In Black and White: Fostering Cultural Awareness with African-American Children’s Literature

Traditionally, literature written and illustrated for young children has either completely omitted or misinterpreted the history, customs, and traditions of African-American peoples by presenting stories told through the eyes of the dominant culture. Due to these omissions and misinterpretations, many young children are not provided with opportunities to see accurate depictions of Black people or chances to develop positive opinions concerning the diversity that exists in our society.

High quality African-American literature exposes young children to accurate and realistic images of Black people and can be used to greatly enhance the caliber of any early childhood program. This literature promotes a positive self-image and reinforces the heritage of African-American children while providing all children with realistic pictures of African-American peoples and valid information concerning their history, customs, and traditions.

The following bibliography provides the annotations of over forty notable examples of African-American children’s literature recommended by the authors for use with young children. The selections are a combination of poetry and fiction covering a wide range of topics but emphasizing strong family relationships. In addition, a sample lesson is provided to illustrate how such books can be extended to provide meaningful activities through-out the curriculum.
An Annotated Bibliography of African-American Children’s Literature

Adoff, Arnold. Hard To Be Six. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, 1991) A six-year old boy who wants to grow up fast learns a lesson about patience from his grandmother.

Bogart, Jo Ellen. Daniel’s Dog. (Scholastic, 1992) A young black boy adjusts to the arrival of his new baby sister with the help of his imaginary dog, Lucy.

Bradby, Marie. More Than Anything Else. Illus. by Chris K. Soentpiet. (Orchard Books, 1995) This book presents a fictionalized account of nine-year-old Booker T. Washington’s experience working with his father and brother in the saltworks of West Virginia and dreaming of the day when he’ll be able to read.

Bunting, Eve. Flower Garden. Illus. by Kathryn Hewitt. (Harcourt Brace, 1994) A young, African-American girl and her father prepare a blooming, birthday surprise for her mother.

Bunting, Eve. Smoky Night. Illus. by David Diaz. (Harcourt Brace, 1994) The story of a young boy and his mother’s experience during the Los Angeles riots is described in this Caldecott winning book.

Caines, Jeanette. Just Us Women. (HarperTrophy, 1984) A young girl and her favorite aunt share the excitement of planning a very special car trip for just the two of them.

Clifton, Lucille. Everett Anderson’s Goodbye. Illus. by Ann Grifalconi. (Henry Holt, 1988) A boy’s feelings as he tries to accept his father’s death are revealed through this moving story.

Coker, Deborah Conner. I Like Me! Illus. by Keaf Holliday. (Golden Press, 1996) Nia likes her bright sunshine smile, long legs and fingers, and many plans and ideas.

Dragonwagon, Crescent. Half A Moon And One Whole Star. Illus. by Jerry Pinkney. (Aladdin, 1990) The summer night is full of wonderful sounds and scents as Susan falls asleep.

Eisenberg, Phyllis Rose. You’re My Nikki Illus. by Jill Kastner. (Puffin, 1995) When Nikki’s mother starts a new job, she fears she will be forgotten. This beautifully written book reassures children that love has no boundaries and is especially valuable to children whose mothers are just beginning to work away from home.

Falwell, Cathryn. Feast for 10. (Clarion, 1993) The numbers from one to ten are presented as a family shops for groceries and prepares a meal together.

Fitzgerald, Elizabeth Howard. Aunt Flossie’s Hats (And Crab Cakes Later). Illus. by James Ransome. (Clarion, 1995) Sara and Susan share tea, cookies, crab cakes, and stories about hats when visiting their favorite aunt on Sunday afternoon.

Flournoy, Valerie. The Patchwork Quilt. Illus. by Jerry Pickney. (Dial, 1985) Using scraps from the family’s old clothing, Tanya helps her grandmother create a lovely quilt that tells her family’s history.

Greenfield, Eloise. Grandpa’s Face. Illus. by Floyd Cooper. (Philomel, 1988) After seeing her beloved grandfather making a mean face while he rehearses for one of his plays, Tamika is reassured of his love for her.

Greenfield, Eloise. Honey, I Love. Illus. by Jan Spivey Gilchrist. (Haperfestical, 1995) Using repetition, rhyme, and rhythm this beautifully illustrated poem describes a young girl’s favorite things.

Greenfield, Eloise. Africa Dream. Illus. by Carole Byard. (Harper Trophy, 1977) In this 1978 Coretta Scott King award winner, a child’s dreams are filled with images of the people and places of Africa.

Greenfield, Eloise. Honey, I Love and Other Poems. Illus. by Diane and Leo Dillon (Harper Trophy, 1986) This collection of 16 poems, including “Harriet Tubman,” “I Look Pretty,” “Fun,” “By Myself,” and “Riding on the Train,” tell of love and the simple joys of everyday life as they are seen through the eyes of a child.

Havill, Juanita. Jamaica and Brianna. Illus. by Anne Sibley O’Brien. (Houghton Mifflin, 1993) In this sensitive tale of friendship and teasing these two girls exchange mean remarks before they clear the air and make-up.

Havill, Juanita. Jamaica’s Find. Illus. by Anne Sibley O’Brien. (Houghton Mifflin, 1987) Jamaica finds her conscious after finding a stuffed dog at the playground.

Havill, Juanita. Jamaica’s Blue Marker. Illus. by Anne Sibley O’Brien. (Houghton Mifflin, 1995) Jamaica wasn’t sorry to hear that Russell, the class brat, was moving away. But, by the end of the story, she has changed her mind.
Havill, Juanita. Jamaica Tag-Along. Illus. by Anne Sibley O'Brien. (Houghton Mifflin, 1996) When her older brother refuses to let her tag along with him, Jamaica goes off by herself and allows a younger child to play with her.

Herron, Carolivia. Nappy Hair. Illus. by Joe Cepeda. (Knopf, 1997) While at a backyard picnic, Brenda’s family uses the African-American call-and-response tradition to describe her curly, twisty, nappy hair. Brenda enjoys her family’s gentle teasing and bask in the glow of their pride.

Hoffman, Mary. Amazing Grace. Illus. by Caroline Binch. (Dial, 1991) Although a classmate says that she cannot play Peter Pan in the school play because she is a girl and black, Grace’s Nana and Ma help her realize that she can do anything she sets her mind to do.

Johnson, Angela. One of Three. Illus. by David Soman. (Orchard, 1995) This book presents a series of candid reflections by the youngest daughter on her daily relationships with her two older sisters and family.

Johnson, Angela. Tell Me A Story, Mama. Illus. by David Soman. (Orchard, 1992) A young girl and her mother remember together all the girl’s favorite stories about her mother’s childhood.

Keats, Ezra Jack. Peter’s Chair. (Viking, 1998) With his parent’s help, Peter learns to handle the discomfort he feels when all of his things are being painted pink for his new sister.

Keats, Ezra Jack. Snowy Day. (Viking, 1996) Winner of the 1963 Caldecott Medal, this is the story of a small boy’s experiences on a winter day depicted through beautiful watercolors and collages.

Keats, Ezra Jack. Whistle for Willie. (Viking, 1987) A child and his inner-city world are captured in colorful illustrations as he interacts with his dog.

Lillie, Patricia. When This Box Is Full. Illus. by Donald Crews. (Puffin, 1997) Beginning with an empty box in January, a child's odds and ends fill the container month by month detailing his activities throughout the year.

Mendez, Phil. The Black Snowman. Illus. by Carole Byard. (Scholastic, 1991) Through the powers of a magical "kente" a black snowman comes to life and helps young Jacob discover the beauty of his black heritage, as well as, his own self-worth.

Polacco, Patricia. Chicken Sunday. (Philomel Books, 1992) A young Russian girl and her two African-American “brothers” devise a plan to sell decorated eggs, so they can buy a special Easter hat to thank Miss Eula for her wonderful Sunday chicken dinners.

Ringgold, Faith. Tar Beach. (Dragonfly, 1996) A young girl dreams of flying above her Harlem home, claiming all she sees for herself and her family.

Scott, Herbert Ann. Sam. Illus. by Symeon Shimin. (Paperstar, 1996) Sam is told that he is too small to participate in activities with his brother, sister, and father. His mother, however, realizes that he needs his own special job and puts him to work helping her in the kitchen.

Extending African-American Children’s Literature in an Early Childhood Classroom: A Sample Lesson

Through the powers of a magical "kente" a black snowman comes to life and helps young Jacob discover the beauty of his black heritage, as well as, his own self-worth.

Purpose: To illustrate that everyone has special characteristic and/or qualities that are determined by actions rather than skin color or appearance.

Materials: construction paper markers and/or crayons scissors
glue
circle patterns

Activity: Step 1: After making predictions based on the title of the book, the students will listen to the teacher read the story aloud with the purpose of identifying the things that make the black snowman special. Due to length, this book may need to be paraphrased for young children.

Step 2: Have the students retell the story citing the characteristics or qualities that made the black snowman special.

Step 3: The students will use multi-colored construction paper, markers/crayons, and circular patterns to create a colorful snowman of their own. Each snowman is to be engaged in an activity that reveals his special characteristic or quality.

Step 4: Have the students share their snowmen pictures with classmates. Discuss the many desirable attributes the snowmen possess and how an behaviors reveal his/her traits.

This book presents a rhyming description of the kente cloth of the Ashanti and Ewe people of Ghana that portrays the symbolism represented in its colors and patterns.

The Dillons won their second consecutive Caldecott Medal for the stunning pictures in this alphabet book that depicts 26 traditions and customs of 26 African tribes beginning with the letters from A to Z.

Additional Activities: Discuss the origin of the kente cloth; examine the colors of the kente graphing each child’s favorite; investigate patterns found in the kente; locate the Ashanti and other tribes on a map of Africa; discuss the importance of storytelling in various cultures; review fire safety rules; address the importance of recycling; observe the various states of water; write a story of the kente cloth’s next adventure, recount the beauty of the “ugly” black snowman.

Association for Childhood Education International's Annual International Conf. and Exhibition "NURTURING CARING COMMUNITIES FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES" (Tampa, FL, April 15-18, 1998)
September 9, 1997

Dear Colleague:

It has come to our attention that you will be giving a presentation at the Association for Childhood Education International’s Annual International Conference and Exhibition "NURTURING CARING COMMUNITIES FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES" to be held in Tampa, Florida from April 15-18, 1998. We would like you to consider submitting your presentation, or any other recently written education-related papers or reports, for possible inclusion in the ERIC database. As you may know, ERIC (the Educational Resources Information Center) is a federally-sponsored information system for the field of education. Its main product is the ERIC database, the world's largest source of education information. The Clearinghouse on Elementary and Early Childhood Education is one of sixteen subject-specialized clearinghouses making up the ERIC system. We collect and disseminate information relating to all aspects of children's development, care, and education.

Ideally, your paper should be at least eight pages long and not have been published elsewhere at the time of submission. Announcement in ERIC does not prevent you from publishing your paper elsewhere because you still retain complete copyright. Your paper will be reviewed and we will let you know within six weeks if it has been accepted.

Please complete and sign the reproduction release on the back of this letter and return it with two copies of your presentation to ERIC/EECE. If you have any questions, please call me at (800) 583-4135 or by (e-mail at ksmith5@uiuc.edu). I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

Karen E. Smith
