This final performance report for the Broward County Library New Reader Services Coordinator literacy project begins with a section that provides quantitative data. The next section compares actual accomplishments to the project objectives for 1992-93, including the hiring of a new reader as coordinator for the project and the establishment of five student groups for new readers. Details are provided on the activities of these student groups—the Speakers Bureau, Student Travel Club, Student Advisory Committee, Student Support Group, and National Issues Forum. The success of the program in helping students to develop leadership characteristics is noted, and participation by five students in a statewide literacy conference is described. Attachments include newsletters, photographs, newspaper clippings, and a list of adult new reader issues drawn up by student participants at the statewide literacy conference. (MES)

Broward County Library
Final Report - Grant Funded Project

Date: Sept. 30, 1993
Project Title: New Reader Services Coordinator
Grant Number: R167A20094
Project Director: Janet Hansen Ph. 305-765-4271

Project Participants: Adult New Readers meeting in various support groups as described in the Activity Summary.

Project Dates: From 10/1/92 through 9/30/93.
Grant Source and Amount: LSCA Title VI - $32,426.00

Activity Summary

Following a nationwide search, we met our first Objective of the grant by hiring Mr. O'Shay Bates, a new reader from Detroit Michigan as coordinator for the project. He was a member of a literacy council in Ypsilanti Michigan and was actually seeking a new job career, so it was a ideal opportunity for the two of us. Having done all the County paperwork, O'Shay was introduced to staff and the new readers attending a social at the Collier City library following a Friends of Literacy meeting. (Invitation Attached) A short explanation of the grant was given to those present, and the new readers were invited to take part in all the grant activities during the year. On a personal basis, Mr. Bates found it difficult to leave his family, friends, and familiar surroundings in Michigan, but with a lot of staff support, he was soon settled in and was ready to work. He also found it a struggle to deal with planning, structure, and having to put everything in writing, but moved forward undaunted. All of this was not un-anticipated so plenty of staff support was available to assist.

This was a new idea for our students also, and so the response from our invitation to participate, was not overwhelming. Thus, the formation of the different groups outlined in the grant required a technique not spelled out in the grant, but which we found to be very helpful. This technique was telephone talk. Mr. Bates spent a lot of time on the phone with our students - organizing and supporting them, and it got to the point that the students were frequently calling him - setting an up informal but effective network. He probably averaged 8 to 10 calls a day to or from students. We also used Mr. Bates to meet and evaluate prospective students for our program. Being met by a new reader was certainly more comforting for the student, and we believe an improvement for our program. Also, if a tutor had a problem with their student, we would often ask O'Shay to intervene to resolve the problem. Again the students answered more readily and honestly to him, than they would a staff person. In addition to the telephone, a periodic newsletter for students was published to inform and provide support. Most of the newsletter was written by students. (A sample issue is attached.) Thus a strong bond was established between the students and O'Shay, and they certainly looked up to him as their leader, and for advice in all kinds of matters.

This leads us into the main objectives we outlined for him to accomplish during this grant i.e., establish five (5) student groups for the New Readers in our program. (Student Support Group, Student Advisory Committee, Student Travel Club, Student Speakers Bureau, and National Issues Forum.)

1. We had a lot of success with our objectives except for the Speakers Bureau. Although O'Shay believes we might have more success if we had professional speech training, it may be too much to expect students at this stage to be able to overcome their shame and feel confident enough to speak. However, it should be noted that when various people started to give extemporaneous speeches at the conference banquet, it did click in for many students and they gave some good sincere short speeches. Still, it is a different perspective when you can present yourself in public as a former non-reader; and prospective tutors and organizations want to hear about a student’s experiences in learning how to read, and how it affected their lives. Having a new reader speak at any event does seem to have a dramatic effect however, and we will pursue our efforts to groom a small group of new readers that we can call upon to speak when the occasion arises.

2. The Student Travel Club was probably the most popular activity for the students. It started very simply and very small (6 people) with a ride on a commuter train to the West Palm Beach airport. It was a great experience for them, and they enjoyed reading signs and notices to each other. We dissipated some fear of traveling, took away the strangeness of a big airport, and introduced them to schedules and monitors. The word about the Travel Club, and how interesting it was, soon got around from student to student and the membership grew. A similar trip to Miami was taken on Metro-rail later in the year. It included a transfer to the people mover, giving the students a chance to pass by some of the highlights of the city. Because of these two trips, the students now know how to access activities in three counties of South Florida.

A trip on July 17th to Metro-zoo by bus was a family day affair for many of our students. Because of the limited seating capacity of the bus (40 approx.) we had to disappoint many of our students who wanted to go but could not because they called too late, and we did not budget for or think we would need a second bus. Although the damage from Hurricane Andrew was still very evident, it was a most enjoyable day. Again, seeing these animals and reading about them was a new experience for many of our students, certainly for their younger children. It was an opportunity many disadvantaged children would never have otherwise.

The bus trip to Cape Kennedy on August 7th for students and their tutors was undoubtably the highlight of the year for the travel club. Although it was a 12 hour day, everyone enjoyed the tour, the movie, and were very impressed by the technology and training necessary to accomplish space travel. Although we were limited again by the bus seats available (40+) we had some empty seats that day because some students did not show up by departure time. When we called them, we found out that they either had a transportation problem or a childcare problem that day. Through all of these trips which were a learning experience in themselves, the students should feel confident to try some travel on their own. For those that stay with us in 93-94, we are certainly going to plan some interesting trips for them. Because of the feedback from the students we will keep the trips next year strictly on a local level and they seem to prefer trips that have an educational aspect to them, rather than just being a social event for them to get together. (Photos from two of the trips in 93 are attached.)

3. The Student Advisory Committee ended up with a very stable group of six students as planned. Attendance at the meetings which were held in the evening from 6:00pm to 9:00pm was very consistent. The agenda and the recommendations were facilitated by the coordinator with little input from our staff. Several ideas and activities were implemented as a result of suggestions from the group. In addition to the day to day program suggestions, they provided help for the Frederick Douglass program in February and the Biennial Literacy Conference in September. Our program has always been very student oriented, and this group certainly gave credence to our philosophy.

4. The Student Support Group evolved as outlined in the introductory paragraphs of this report. As stated above, it turned out to be a support group pretty much revolving around the student coordinator through phone calls on a daily basis, and interactions at the various activities. Although it was less formal and structured differently than what we envisioned, it nevertheless turned out to be a very positive and integral part of the coordinator’s daily assignment. As we said, he is probably contacting an average of 8 to 10 students a day. We certainly intend to keep this format for student support in the 93-94 grant. We found that many of the same students participated in several different groups, and therefore we will tie the five groups together somewhat for 1993-94.
5. The National Issues Forum Group was again a new experience for our coordinator. It was very fortunate however, that he was able to attend two training sessions which enabled him to implement this part of the grant. He was able to attend a three day training in Ohio sponsored by the Kettering Foundation which promotes NIF nationwide. There was another conference and workshop later in Tampa, where he was able to learn more, and practice facilitating a Forum.

These two trainings gave our student coordinator a lot of confidence in regards holding a Forum for students in our program. We purchased the books and the video tapes from the Kettering Foundation through the grant, so we had all the necessary materials available. (A sample flyer from one of the forums is attached.) One of the highlights of the student track at the Literacy Conference was a Forum on Freedom of Speech. Students all over the state were sent materials to read ahead of time to prepare, and this was one of the best attended workshops at the conference.

The main purpose of the five groups was to groom students in our program to develop leadership characteristics for themselves and for our program. The immediate evident results were forthcoming when the students all got together at the Literacy Conference in September. They were all very active, happy to make decisions on their own, and appeared to use the workshops at the conference in a determined and planned fashion.

The Statewide Literacy Conference

Considerable time was spent by O,Shay and the literacy staff in planning and preparing for the student track at the conference. Notices and information about the conference were sent statewide, and scholarships were made available to assist various councils identify and send a student from their council who displayed leadership capabilities. Five students were chosen. Since this conference was also the first Student Congress of New Readers for the State of Florida, AFLO (Association of Florida Laubach Organizations) also supported student attendance statewide by offering a small stipend for those attending the conference.

The Keynote Speaker at the conference was a New Reader, Ed Castor who works for General Motors as the key lead person with the UAW. Ed stayed for the entire conference, and led or participated in student workshops. Phil Rose, a long time student organizer from LLA agreed to come down, and presented workshops for the students as well as program managers in the area of leadership. The students really came together as a group during the conference to support each other. In addition to their lively workshop discussions, they came up with several concrete "issues" for literacy students which I have attached as an appendix to this report. To observe them in action made it feel like all the efforts and planning during the year were indeed worthwhile.
Budget Summary

Note: These figures are records from the program office and are subject to final adjustments made by the County Accounting Division based on actual expenditures. This format also follows the county categories rather than the federal categories. If there were any allocation changes, they were made according to the printed guidelines and consultation with the program officer. (The official county financial report will be attached to this narrative portion.)

As you can see, we came very close to our allocated budget, and the monies were well spent. All of the salary and fringe money was for the Student Services Coordinator position. Contractual services money was for bus rentals, admission tickets, conference expenses, and student advisory honorariums. Printing was for invitations, flyers, and newsletters. Supplies was for office supplies, small furniture items, film, and skill building games. Library Materials was basically the NIF materials, and books for collection development.

Summary

We were extremely pleased with the way this grant was executed and we feel it was a very beneficial project. The presence of a student in a program has definite advantages and benefits. It was certainly evident at the conference that the man with the final word was O'Shay Bates. It is certainly our intention when grant funds expire, to request that this position become a regular budgeted position so that these kinds of services and benefits can be extended to all of our students over the years.

I would be remiss if I did not point out some of the exceptional opportunities that came about because we were able to hire a full time student coordinator for our program. Mr. Bates had the opportunity to attend the NIF training in Oxford Ohio and Tampa Florida. He participated in a national three day New Reader Leadership Conference on the campus of Michigan State University. He was elected to the AFLO Board (Association of Florida Laubach Associations) as a student representative. He was featured in literacy articles in local newspapers, and the national newsletter, "New Readers Speak Out". He was a guest speaker at a major literacy grant presentation by Coors Brewing Company. He also attends the Friends of Literacy meetings as a member of their board. All of these activities along with the day to day relations with staff and students has had a very noticeable positive effect on his own personal life - an effect which he is spreading to many of our students. The publicity resulting from some of these events has certainly increased the numbers of students and volunteers aware of our program.

This grant indeed had a dramatic effect on our program not only ongoing, but also a very apparent effect on all the students who attended the statewide literacy conference in September. You can review the results of some of their work if you read their "issues statement" which was presented at the end of the conference. The statement, a two page summary, is attached to this final report. It will be the basis for many of their activities this year.

All of the activities in this grant were sponsored by the Broward County Library and its' literacy program, The READ Campaign.

Any questions in regards the activities of this grant can be addressed to Janet Hansen at 305-765-4271.

Message from the Chairman
by Nena Ellison

I am amazed when I realize that another Christmas has just passed me by and we are now in 1993. Where did last year go? Looking back, it is wonderful to realize that we now have a home in the Pompano Beach Branch, we have sponsored three in-services and sent READ Campaign staff members on numerous trips to learn more about what is new in literacy and bring it home to us. But the READ Campaign staff does not only go to conferences to learn from others, they also go to share with others what they know about literacy. Janet Hansen, Deborah Barabino and other staff members have presented workshops at several conferences, including the Laubach Biennial Conference in Raleigh.

Our most exciting news last year was the addition of a new reader to the READ Campaign staff. We welcome O'Shay Bates, the New Reader Services Coordinator, to Fort Lauderdale. He has a busy year ahead of him, organizing a student support group, helping the staff develop the program and getting acclimated to life in Florida. (See story on this page.)

The most exciting news for this year is our third biennial statewide literacy conference. Plans are well underway. For those of you who attended in 1991 and met Frank Kazemek, you will be happy to know that he has agreed to present a full-day workshop this year! We will be telling you more about the conference in future issues.

We need your help getting ads for our newsletter. Please ask your neighborhood stores to support us by placing an ad. All the information you need is in article on page 4.

New Reader Joins Staff of READ Campaign
by Steven Ricci

Those familiar with the READ Campaign know that it is one of the most progressive, well-developed literacy programs in the nation, a reputation it has gained through superior administration, dedicated staff service and outstanding programs.

Now the READ Campaign has scored another first in the quest for literacy: A staff member who is a new reader. O'Shay Bates, a new reader from Ann Arbor, Mich., recently joined the staff at their new headquarters at the Collier City Branch Library. O'Shay will serve as Student Services Coordinator, organizing and implementing various programs for new readers.

O'Shay Bates, 30, was an assistant supervisor at a Michigan computer company. Although he was able to achieve success on the job, he had less than a first grade reading level and knew his professional career would never advance until he learned to read. He joined the local Washtenaw Literacy Council and began working with Nadine Brown, his tutor. Spurred by his professional desires and a personal interest in the study of black history, he was able to read at a seventh grade level within three years.

O'Shay also became extremely active with the literacy council. He became the leader of the council's support group for students, working individually with new readers to offer advice and encouragement. He also worked to promote literacy in prisons and spoke to tutors about the experiences and needs of new readers. In 1990, he was selected to attend the Third Annual New Readers Congress in Washington, D.C.

Outgoing and ambitious, O'Shay says he has a desire to return what he's been given.

"I have always wanted to give something back," he said. "Learning to read was something that changed my whole life. I want other people to do the same."

Although accepting the new position meant picking up and moving to an unfamiliar area of the country, O'Shay says he didn't hesitate for a moment.

"When they called me back, I didn't even think about it," he says with a smile. "I like to venture out and try new things."

O'Shay is now looking forward to the busy tasks ahead. His new position will be divided into implementing and monitoring five different aspects:

- Forming and maintaining a student support group;
- Creating a travel club which will allow students to broaden their educational experience by traveling to museums, exhibits, etc.;
- Establishing an assessment panel so students can overlook the procedures for recruiting and managing students;
- Establishing a vocational issues forum;
- Forming and maintaining a Speaker's Bureau in which students of the program will travel to businesses and community groups to discuss their experiences and promote the cause of literacy.

He has also been calling students and other program participants to introduce himself and invite them to let him help with any needs or questions they may have.

O'Shay also wants to continue furthering his own education and plans to seek higher education opportunities in our area.

"I don't know of any other program in the country that has put on a national search like this one," Janet said. "To my knowledge, this is the only job created specifically for a student and nationally advertised."

"O'Shay," she said, "has a lot to offer."

'New readers’ teach others about literacy

By JEFFREY RUBIN
Education Writer

O'Shay Bates made his high school honor roll twice. He was supervising assembly-line workers at a Michigan computer company while in his 20s. Yet he could not read much better than the average first-grader.

"It was definitely living on the edge whenever you were in a situation with the written word," he said. "Sweaty palms. Heart starts beating hard."

Bates, 30, spent years trying to mask his problem. About three years ago, he got tired of the deceptions.

Now, after three years of study with a literacy tutor, the Michigan native is able to read plenty — from routine paperwork to books on black history. He calls himself a "new reader."

And he has a new job in Broward County, helping others become new readers. Bates has been hired as student coordinator for the READ Campaign, Broward's county library literacy program.

"When I found out I could learn to read, it was like I saw a bright light, and I want to share that light with other people," he said.

Bates role reflects a nationwide trend. New readers are assuming more active roles as board members, tutors and advisers of literacy organizations, all to help others achieve the same victories over illiteracy.

Augusta Chamblin, 63, attends classes to earn her high school diploma.

Theresa Corral, executive assistant at the Florida Literacy Coalition in Orlando, said state and national literacy groups have recently added new readers to their boards.

"The programs are for them and they need to have input," she said.

About 4 percent of Broward's population 25 and older — 50,261 people — have less than a fourth-grade education, Broward educators say. Nationally, an estimated 27 million people read at or below the fifth-grade level. Many of these people have learning disabilities or got sidetracked from studies and fell behind. They must be inventive to hide their problem.

Bates was able to hide his problem throughout his school years. If someone asked him to take a test in high school, for example, he would say he forgot his glasses or he would bandage his writing hand or find somebody to read the questions to him.

His new job will include setting up support groups for reading students. He will also organize a committee of new readers that next month will start critiquing the library's efforts.

The same trend to enlist new readers in fighting illiteracy recently prompted the Florida Literacy Coalition to add Augusta Chamblin, 63, of Plantation to its board of directors.

Chamblin, who is trying to get her high school equivalency diploma at Plantation High School, will help the coalition reach people with reading and writing problems. She will join the board in Tampa on March 18.

The Alabama native has been able to read for years at a fifth-grade level. When she was a girl, she dropped out of school, went to work cleaning hotel rooms, then raised a family.

Daughter Regina Dorsey, a Broward schoolteacher, finally persuaded her to resume her studies.

New Readers Speaking Out

O'Shay (as he prefers being called) is part of a growing number of new readers hired by literacy programs. He is the student coordinator for the Read Campaign at the Broward County Library in Fort Lauderdale. O'Shay was hired by Janet Hansen, who did a national search for a new reader for her staff.

The Broward County Library is a national leader in new reader involvement. Janet Hansen made sure that the job was just right for a new reader and that it had a good salary. O'Shay now runs several support groups and a new reader travel club. He is forming a new reader advisory board. He helps the library be sensitive to the needs of new readers.

Here is one way in which he has already helped. When a conference was being planned for new readers, he looked at the folder of materials to be given to everyone. He saw that they wanted to give the students who came too many printed papers. He told them to cut down the number and keep each one very simple. They did.

After he started his new job, he felt he was over his head with the paperwork. He asked himself, "Do I keep quiet or do I speak up?" He spoke up and got the support and help he needed.

O'Shay moved to Florida from his home town in Michigan. For over three years he has learned to read and write. In 1991, as one of four delegates from Michigan, he went to the third National Adult Literacy Congress in Washington, D.C. When he returned, he started a student support group for his local program, Washtenaw Literacy. He then lead the new reader advisory group. He also started speaking out to groups and the media.

O'Shay loves to learn. Now he reads Malcom X, Marcus Garvey, and other great writers. He says it was hard to leave his family and friends. It is still hard to read things with "meat." O'Shay says, "I hope what I am doing will be an example to others. I hope it will be easier for others to follow in my path." When it comes to his own leadership and learning he says, "I'm steppin and steppin and steppin and steppin."

AN ESSAY

by R.C.S.

I love to talk to people who believe in themselves and know for sure what they want. I also like to help people. And when you’re helping people, you must understand their feelings. A lot of people have problems as they go through life. It’s natural. But most of them can be worked out if they just took the time to sort their feelings and talk to someone. I think once a person knows what he or she wants, it’s not hard to go for it and achieve any goal.

BOOK REVIEW

by Georgia Gordon - staff

This is a story about Dewbet Thomas and her memories. Aunt Dew, as she is called, comes to live with her great-great nephew Michael. Michael had a box of pennies and would count the pennies while she would sing. She would ask Michael if he knew what a particular penny means and Michael was very eager to know. She would tell him the story behind the penny. One day Michael’s mother threatened to throw out the box and burn it in the furnace, but she would replace it with a new one. Michael and Aunt Dee were furious and were totally against this. The box was too important. To find out more about what the pennies represented and why the box was so precious to Aunt Dew, read "The Hundred Penny Box" by Sharon Bell Mathis. Phil Rose from LLA and New Readers in a group discussion at the Literacy Conference.
"ISSUES"

These are the issues that the adult new readers of Florida feel with passion. We want to see good things happen in our state. We want to see people listen to our hearts. We are the customers of adult education in Florida. We want to be involved in the solution of our own problem. These are the things we want to happen in our state. This is the first adult learner agenda for the state of Florida.

1. That every prisoner in the state of Florida should be required to learn to read before release.

2. That libraries in the state of Florida be required to provide specific workshops for adult basic literacy students on matters of public concern such as: reading and understanding medicine labels and instructions, filling out job applications, and developing your personal dreams and making them into educational goals.

3. That literacy programs provide workshops on gaining marketing skills and other skills in operating a small business.

4. That literacy programs and libraries be required to provide computers specifically for the use of adult basic education students.

5. That literacy providers empower current and past basic reading students to go out into their community to read to children and to help them learn to read, and that they form a statewide student speakers' bureau to go out and let every citizen know exactly how it feels to be an adult non-reader.

6. That the schools should be responsible for teaching children who are speakers of other languages to be fluent in English before they leave school.

7. That TV stations in the state of Florida be requested to put on advertisements by Spanish speaking people to tell Hispanics how important it is for them to learn to read and write English and to help their children learn.

8. That all the media in the state of Florida do more to reach those thousands of people who have not come forward for help.

9. That all basic reading programs and materials should be free of charge to students.

10. We want help now! We can't wait a year, two years, more for funding. We will push now! We will protest now!

11. Literacy programs and students need to work with PTA's and children, getting out the word of programs available and helping the children learn along with the adults.
12. We need to talk to parents and parents' groups about what happens to their children when no one cares about them and when no one helps them learn, when children come home to an empty house.

13. That companies establish some quotas or encouragement to hire a new reader, such as they have for handicapped, and that they allow employees to admit they need to learn to read without endangering their jobs.

14. There must be better training of teachers in Florida to stop the damage that is being done every day by letting some students be "overlooked" - "pushed to the side" - or just considered a discipline problem.

15. That anyone participating in any sports program for any educational institution be required to know how to read fluently before they are qualified to play.

16. Try to be sure that schools keep funding for special classes for children with extra need.

17. Encourage Florida schools to raise the performance requirements higher as compared to national standards.

18. All the resources should not go to the gifted people. Everyone needs help. We must put a stop to passing children on when they don't know what they need to know.

19. There should be a statewide student campaign to educate our key leaders - Governor Chiles, senators, representatives, business leaders.

20. We should do a letter-writing campaign to legislators so each one of us would tell our story to them.

21. That rehabilitation from accidents and sickness covered by insurance companies and hospitals include restoring ability to read.

22. Investigate the use of lottery money and find out if we can get some of it for literacy.

23. Ask the churches in this state to help us promote the cause of literacy and help do more media coverage.

24. Encourage reading programs to keep students interested with many approaches.

25. Mandatory basic education should be required for those on welfare as long as childcare and transportation is taken into account.
26. Volunteer literacy programs need to be supported more so that more people can get one-on-one attention. They should make sure tutors get more training in how to be a friend and care about the students. Students should be able to talk freely and plainly with trained tutors. People like Ed Castor should be used as training examples for tutors so that they can see how to relate to students sincerely.

27. Teachers and tutors must listen to students and know that dedication is a necessary quality to a teacher. Tutors should know students feel uncomfortable with things like coming to their homes to learn. Only tutors should be selected who volunteer because they care. It is not good to volunteer just to look good or feel above someone else.

28. There needs to be a symbol, accepted by business, government agencies, and public places, which would indicate that anyone who went to that symbol would be offered sensitive assistance in doing reading and paperwork to complete their business. Banks, employment offices, libraries, etc. could have specially trained staff to help people who now are too embarrassed to use their services at all.

Message from the Chairman
by Nena Ellison

The Magic Circle: Join the Family of Readers, our third biennial state literacy conference was a tremendous success. Special thanks to the conference sponsors and advertisers for their support.

The board members are looking forward to the 1995 conference. In the meantime, if you are interested in going to a literacy conference, the Laubach biennial conference, Challenge of Change will be held in Little Rock, Arkansas June 2 through June 5. There will be pre-conference workshops June 1 and 2. Laubach has invited President Clinton to speak at the dinner on Friday, June 3. This is a wonderful conference.

The summer of 1994 is also special for us in terms of conferences because the American Library Association’s conference will be held in Miami. The conference begins Sunday, June 26. I have been asked to speak at that conference about the role of the Friends of Literacy through Libraries in library literacy programs. We also expect that conference participants interested in library literacy will travel to the Collier City Library for the Dream Tour. If you would like more information about either of these conferences, please call me at 786-2188 and leave a message on our voice mail.

We are now planning the January in-service. For those of you new to literacy, in-services are your opportunity to learn more tutoring skills, to share your experiences, successes, failures, and impressions with other tutors and with students and to attend a workshop with your student. I encourage you to attend. Please encourage your student to attend even if you do not plan on attending.

The Frederick Douglass Awards Dinner is coming up in February. We need student writings, nominations for student of the year and nominations for tutor of the year.

My View of the Conference
by Carol Landsdale

If you were unable to attend the recent biennial literacy conference, The Magic Circle: Join the Family of Readers on September 30 - October 2, you missed out on a very rewarding and memorable experience. Tutors, new readers, librarians and other interested groups from all over Florida convened to attend the many workshops, share experiences, and learn more about literacy.

As a new board member of the Friends of Literacy through Libraries, I was impressed with the meaningful program that the READ Campaign staff put together. I was also proud to have had a part in helping to coordinate some of the details with very dedicated Friends members.

Feedback from participants was extremely positive and uplifting. The highlight for me, and for most of us, was the “open mike” part of the Friday evening dinner for students, tutors, guests, and conference participants. The fervor with which the students spoke of how becoming new readers had changed their lives, made me renew my dedication to the literacy effort.

Hope to see everyone at the Frederick Douglass Awards Dinner in February.

Conference Excitement
by Peg Sanford

As a new tutor attending my first biennial state literacy conference, The Magic Circle: Join the Family of Readers, I expected to learn something. I expected to meet some nice people and exchange tutor experiences. I did not expect to get all fired up with excitement, but that’s what happened!

Tutor Tips

by Scott Springer

!!!ATTENTION TUTORS!!!

The Frederick Douglass Awards Dinner is just around the corner and we need your help to make it an even bigger success than in previous years. It's very simple! Just take some of your tutoring time with your students and have them write about something that's of interest to them. Something they would like to share with others in and out of the program. If you've taken the advanced training, you'll remember the language experience method you were taught and even if you don't, we'll refresh your memory if you give us a call at 765-4271. There are two basic methods: the dictation method, which is where you write down what your student says and then have the student read it back, and the transcription method, which is where your student records what he wishes to say and then you transcribe it onto paper and then your student can read along out loud. Please send in any writings to us at the office and we will contact your student for permission to read these writings at the dinner. Students will receive a T-Shirt when they send in their student writing.

(see Tutor Tips above). Students will receive a T-Shirt when they send in their student writings in time for the awards dinner. The T-Shirt will be mailed when we receive the writing.

We are all looking forward to the transformation of the Collier City Library into a family literacy library. The opening is slated for February. Funding is not yet in place for the remodeling but we expect the library to open as a literacy center before funding is in place.

That's it for now. It is hard to believe the holidays are around the corner. I wish you all a joyful holiday season and a happy, healthy and prosperous new year.
Letter to the Editor
by Corbel Cooper

August 19, 1994

Dear Editor,

I read the article about Dr. Martin Luther King, it was in May and I didn't get the newspaper. I noticed that all words were spelled wrong. I am mentioning this to let you know that I am reading the newspaper and I am trying to improve my spelling.

Yours truly,

Corbel Cooper

The Ultimate All Occasion Gift Book

"You know that when the paper says there are 44 million adults who cannot read, that means there are 44 million dreams that will die."

Those were the words of Scott C. Smith, president and publisher of the Sun-Sentinel newspaper as he addressed a ceremony at the Main Branch of the Broward County Library in honor of International Literacy Day, Tuesday, September 21. The Sun-Sentinel sponsors the awards ceremony each year to honor students, tutors and volunteers who work to combat illiteracy in Broward County.

Six new readers and five tutors were honored at the ceremony, among them were several people involved with the Broward County Library's READ Campaign.

Norma Spence was honored for accomplishing the ultimate goal of any literacy program: becoming a tutor after being a student. After spending three years learning how to read, overcoming the loss of several tutors, she completed the program and has become a literacy tutor herself. She also serves on the Board of Directors of the Friends of Literacy through Libraries, where she is active in supporting our program's activities.

Also receiving a plaque was Bea Bruce. A longtime READ Campaign tutor, Bea is also a familiar face at all READ Campaign/Friends of Literacy activities. Her exemplary dedication has made her one of our program's leading literacy advocates.

Also honored was Robert Duncan, who told the audience how he was graduated from Deerfield Beach High School in 1976, even though he could not read. Seventeen years later, thanks to the help of a tutoring program at the New Covenant Church in Pompano Beach, Duncan found tutor Richard Conlan, who helped him overcome dyslexia. Conlan was also honored at the ceremony. The tutors in the New Covenant Church program were trained by the READ Campaign.

In addition to the awards, the Sun-Sentinel announced its literacy grants for the year. The Friends received a $1,500 grant to help defray expenses for conference presenters.
Conference Report

by Nena Ellison

New readers came from all over the state and participated in the First Florida Adult Student Congress. As you will read in the articles on page 1, they impressed everyone with their remarks at the conference dinner. Our keynote speakers from General Motors Corporation, Ed Castor and Laurence Testasecca were inspiring. Everyone listened with great interest and many, having had similar experiences, could identify with Ed Castor— even some tutors. Everyone enjoyed the conference reception, sponsored by the Friends of Libraries. They did a beautiful job. Once again, the Dream Tour was a big hit. (See story page 6).

All during the conference, participants came up to us to tell us how much they enjoyed the conference and how much they were learning. Several have written us letters to the same effect. Presenters were also impressed with the conference and the workshops that we offered.

The Newsletter Competition and the Video Train-Off were first-time events. We plan to sponsor them again in 1995. The winner of the Newsletter Competition was, GROWS Newsline, submitted by GROWS Literacy Council. The first runner-up was Reach Out, submitted by the Lake Wales Literacy Council. Although we had not planned to give any other award in the Newsletter Competition, the Literacy Lantern submitted by the Palm Beach County Literacy Council received honorable mention. The judges were so impressed with the Literacy Lantern that they decided it should be recognized as well.

The Literacy Council of Manatee County submitted the winning video training segment, Bits 'n Pieces. They did an excellent job. We wonder what videos 1995 will bring.

The conference dinner was beautiful. The dining room was filled to capacity with conference participants. Phil Rose started off the open mike with some songs and students and guests took it from there.

We hope tutors and students in our program will take advantage of our next conference. It is an opportunity to stretch not only in the area of literacy but as a human being. No one can help but be touched by the stories of the new readers. No one can help but grow when sharing experiences and ideas with others. It is a wonderful event for everyone concerned. Plan to join us in 1995.

Extra! Extra! Moo Moo Madness Grips Literacy Conference!
by Steven Ricci

In 1991 the Chicken Dance took hold of participants at the biennial literacy conference's Dream Tour. This year, things took a turn for the bovine at the Dream Tour of the Third Biennial State Literacy Conference, The Magic Circle: Join the Family of Readers.

The Dream Tour is one of the most popular and most requested features of the conference. On Friday, October 1, conference participants were taken by bus from the Main Branch of the Broward County Li-brary to the Collier City Branch, where the Dream Tour was held.

The Dream Tour is an assortment of exciting, innovative workshops that give insight into the literacy process. Workshops included: Grass Roots Marketing and Community Canvassing; The Student Initiative; Peer Production; Books-In-Action; Setting Up a Literacy Corner in a Branch Library; The Multicultural Edge; and Homework Assistance. Participants also had the opportunity to tour and use the IBM PALS Lab, which uses computers to teach literacy.

One of the most exciting workshops of the Dream Tour, however, was Moo Moo Stew. Courtesy of READ Campaign staff-ers Demetrius Nesbitt, Chas Cary, Muriel Flowers and Lisa Fair, participants learned new twists on the vowel sounds, oo, u-e, ew and u, while they did the latest dance craze, The Moo Moo Slide. The fun didn't stop there, however, as the group then proceeded to cook up a big dish of Moo Moo Stew. (One has to wonder what's in store for 1995's conference. Perhaps the Pork Pie Prance or the Meatball Mambo?)

The Dream Tour ended with a light lunch and a bus ride back to the Main Branch for the rest of the day's conference activities.
Much of the excitement was generated from the workshops. The presenters as well as the participants offered positive, helpful techniques, ideas and encouragement. But it was the new readers who really sparked the excitement; their enthusiasm, their determination, and their ambitions. At the conference banquet, attended by 120 tutors, students, presenters and guests, I was deeply moved and inspired by the new readers.

I was pleasantly surprised at the range of ages proving, once again, the adage, "you're never too old to learn." The new readers stood in front of an audience large enough to intimidate any but the most experienced of public speakers, and eloquently spoke of their hard-earned achievements. Over and over again, they spoke of the pride they felt in learning to read and how they were able to expand their lives.

But what I found most exciting was the involvement of these new readers in various literacy programs and organizations beyond their tutor-student relationship. The desire to help the literacy program help others was a constant theme. I am convinced that tomorrow's literacy advocacy and programs will be in the able hands of today's new readers.

Muriel Flowers

Everything's coming up roses for Muriel Flowers, a library clerk for the READ Campaign. Three months ago, Muriel began working at the Collier City Library's circulation desk, where she checks out books, does reference work and assists patrons. She also participated in the library conference, The Magic Circle: Join the Family of Readers, sponsored by the Friends of Literacy and the Broward County Libraries Division September 30-October 1.

Before joining the READ Campaign, Muriel worked for five years as a receptionist for the Broward County Department of Community Development.

"I transferred because I wanted to upgrade my skills and try something different," she said.

Prior to working for the county, Muriel did research for four years in the fraud department at American Express.

Muriel has two sons, Robert, 19 and Zaviaer, 12. An avid traveler, she has been to Europe twice. She also loves music, collects art (especially unicorns), and likes dancing and cultural festivals.

In January, Muriel will attend Broward Community College, where she will major in psychology.

Describing her long-term goals, Muriel said, "I hope one day to be able to do work that helps black teenagers and young adults."

The Gettysburg Address

When Lincoln gave that speech the country was eighty seven years old. Lincoln said that the country was formed with the proposition that all men are created equal.

Lincoln said that the Civil War was testing our country. The Civil War was testing whether the country can go on that way. Lincoln gave this speech at Gettysburg.

The soldiers from the North and South fought a very important battle on that battle field. A lot of soldiers were killed on both sides.

The Civil War was fought because the North and the South did not agree on how the country should be run. Lincoln thought the world will not remember what they had said there but the world would always remember the men who fought there. Lincoln asked the people to dedicate themselves to the cause for which those brave men gave there lives.

The cause for which those brave men died was, "That this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."
