horse that eats too much hates to gallop during feeding time.

CHECK OUT THESE BOOKS

Last Chance for Freedom

This was a great book. I would recommend everyone to read it! It is very easy to understand and read. If you hate to read baby books because you do not think you can read a book about something that really happened, I am telling you, read this book!

The author of the book is Marcie Miller Standelhoten. I would also recommend you read The Freedom Side. It is the first story about Last Chance For Freedom.

These books are located on the first time reader shelf of the library (the New Reader Collection). I hope you will enjoy these books as much as I did. Remember, we can all read, so do not give up on yourself if you think these books are too hard.

Patterns In Spelling

Since choosing to use this series, my student and I have completed three lessons of Book 3. In general, my impressions of the series are quite favorable. The series focuses on the patterns of words in an effort to aid in spelling. The idea of finding and learning patterns seems to be a logical way to improve spelling abilities.

Breaking down words into sections and patterns enables the student to see the correctly spelled portions of a word that he or she has written. Thus, the learning process is more positive, focusing on what the student has spelled correctly, rather than what is wrong. When certain patterns are learned, the student realizes that he or she is able to spell many more words, all of which use that same pattern.

My one objection so far involves the use of lengthy and complex rules to determine whether or not a final consonant is doubled when adding an ending. These rules seem too lengthy and confusing to be especially useful.

Overall I am quite pleased with the "Patterns In Spelling" series and I hope that my student and I will have continued success.

LITERACY ACT BECOMES LAW

It was a historic moment for the literacy community when the National Literacy Act was signed into law (Public Law 102-73). In the committee report accompanying the Act, Congress had this to say about its overall intent:

The National Literacy Act is a comprehensive approach for improving the literacy and basic skill levels of adults by coordinating, integrating and investing in adult and family literacy programs at the federal, state, and local levels. All sectors including public, community-based volunteer, business, and industry programs should be in the provision of literacy services....The nation's literacy problems are closely associated with poverty and pose major threats to the economic well-being of the United States. Our future competitiveness...is severely hampered without an all-out attack on these problems....

LEGISLATION TARGETS EMPLOYERS

The Governor has signed into law a bill based upon the findings of the California Workforce Literacy Task Force. The new law, SB 647, requires firms with 25 or more employees to assist the employee in locating local literacy education programs, should the need arise. For a copy of SB 647, please call the Partners In Reading Office at 282-8916.

PROGRAM Focuses ON WORKPLACE LITERACY

With renewed funding from the U.S. Department of Education for 1992-93, Partners In Reading, the literacy program of Orange Public Library, will focus primarily on workplace literacy.

Employee literacy is critical for increased productivity, job advancement and adaptability to the changing needs of the workplace. An educated workforce is an asset to any company.

"Adults who can’t read cost America an estimated $225 billion each year in lost wages, lost taxes, basic skills training, unemployment compensation, prison and law enforcement."

Ken was an experienced and professional truck driver, but he lacked one thing: good reading skills.

Ken was able to pass this test with the help of Partners in Reading tutor Iona Waller. Knowing that this test meant the difference between employment or unemployment, the pair worked many long hours studying test questions and practicing reading.

Encouraged by this success, Ken is now ready to forge ahead and study for the Air Brakes Examination. Harold A. Haase, with Career Publishing Incorporated in Orange, had supplied the pair with study material for the CDL examination and was generous enough to donate the air brakes workbook to Ken in celebration of his accomplishment.

Saint Joseph Hospital and Literacy

Janice Tully, Employee Assistance Counselor in Personnel at Saint Joseph Hospital, regularly refers low literacy employees to Partners in Reading. Ms. Tully believes that the continued education of employees is a priority implied by the hospital’s official Values: service, justice, dignity and excellence.

She says “The ability to read is a gift of freedom and Partners in Reading fits exactly our Values at Saint Joseph Hospital.” Ms. Tully has made space available on the hospital grounds for employees to meet with their tutors. To book a meeting room, call her at (714)771-8122.

WAYS TO MOTIVATE A STUDENT

By Lou Sutcliffe

Devise an incentive plan:

* Use a credit/point system.

* Some type of competition might offer a challenge.

* Make progress charts.

* When the student has learned to read the driver's manual and passes the written test, the tutor provides a complimentary car wash.

* When student reaches a pre-determined spelling goal, (s)he is rewarded with a dictionary.

* Set a goal--subscription to a magazine of student's choice. Pay for it with 5 cents per word learned.

* List 300 words most often used. When each is learned transfer it to a "Learned Spelling List".

Use a tape recorder:

- Tape whole lessons for review or evaluation.

- Tape music for the lyrics.

- Provide a record of student progress in reading aloud.

- Tape READ Test as a record.

- Tape so student can answer tutor-recorded questions.

- Allow student to record own reading.

- Work from pre-taped drills.
- Record special reading materials.

- For homework, use excerpts from book tapes - could be used for summarizing critical thinking and sequencing.

Games:

* Make fantasy trips with the use of pictures or music.

* Use games such as Scrabble, Anagrams, Boggle, Spill 'n' Spell, and Perquackey. Using anagrams, have student use his name or that of a family member and spell out words from it.

* Modify existing games like Wheel of Fortune, Pictionary, Concentration, and Trivial Pursuit to student reading level.

* Buy or create board-style games using words and topics currently under study.

* Use Post-It notes to identify items around the tutoring area.

* A game of "Word Dominoes" could be created using hand-drawn or cut out pictures on index cards in combination with words. A domino with a picture of a car, for example, would be matched with its written counterpart on another domino. A variation--use jigsaw puzzle pieces of word/picture pairs. Make them or buy blanks at a teacher's supply store.

* Make a picture of the way a word is written, using the word itself:

lit lit  lit lit  lit lit lit lit lit lit
lit lit  lit lit  lit lit lit lit lit lit
lit lit  lit lit  lit lit lit lit lit
lit lit  lit lit  lit lit lit lit lit
lit lit lit lit  lit lit  lit lit lit lit
lit lit lit lit  lit lit  lit lit lit lit

* Teach student a finger alphabet (signing), so that spelling becomes a physical experience.
Reading activities:

- Re-write/simplify materials to reader's level.
- Finding a "Word For the Week" could be a student's homework.
- Go to the library and chose and check-out a book.
- Watch a movie together as a basis for language experience. Read reviews of the movie prior to seeing it, and discuss student's opinion.
- Follow a sports team in the paper together.

Maps:

- Plan an imaginary trip using tour brochures from travel agencies.
- Find the way around the city or neighborhood.
- Learn the names of all the streets on the way to work, to the doctor, to the library, etc.

Use a Camera:

- Take a roll of 12 pictures during the week, including warning signs, street name signs, places visited often, and signs of special importance to the student.
- Take a field trip to the student's neighborhood; take pictures of items of interest to the student; make notes on their location and importance; review and integrate during lesson.

Writing Activities:

- A daily journal of student's thoughts records progress and provides an avenue for self-expression.
- A dialog journal provides a chance for give and take with the tutor through both reading and writing.
- Exchange notes/messages.
* Have a penny-saver sale. List all the items to sell, design an ad.

* Write letters/cards to one another on trips.

* Fill out a charge card application and discuss credit buying.

* With tutor's help, prepare a card such as a Christmas card to be sent to family and friends.

* Student writes a story to read to a child or grandchild.

* Plan and write down a play to read aloud. Perhaps the student and tutor could write their own parts.

* Write names of TV programs watched in past week (copied from TV Guide)

* Put words in thought balloons over photos.

* List several things the student plans to do in the upcoming week. At the session a week later, go over them to see which ones were.

* Have a student write a poem using known vocabulary (possibly from word patterns).

* Give the student a pocket calendar to keep track of tutoring sessions and other important dates.

* Have student write a hard-to-remember word on something unusual, such as a banana or orange.

* Use a typewriter, computer, or word processor.

* If the student has a young child, plan a birthday party, including recipes, shopping list, planned games, guest list, invitations, time line, and calendar.

Using Real-Life Materials:

* Have the student bring some kind of reading material that is regularly found around his/her house.

* Use materials related to student's interests: auto repair manual, cookbook, appliance manual, hobby text.
* Find out student's life involvements (job, hobby, past experiences) and incorporate them into lesson plan.

* Using a menu from a local restaurant, plan a meal together and then go to the restaurant--order it and eat it!

Constructions:

* Spell out words using tactile methods:

  1. Mix 1/4 cup liquid laundry detergent and 3 tablespoons powdered paint in a large plastic bag that can be re-sealed. Squeeze out air and seal. Put bag on table and spell out words on plastic bag using a finger. Erase by smoothing out bag.

  2. Use pieces of felt or a stack of old buttons to construct letters for spelling.

  3. Make "word machines" pin wheels, to show prefixes, suffixes, and compound words (see next page).
Cut and Paste
Students make collages around a topic, such as transportation, food, clothing, etc. Categorize the items. Introduce an item and ask the student to find any representative picture they can of that item. Have the student cut the items out and paste them on papers. Discuss these findings.

Picture Matching
The teacher displays a drawing, photo, etc., and the student selects words from a vocabulary list which can apply to that visual.

Following Directions on Tape
Make your own audiotapes of commands, such as, "Draw a large blue triangle at the top of the paper. Then draw a red square inside the triangle." Students do the work at home.

Board Games
Make up games. Use any path-type game board with vocabulary cards that are slightly modified to include a number from one to six on the same side of the card as the word. The student rolls the die, draws a vocabulary card, and identifies it. If the student is correct, he can move forward the number of squares indicated on the card. If the student is incorrect, he has to move backwards.

Picture Dictionaries
Student pastes the pictures he has identified in a composition book, and writes the name of the object beside the picture. Student then writes one or two sentences using the word. Pictures can be categorized or alphabetized in their dictionary.

Recordings
Pre-recorded stories that the student is reading or going to read will provide a language model when the tutor is not present.

Picture Descriptions
Provide a picture and have the student cluster words describing the picture.

Visual Arts and Crafts/ Cooking
On a piece of paper, show the various steps one goes through to make a certain product, such as popcorn, candied apples, or a basket, by having examples at various stages of completion. Besides each example, write the instructions in very simple sentences.

Connecting Words
Give students a sheet of paper with a key word from their vocabulary or discussion and ask the student to connect as many vocabulary words to it as possible.

Ex:
F
P E A S

Line-out
The tutor writes words on a sheet of paper. Most of the words should be related somehow, but some should not be. The tutor provides a definition in context. The student lines out or erases any words that don’t belong on the list.

Context Clues
The tutor invents a nonsense word and continues to add context clues until the student determines what the word should be.

Nerglit
A Nerglit helps people
A Nerglit helps sick people
A Nerglit helps sick people at a hospital
A Nerglit helps sick people at a hospital by operating (answer = doctor or surgeon)

Language Experience Mapping or Clustering
The tutor or student writes a word on a piece of paper. The student responds with any word or phrase that comes to mind. These phrases are attached to the original word.

2. Determine what part of the machine will include the consistent sound(s) and place the letter(s) on the card with the two cuts.
3. Determine the part of the word(s) that should be placed on the second card. These sounds or word parts will create new words once the second card is placed properly in the card with the two cuts. See Figure #1.
4. When inserted properly, the word machine makes new words. See figure #3.

CALPEP (California Adult Learner Progress Evaluation Process) asks learners to assess their own progress using the following learner outcome measures:

1. Progress learners make toward achieving their reading and writing goals;
2. Changes in learners' literacy practices;
3. Improvements in learners' perceptions of their literacy progress; and,
4. The impact that literacy improvement has made on learners' lives.

In this way, CALPEP is not "tied" to any particular curriculum, but is truly learner-centered. That is, literacy progress is determined by improvements made by learners in the above CALPEP outcome areas -- which, in turn, are based on materials related to their reading and writing goals.

Information about progress in these CALPEP outcome areas is gathered primarily from the form which follows. Tutors collect this information from learners during the first month, and again during the subsequent CALPEP reporting cycles -- usually occurring at six-month intervals.

Progress is determined by comparing changes in the CALPEP items made by learners over time (e.g., 6 months, 12 months, etc.). For this reason, it is important that tutors be specific about learner goals and provide accurate information on the CALPEP form about changes in these goals and other CALPEP areas. With this in mind, it is important for the tutor and learner to maintain copies of the completed CALPEP form and review progress during each semiannual reporting period.

TUTOR: Please discuss the CALPEP outcome areas with the adult learner when using this form as an Initial Report or if using it for the Semiannual Report, and return the form to the office. Please keep copies for yourself and the learner. Thank You!

1. Identifying Learner's Reading Goals

An important aspect of learner progress is attainment of specific reading goals. In this section, the tutor and learner identify at least one specific reading goal — then use materials related to the goal to determine the learner's progress towards being able to read the goal-related materials; or if the learner has achieved the goal, determining whether the learner can apply this new knowledge to other situations. (Only one Reading Goal will be used for CALPEP analysis. You may duplicate this page for other reading goals if you wish to set additional goals not to be included in the statewide analysis.)

PART A:

- Setting Reading Goal

Tutor: Ask the learner to complete the following sentence orally regarding READING GOAL:

"I want to read better so that I can read ...

(Tutor: ask learner to identify material s/he wants to be able to read)

... and be able to ...

(Tutor: ask learner what s/he wants to be able to do with this ability)

PART B:

Determining Progress Towards Reaching Reading Goal

Tutor: Mark only one box ...

a) With regard to the materials selected for the above goal, the learner ...

- Reads very little or not at all ... has problems understanding text
- Is beginning to understand the selected materials
- Can understand most of what's read, yet still needs assistance with certain concepts related to goal
- Can understand all of the selected material content
- Can understand all selected material and can apply this knowledge to other areas

b) With regard to the above goal, the learner ...

- is just beginning
- is continuing to make progress
- has achieved goal

2. Identifying Learner’s Writing Goals

Another important aspect of learner progress is attainment of specific writing goals. In this section, the tutor and learner identify at least one specific writing goal — then use materials related to the goal to determine if the learner can write goal-related topics; or if the learner has achieved the goal, determining whether the learner can apply this new knowledge to other situations. (Only one Writing Goal will be used for CALPEP analysis. You may duplicate this page for other writing goals if you wish to set additional goals not to be included in the statewide analysis.)

PART B:

Progress Towards Reaching Writing Goal

a) With regard to above goal topic, the learner ...

☐ Writes very little or not at all, has difficulty communicating ideas in writing
☐ Is beginning to write more ... beginning to communicate ideas in writing
☐ Can write well enough to communicate ideas, yet still needs assistance expressing some ideas in writing
☐ Writes well enough to communicate ideas; needs little - if any - assistance
☐ Writes well enough to communicate ideas in writing and can use these skills in other contexts

b) With regard to the above goal, the learner ...

☐ is just beginning
☐ is continuing to make progress
☐ has achieved goal

Tutor: Show the learner the list of reading materials and ask the following THREE QUESTIONS:

1. "Here is a list of some reading materials that adults read from time to time. Which of these materials do you read in addition to those you read for this program?"

2. "How often do you read each one per week?" (e.g., Not at all [0]; 1 or 2 days; 3 or 4 days; etc...)

3. "How difficult is it for you to read each one?" (e.g., Easy; A Little Hard; Very Hard)

Tutor: Mark the appropriate boxes as the learner responds. Remember, learners can say they don't read the material because they are not interested in reading it. Also the learner can add other materials that are not on the list. You can say:

"Have we left out anything you read?" and mark in the appropriate section.

5. Overall Reading Practices

When learners begin to improve their reading skills, they may begin to read more often on their own. In this section, we want to know in a general sense how much time the learner spends reading any materials when s/he is not being tutored, based on a typical week.

Tutor: begin by saying:

"About how much time do you usually spend reading? This includes the materials you read at home, work, in your community, and during your leisure time." Would you say that you usually read... (Please mark only one box!)

☐ Not at all
☐ A few minutes a week
☐ About an hour a week
☐ Two to three hours a week
☐ Four or more hours a week

6. Overall Writing Practices

Similarly, when learners begin to improve their writing skills, they may begin to write more often on their own. In this section, we want to know in a general sense how much time the learner spends writing when s/he is not being tutored, based on a typical week.

Tutor: begin by saying:

"About how much time do you usually spend writing? This includes the writing you do at home, work, in your community, and during your leisure time." Would you say that you usually write... (Please mark only one box!)

☐ Not at all
☐ A few minutes a week
☐ About an hour a week
☐ Two to three hours a week
☐ Four or more hours a week
7. Reading Practices With Children

Improving adults' literacy levels can have a positive effect on their children's literacy progress in that adults might begin to read more often to them. This question asks adults to comment on the extent that they read to their children.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tutor: Ask learner, &quot;If you have any children under six years of age living with you now, how often do you read to or with them?&quot;</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Every day</td>

<td>A few times a week</td>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>About once or twice a month</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Almost never</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Learner has no children under six years of age in the household</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

8. Library Use

Increased library usage is one goal of the CLC. As learners become more familiar with the library setting and improve their literacy skills, they might begin to use the services of the library more often. This question asks how often learners use the library services outside of the tutoring sessions.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tutor: Ask learner, &quot;Aside from the tutoring sessions, how often do you use the services of a library, for any reason? Would you say daily, weekly, monthly, once or twice a year, or never?&quot;</th>

</tr>
<tr>

</tr>
<tr>

</tr>
<tr>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
9. Learner's Perception of Reading Progress

Another important learner outcome in adult literacy programs is increase in self-esteem and self-confidence as learners begin to improve their literacy skills. In this section we ask learners to comment on their reading progress.

Tutor: Ask the learner: "Which of the following phrases best describes your feelings about reading?" (Please choose only one!)

- "I am just starting to learn to read"
- "I can read some things, but I need to improve my reading"
- "I can read most of what I need to read, but I have trouble understanding"
- "I can read what I need to read, but would like to be able to read other materials"
- "I can read in all of the areas that I want and need to read"

10. Learner's Perception of Writing Progress

Learner's perceptions of their writing progress is another important learner outcome in adult literacy programs. Again, improvements in self-esteem and self-confidence are sometimes evident as learners begin to improve their literacy skills. In this section we ask learners to comment on their writing progress.

Tutor: Ask the learner: "Which of the following phrases best describes your feelings about writing?" (Please choose only one!)

- "I am just learning to write"
- "I can write some things, but I need to improve my writing"
- "I can write most of what I need to write, but I have trouble spelling"
- "I can write what I need to write, but I would like to be able to write in other areas"
- "I can write in all of the areas that I want and need to write"
11. Impact of Literacy Program on Learners' Lives

The literacy program can positively affect learners in many ways. CALPEP tries to capture the different ways that the program has helped learners in their jobs or in their daily lives.

Tutor: Ask learner the following ... "Has being in this program the past six months ...

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

CONVERSE -- to identify an experience; use your imagination!

Suggestions:

* what did you do over the weekend?
* something that happened in the past
* something that might happen in the future
* imagine you have won the lottery
* think of something you know how to do and explain it clearly (a recipe, how to fix a flat tire, the latest dance)
* sentence completions:

  | I never... | I hope... |
  | I remember... | I hate... |
  | I can... | I miss... |
  | I wish... | I believe... |

RECORD the student's words; write neatly and try to get every word down just as it is spoken.

READ the story back to your student, pointing to each word. Then ask the student to read it with you, one sentence at a time if necessary.

SELECT target words and make them into flash cards. Have the student select 3 - 4 words from the story, then you choose 3 - 4 words. As the tutor, select words that tie in with what you are teaching. For example:
Sight Words - those words immediately recognized and understood by the reader without breaking down the word phonetically. Could be as small as "the" or "is", or as big as "supermarket" or "danger."

Word Patterns - words which have multiple rhyming possibilities: "coat" or "might," for example.

Phonics Examples - if you are working with your student on the sounds of the alphabet, select a word which illustrates the phonics you are teaching. "Boy" would make a good example word for the sound "b," or "sun" might work for "s." Add new words to these phonics flash cards periodically.

Hot tip: you might want to make duplicate sets of flash cards. One set for the student to take home and use, the other for you to keep so you always have a set for review in the tutoring session.
What's so great about the Language Experience Approach?

The Language Experience Story is automatically at the student's level because the student has dictated it.

Using a story created by your student as the basis for learning is more meaningful than using the words of a text book.

When his/her words are central to the lesson plan, the student gains self-esteem and validation.

You can observe the student's progress by keeping a journal of Language Experience stories.

You learn about the life and experiences of your student.

Language Experience Stories for Newsletter!

You may want to consider submitting your student's story, recipe, etc., to the Partners In Reading newsletter. Just get your student's permission first. This is a great way to reinforce the importance and value of your student's work!

Please see Tutor by Literacy Volunteers of America for more thorough coverage of the Language Experience Approach.
INTRODUCING CHALLENGER ADULT READING SERIES

Challenger is an eight-book program of reading, writing, and reasoning skills designed to meet the needs of adults and adolescents reading below the sixth grade level. There is one teacher's manual and one answer key to assist tutors using books one through five. Books six, seven and eight have individual teacher's manuals per level. Learners should be able to recognize and write most letters of the alphabet before starting the Challenger series; they should also have at least a tenth grade education; and they should know the sounds of the letters of the alphabet.

Each book in this controlled vocabulary program contains twenty lessons. Each lesson includes a reading selection and a variety of exercises and activities. Preceding each lesson in the odd-numbered books is a word chart that introduces new words according to a specific phonics principle.

The books also include indexes of the words students have studied to date and periodic reviews. The last review in each book can be used as a diagnostic tool to determine the appropriate placement for students using this program.

Books 1 and 3 contain light-hearted stories about adults caught up in a variety of situations. Books 2 and 4 contain engaging non-fiction pieces which enable students to broaden the scope of their knowledge. Book 5 offers adaptations of widely-acclaimed literature.

Significant Features

-- exceptionally motivating reading selections
-- mature presentation and diversity of material
-- challenge of increasingly difficult materials
-- requires students to use their powers of reason
-- students assume a high degree of responsibility for their learning
-- emphasis on integrating phonics, word analysis, vocabulary, reading comprehension, literary understanding, writing, reasoning, and study skills
-- emphasis on building background in basic knowledge necessary for comprehension
-- comprehensive teacher's manual which guides teachers but permits flexibility in executing the lessons
-- answer key under separate cover which allows students as well as teachers to check homework

The Laubach Way to Reading is a basic reading and writing series developed primarily for adults with very little, or no reading ability. The four books provide a systematic development of basic reading and writing skills. The lessons progress from sounds and regular spellings of basic consonants to those of the short vowels, the long vowels, and finally to irregular spellings. Reading, writing and grammar skills become progressively more difficult. Classroom teachers, teacher aides, and volunteer tutors may all use the books effectively.

SKILLBOOK ONE

The first book lays the foundation for reading. A sound for each letter of the alphabet is presented, as well as certain consonant combinations. The initial approach is visual, followed by auditory discrimination. Simple comprehension and punctuation are also included. Supplements are: Focus on Phonics 1 (teachers and students), In the Valley and More Stories #1.

SKILLBOOK TWO

The lessons in Skillbook Two are structured around the short vowel sounds introduced in book one. Variant spellings of consonant sounds, along with consonant blends are added at this level. The approach is visual followed by listening exercises. Simple structural analysis is introduced and comprehension skills are slightly more difficult. Supplements are: Focus on Phonics 2A and 2B, City Living and More Stories #2.

SKILLBOOK THREE

The long vowel sounds are introduced in Skillbook Three. Comprehension exercises are expanded to lead to developing independent opinion on the part of the learner. There is much more variety in the subject matter, particularly in the use of functional materials. Cursive writing is introduced near the end of the book. Supplements are: Focus on Phonics 3, Changes, and More Stories #3.

SKILLBOOK FOUR

This book completes the spiral for phonic-based reading. The remaining variant spellings for the long vowel sounds and consonants are covered. Comprehension skills emphasized include making inferences and interpreting the author’s purpose. With the skills gained in these four books, the learner is ready for independent work. Supplements are: Focus on Phonics 4, People and Places, and More Stories #4.
TUTOR: Techniques Used in the Teaching of Reading

TUTOR is a manual which is used without a correlated text book series for the student. It provides guidance for the tutor in evaluating the basic skill levels of students and in diagnosing reading problems.

The book also outlines four instructional methods which can be adapted for use with any student: an English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) student or a native speaker of English. These methods can be illustrated with any reading materials and are applicable to any resources of interest to the student: newspapers, driver's manual, children's books, etc.

The methods include:

1. The Language Experience Story or Approach (LEA)
2. The use of Sight Words and Context Clues
3. Phonics
4. Word Patterns

The book covers such diverse topics as goal-setting; student motivation and reinforcement; and creating a lesson plan.

Perhaps the most useful part of the book for tutors is the appendix which lists:

-- the 300 most frequently used words
-- a functional reading word list for adults
-- useful words for filling out forms
-- word patterns, for example:

- and - en
  and  den band  hen hand  men land  pen sand  ten gland  glen grand  then stand  when
ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE
WORKING WITH THE ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE (ESL) STUDENT

Simplify the input

- slower speech rate
- clear enunciation
- longer pauses between phrases
- controlled vocabulary (limit idioms)
- controlled sentence length

Check frequently for understanding

- pay more attention to the meaning of the student's response, less attention to the form
- repeat, repeat, repeat
- give examples to explain what you are saying
- frequently review what has been taught

Facilitate genuine communication

- meet students' needs and interests
- build comprehension skills
- allow for students to go through a listening phase, "the mute period"
- use personalized conversation starters, such as, "Let's say Anna needs to buy a new video player..."
- avoid drills and rote exercises

Contextualize Language

- vocabulary in context; not lists
- try to make abstract concepts more concrete
- provide visual reinforcement mimic, gestures, facial expressions, props, models, pictures, black board sketches, videos, demonstrations, hands-on and interactive tasks.

Minimize Stress

- do not require oral production too early, let it emerge on its own
- do not require correctness too early (language errors are a necessary part of language acquisition)
- instead of error correction, use indirect modeling, for instance:
  Student: I don't got a pencil.
  Tutor: Oh, you don't have a pencil? Here's one.
- remember a smile goes a long way!
- praise, praise, and more praise
DIALOGUE

Here are some suggestions for dialogue. You may want to build an entire lesson around a few short phrases, which is a very good idea if your student has very limited English. Remain flexible enough to change your lesson plan mid-stream! In order to keep your teaching "student centered" you will have to adapt as you go.

September 8th is International Literacy Day, as proclaimed by UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization). This day will be celebrated all around the world.

You’ve no doubt heard about the many activities to increase literacy in the United States, but are you aware of what’s happening on the international scene? Many nations throughout the world have literacy programs. Many of them use volunteers. In Ghana, government officials go into villages to train volunteers to teach reading. In 1961, Cuba closed its schools for most of the year to send teachers to rural areas to teach reading. During the 1970’s, Great Britain broadcast a television series to teach reading during prime time. Other countries that have made strides in literacy include Brazil, Mexico, Tanzania, Turkey, and Venezuela.

Last year at the International Literacy Conference in Thailand, leaders from all over the world met to join forces in addressing literacy issues. One outcome was to encourage literacy programs to incorporate lessons on environmental issues and saving the earth into reading instruction.

The leaders of this conference also decided to focus attention on literacy needs for women. World-wide illiteracy is especially high among women. Over 60% of the total non-reading population is women.

Thank you for your interest in becoming a Partners in Reading Orange Public Library Literacy Services Volunteer Tutor. We are enclosing information about our program and upcoming training workshops. Literacy tutors learn how to teach reading, writing and verbal communication skills during the workshop. The only skills you need to become a tutor are patience, caring and the ability to speak, read and write English. We show you how to look at your abilities with a new twist that enables you to teach others.

As a tutor, you will meet with your learner one hour twice a week at a mutually convenient time and place and spend one to two hours per week preparing lessons. Learners are adults who wish to improve their reading, writing and/or English speaking skills.

Partners in Reading Orange Public Library Literacy Services conducts tutor training workshops as needed. The basic workshop is 12 hours in length and must be completed before you can be matched with an adult learner.

Advance registration is required for all workshops. The training is free of charge to volunteers making a minimum commitment of 6 months to Partners in Reading. Enrollment is limited to ensure the best possible training experience.

Please contact the Partners in Reading Orange Public Library Literacy Office at (714) 282-8916 if you have any questions.

Sincerely,
