This manual is a guide to an interactive training program designed to address key skills necessary in today's high performance workplace. The module is intended to meet the learning needs of production workers who may have limited basic skills or literacy. This module, which addresses conflict resolution, focuses on helping employees understand the value of good interpersonal relationships and how to facilitate a win-win team atmosphere in the workplace. Workers using the module receive practical hints and learn strategies for handling workplace conflicts in constructive and creative ways. Workers and supervisors can be helped to become partners in creating a new workplace community in which conflicts can be resolved, managed, and transformed to the benefit of the company and its employees. This module contains six 1-1/2 hour lessons that cover the following topics: (1) identifying workplace conflicts and ways of resolving them; (2) developing a win-win attitude; (3) tools for conflict resolution; (4) how to have a fair fight; (5) managing the conflicts within; and (6) conflicts: heading 'em off at the pass. The training manual includes an instructor's guide that contains activities for each lesson, transparency masters and student handouts, information sheets, teaching suggestions, and pre- and posttests; and a supervisor's guide that includes lessons on getting along with co-workers. An Introduction

This module seeks to provide understanding and skills for handling workplace conflicts in constructive and creative ways. It attempts to forge a partnership between employees and supervisors in creating a new workplace community in which conflicts can be resolved, managed, and transformed to the benefit of the company and its employees.

The module is intended to be flexible and adaptable to each company's particular needs. Activities may be restructured around company materials resources, or according to the trainer's teaching style and preferences. The goal and objectives provide a framework in which to work and focus upon conflict resolution skills.

The lessons and activities have been designed to integrate literacy skills (reading and writing) with verbal communication (speaking and listening). Each lesson contains each of these components. The module also seeks to be sensitive to the different learning styles of the students. Particular attention has been paid to the special needs to those for whom English is a second language and also to cross-cultural communication.

Resolving Conflicts

Getting Along With Co-Workers

Lesson 1
Identifying Workplace Conflicts & Ways of Resolution
Lesson Description

This introductory lesson helps employees identify (1) conflicts within the workplace and (2) ways to resolve conflicts. After employees overview the objectives, they complete a survey (First Activity) that serves a dual purpose:

- Introduces them to the topic: resolving conflicts.
- It serves as a basis for small group discussion of the topic.

Employees survey results may be compiled and shared with the class. Then the concept of consensus is introduced, along with possible effects of conflict resolution and nonresolution on both employees and their companies.

The Second Activity uses a video to engage participants in conflict and resolution. Employees view enough of the video to see the conflict, but not the resolution. They are now asked to identify the conflict and to predict the resolution. Then employees watch the end of the video, see the resolution, and discuss it briefly. (The video used should be previewed, and the appropriate short sections should be selected beforehand.)

In the Third Activity, employees assume a Dear Abby role as they write and respond to personal and workplace conflicts in their companies. (This activity has three options. Any, or all, may be adapted or omitted due to time constraints.)

Homework Assignment: Hand out the Conflict Resolution Log. Ask employees to observe conflicts in their workplace and to make notes of ways these conflicts were managed. (They will evaluate styles and more effective resolutions in later lessons.)
Lesson 1: Identifying Workplace Conflicts & Ways of Resolution

Objectives

By completing this lesson, employees will work in teams to:

1. Identifying common workplace conflicts.
2. Differentiate between (a) ways of attempted resolution that help and (b) ways that hinder.
3. Understand the meaning of consensus.

Materials Needed

Hardware

1. Name tags
2. Paper (2 sheets per employee)
3. Pencils (1 per employee)
4. Overhead projector
5. Transparency markers
6. Flip chart or whiteboard
7. Appropriate markers

8. TV and VCR
9. A video that depicts a simple conflict and resolution. (Recommendation: Purchase an I Love Lucy episode such as Decorating the Mertzes Apartment or an equivalent video.)
10. Small notebook for employee-generated glossary.
11. A Dear Abby column from the local paper.

Pretest/Posttest

On the blank line, write the letter of the correct answer:

1. __________
   a. A decision made by a group
   b. A decision made by an individual
   c. A decision made by a majority
   d. A decision made by a minority

2. __________
   a. To settle a conflict
   b. To avoid a conflict
   c. To win a conflict
   d. To lose a conflict

3. Which of the following is a conflict resolution style?
   a. Avoid
   b. Accommodate
   c. Compromise
   d. Collaborate

4. True or False: When having a disagreement, it is sometimes necessary to agree to disagree.

5. How well do you agree or disagree with the following statements? Using the following scale, circle the number that best represents your answer.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1</th>
<th>2</th>
<th>3</th>
<th>4</th>
</tr>
</thead>
   | "Strongly agree" | "Agree" | "Disagree" | "Strongly disagree"

   1. I understand the difference between strategies that help conflict resolution and strategies that hinder conflict resolution.
   2. I believe a good communicator is an important trait to have when trying to resolve a conflict.
   3. I understand how to manage the stress of conflict.
   4. I try to reach a win-win agreement when resolving a conflict.
   5. When I am in a conflict, I fight for my position.
   6. When I am having a conflict, I try to see the other person's point of view.
   7. I use different strategies to prevent conflicts in the workplace.

Activities

Opening: 15 Minutes

1. Have employees sign in and wear name tags.
2. Introduce yourself and welcome employees.
3. Introduce the goal of this module.
4. Explain the objectives of today's lesson.
5. Distribute "Pretest". Explain that the students are not expected to know all of the answers at this point.
6. Distribute "Learner Enrollment Form" and explain how to fill the form out.
7. Collect "Learner Enrollment Forms" and "Pretest".
Lesson 1: Identifying Workplace Conflicts & Ways of Resolution

Conflict Resolution Survey

1. What are the most frequent kinds of conflicts in the workplace?
2. How do people at work usually deal with conflicts? (Check as many as apply to your workplace)
   - Get angry
   - Avoid the conflict
   - Listen to one another carefully
   - Talk directly to the people involved
   - Have a meeting to talk it over
   - Other

3. How do you usually deal with a company conflict or with a personal conflict?
4. How do you wish people would handle conflicts?
5. What affects do unresolved conflicts have on people? On companies?
6. Describe your company’s policy for dealing with conflicts in the workplace.
7. How could we prevent workplace conflicts?

Common Conflicts/Resolutions

Consensus
- The general opinion or agreement of a group.

Consensus
- A decision agreed upon by the entire group or team
- A decision that all members can support and no member oppose

Consensus involves true, sincere, and respectful communication of all ideas, flexibility, cooperation, and the will to act as a team for the benefit of the company, group, and individuals.

Consensus does not mean everyone is 100% satisfied.
- Does not resolve or compromise any strong emotions
- Is the most effective and decent path of decision-making and conflict resolution.
Activities

First Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Tell employees that they are going to participate in a survey.
2. Encourage thoughtful, honest responses (assure them this information will not be used against them as employees).
3. Distribute and project the “Conflict Resolution Survey”.
4. Explain and simplify each question to help ESL employees overcome any language obstacles.
5. Tell employees to take their time in responding to the survey.
6. Distribute and project “Common Conflicts/Common Resolutions” and ask employees for input.
7. Distribute and project “Consensus”. Explain the meaning of consensus, and ask employees if there is a consensus regarding “Common Conflicts/Common Resolutions”.

Activities

Second Activity: 25 Minutes

1. Prepare to show a conflict resolution video (e.g., the I Love Lucy episode entitled Redecorating the Mertzes Apartment or a similar video).

2. Set the scene for the story. (Choose a short segment that portrays the conflict. You don't need to show the whole video.) Explain the story line as necessary to fill in earlier scenes that participants will not see. Prepare the class to look for the conflict.

3. Show the video segment. Stop at natural breaks to clarify and to check for comprehension among ESL participants periodically, if necessary.

4. Stop before the resolution. Ask the class to predict the outcome.

5. Play the rest of the video. Begin a short discussion on the conflict resolution in the video.
Giving Advice

Option 1

Write a short letter asking for advice. i.e., a Dear Abby letter containing an unresolved conflict (either real or imagined) that you have had at work.

Share your letter with another person, who will give you advice, write a solution, and then return your letter to you.

Option 2

Half of the class: as an employee, write a letter to your company (Dear Company), describing a conflict you are aware of and asking for a solution.

Other half of the class: acting as a spokesperson for the company, write a letter to the employees (Dear Employees) concerning the company conflict and asking for a solution.

Exchange your letter with someone from the other half and propose solutions to the conflicts raised.

Return your letters to the original writers and discuss the solutions.
Activities

Third Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Distribute and project "Giving Advice".

2. Follow the directions in the handout. First, have employees work in twos, each with a partner; then divide the class in half. (Omit any part if time does not permit.)

Activities

Ending: 10 Minutes

1. Review the objectives of this workshop

2. Encourage employees to observe conflicts and resolutions in their workplace and in their personal lives.

3. Distribute the "Conflict Resolution Log" and project the transparency. Explain the categories and assign the Log for homework. (Employees need only to observe and note conflicts and how they were managed; they will evaluate styles and more effective resolutions in future lessons.)

4. Tell employees that they are to bring their Logs to the next session. Explain that they are to (a) maintain a running log throughout this whole module and beyond and (b) keep a running Glossary of new words in their small notebooks.

5. Thank the employees for coming. Encourage a positive attitude about conflicts and resolutions; stress that learning conflict-resolution skills will help employees and their companies to be more productive.

6. Remind employees of the date and time of the next session.

7. Say good-bye.
Resolving Conflicts

Getting Along With Co-Workers

Lesson 2
Developing a Win-Win Attitude

Winning At Work
Lesson Description

This lesson helps employees become aware of how they manage conflicts, introduces them to more-effective options, and provides practice in resolving workplace conflicts.

This lesson opens by comparing the responses of co-workers and supervisors to the surveys assigned as homework in the last session. Next, the objectives of this lesson are introduced.

Employees then evaluate their own styles of managing conflict and are presented a chart with four styles of conflict management. After some self-analysis, employees discuss with a partner their intentions of what they would like to improve.

The Second and Third Activities give employees practice in working out Win-Win solutions first to workplace scenarios and then to personal applications.

The session ends with a short story and the assignment of the ongoing Conflict Resolution Log.
Objectives

By completing this lesson, employees will be able to:

1. Identify their own conflict-management style.
2. Understand Win-Win solutions as better options.
3. Resolve some practical/personal workplace conflicts.

Materials Needed

Hardware

1. Pencils (1 per employee)
2. Name tags
3. Overhead projector and whiteboard

A Hole in the Boat

Some people were sitting in a boat, when one of them took a drill and began to drill a hole under his seat.
The other people in the boat became very concerned and said to him, "What are you doing?"
He replied, "Am I not drilling the hole under my own seat? What does this have to do with you?"

Questions to discuss and ponder:
What does this have to do with you?
What does this have to do with your company?
What does this have to do with conflict resolution?
Activities

Opening: 15 Minutes

1. Have employees sign in and wear name tags.
2. Review the main points of the last session.
3. Project "Hole in the Boat". Read and discuss the questions.
4. Discuss and compare the observations and entries in the employees "Conflict Resolution Log" homework.
5. Introduce the objectives of Lesson 2.
Resolving Conflicts
Lesson 2: Developing a Win-Win Attitude

Management of Conflict
Self-Evaluation

How do you act in conflicts? (Be honest. Check whichever is true most of the time.)

1. I play to win.
2. I just want to avoid conflicts.
3. I usually let other people win.
4. I try to make sure other people win, as well as myself.
5. If I lose, I make sure other people also lose.
6. I get angry and try to win by force.
7. I let other people decide.
8. I just mind my own business.
9. I try to work with people to find an agreeable answer for everyone.
10. I want everyone to agree with me.
11. I usually try to find a compromise.
12. I say, 'You go your way, I'll go mine.'
13. I withdraw until other people come to me.
14. I try to get others on my side.
15. I go along with the other person's ideas.
16. I try to let a third party resolve the conflict.
17. I tell my point of view and allow others to express theirs.
18. I try to look for another perspective or for an alternative way.
19. I try to agree with everyone.
20. I let other people take care of the problem.

My main style of managing a conflict is ____________________________

I would like to do more of ______________ and less of ______________.
Activities

First Activity: 15 Minutes

1. Explain to employees that people manage conflicts differently. Tell them they will now begin to evaluate their styles of managing conflict. Ask them to be honest about how they most often handle conflict.

2. Distribute "Management of Conflict Self-Evaluation" for employees to complete individually.

3. Distribute the "Win-Win Graph" and project the transparency. Allow for questions and clarification.

4. Ask employees to complete the bottom statements on the "Win-Win Graph" handout and to discuss their evaluations, their styles, and the graph with a partner.
Lesson 2: Developing a Win-Win Attitude

Developing a "Win-Win" Mindset

When trying to resolve a conflict, one person does not have to be completely right and the other person completely wrong. There can be two winners! With patience, thoughtfulness, and creativity we can often find a solution which allows both sides to be content. This is called a Win-Win situation and is usually the most effective resolution.

To find a Win-Win solution, we have to be clear about what the real conflict is. We have to discuss the real issue or problem. We have to think about what each person involved in the conflict needs.

Consider the following conflict and what each person needs:

Pedro goes to the company tool room to find a tool he needs to complete a rush job. The tool is not there. Later he sees that Jim has the needed tool in his personal tool box. Pedro gets angry and yells at Jim, demanding that he use the tool several times that day, also for an important job. Pedro feels the pressure of his own deadline, becomes more angry, and demands the tool. Jim becomes more defensive and refuses to give Pedro the tool. They become involved in a lengthy argument and both sides end up getting to work.

What is the conflict?
What does each person need?
What solutions can you think of for Jim and Pedro's conflict?
Which solution could be a Win-Win solution?
For each person to win, who needs to do what?
For Jim, who needs to:
Pedro needs to:
For Pedro, who needs to:
The Supervisor needs to:

Steps Toward Conflict Resolution

Win-Win Resolution

1. Name, identify, or describe the primary conflict in the blank above.
2. Think of steps each party involved in the conflict can take.
3. Write the steps in the blanks above. (You may add additional steps for additional parties, for example, person C or D.)
4. Will any or all of these steps lead to a Win-Win resolution? Why or why not?
Activities

Second Activity: 25 Minutes

1. Divide the class into small groups.

2. Distribute "Developing a Win-Win Mindset" and project it while groups begin working.

3. Allow 10 minutes. Then ask each group to share its collective thoughts and to tell whether each group achieved a consensus.

4. List on the board (or on a blank transparency, and then project) the conflict(s) and solutions.

5. Ask the class to choose the best solution(s); then ask the class to decide if they have a consensus. (Steps 4-5 may be altered or omitted if time is limited.)

6. Introduce and distribute "Steps Toward Conflict Resolution" as a useful tool in conflict resolution and mediation.
Workplace Conflict Scenarios

Read the following situation together. Discuss the questions with your group and write your answers.

Don, Amy, and Philippe work in the same department on the Day Shift. When they came in Friday morning, they realized the Night Shift had left several parts unfinished or with problems. This had happened several times before. Resentfully, Don, Amy, and Philippe finished the work and fixed the problems. However, this reduced their own shift’s productivity. Their supervisor became angry when he saw their shift’s production. Though Don, Amy, and Philippe tried to explain the problem to their supervisor, he just said he didn’t want to hear any excuses—he wanted to see results; if they couldn’t do the job effectively, someone else would. When they confronted the Night Shift angrily, it turned into a huge argument with no resolve.

Part A
1. Name the conflict:

2. What does each person in the situation need?

3. What is a possible solution? (Try to see a Win-Win mindset, using the “Steps Toward Conflict Resolution” chart.)

4. What could you do if the first solution isn’t effective?

Part B
1. Name a conflict you are having, or have had, with someone at work:

2. What are some possible solutions?

3. How might there be a Win-Win resolution be achieved in your situation? (Write it on the “Steps Toward Conflict Resolution” chart.)
Activities

Third Activity: 25 Minutes

1. Distribute "Workplace Conflict Scenarios" and project it for the same groups to work on (Part A). (If time is a factor, choose one scenario or use a class-generated scenario instead.) Explain that the goal is to reach a consensus on a Win-Win resolution.

2. List solutions on the board, and try to reach a class consensus on a Win-Win resolution or resolutions. Use the "Steps Toward Conflict Resolution" transparency as a demonstration.

3. Ask employees to do Part B individually, including Steps, and then to share their written thoughts and answers with a partner (the same partner as in step 4 of the First Activity).

Resolving Conflicts

Getting Along With Co-Workers

Lesson 3
Tools for Conflict Resolution
Lesson Description

This lesson helps employees evaluate and improve their communication skills in order to sharpen the two most essential tools needed in conflict resolution: listening and speaking.

To set the tone for exploring good listening and speaking skills, this lesson opens with Abbot and Costello's Who's on First? routine, a humorous classic of confused communication.

The First and Second Activities help employees identify characteristics of good listeners and effective speakers in relation to personal and company ROI. In small groups, employees evaluate their own communication skills and their companies', they determine strengths and weaknesses, and they identify areas of desired improvement.

The Third and Fourth Activities serve as a bridge from the previous workshop, making use of the employees' observations from their "Conflict Resolution Log." Here they have the opportunity to speak and listen, and to evaluate their skills with a partner.

The Fifth Activity gives special attention to particular communication conflicts presented by English as Second Language and cross-cultural communication needs. (Depending on class needs and language skill levels, the whole or portions may be adapted, omitted, or used at the end of the module.)
Objectives

By completing this lesson, employees will be able to:

1. Identify and improve effective speaking and listening skills.
2. Make use of their communication tools in conflict resolutions.
3. Improve communication and understanding among employees who are native English speakers, employees who speak English as a Second Language, and employees who are from differing cultures.

Materials Needed

Hardware

1. Pencils (1 per employee)
2. Overhead
3. Transparency markers
4. Name tags
5. Video: Who's on First?

2. Play Who's on First? video. (Preview the video to become familiar with it and to time it.)

3. Discuss Abbot & Costello's communication problem/conflict

4. Introduce the objectives of this lesson in the context of the overall module and of the first two lessons.
Think of Someone Who...

Think of someone who communicates well.

Why do you think that person is an effective communicator?

What can you learn from that person?

Think of someone you have a difficult time communicating with.

Why do you think it is so difficult?

What can be done to achieve more effective communication?
Activities

First Activity: 5 Minutes

1. Project and distribute "Think of Someone Who..." Have each employee fill out the questionnaire. Then use the completed questionnaires to start employees thinking about the following group work.
Characteristics of a Good Communicator

What makes a person an effective speaker? List as many characteristics as you can.

What makes a person a good listener? List as many characteristics as you can.

EFFECTIVE SPEAKING + SKILLED LISTENING = GOOD COMMUNICATION!
Activities

Second Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Divide class into groups of 3 or 4.

2. Distribute "Characteristics of a Good Communicator". Ask groups to discuss their answers as a group.

3. Have each group share its answers with the whole class. Project the transparency "Characteristics of a Good Communicator"; and write down the answers as given by the groups.

4. Ask if everyone agrees on a definition of a good communicator. If so, identify the definition on the board or on the transparency. (Adapt steps 3 and 4 as needed if time is limited.)

5. Project "ROI/Communication Skills" and distribute it. Ask for (a) personal ROI of good communication skills (+) and (b) company ROI of good communication skills (+). Then ask for the negative effects (−) of poor personal and corporate communication skills.
Communication Tips

When you are speaking:
1. Try to be clear and concise as to your point.
2. Tell people exactly what you want them to know or do.
3. Use words your listeners will understand (avoid overly technical, complex, or abstract words).
4. Pay attention to the listeners' body language.
5. Give the listener a chance to respond, clarify, or ask questions.
6. Make sure listeners understand your topic or content.
7. Check your tone of voice. Make sure you are speaking at a rate and volume that is comfortable.
8. Try to answer questions clearly.
9. Think carefully before you speak.
10. Remember, what you mean and what you think you've said can be different. Others may not understand what you mean or understand you.

Activities

Third Activity: 10 Minutes

1. Distribute "Communication Tips", project it, and read it aloud, clarifying points as necessary.

2. Distribute and project "Communication Evaluations". Have employees read and complete individually.

3. Discuss what each employee can do to improve her or his speaking and listening skills. (An option for limited English speakers might be the introduction of useful "Feelings/Emotions" vocabulary.)

Activities

Fourth Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Have employees use their "Conflict Resolution Log" and choose one event to tell a partner. (Employees who haven't done their homework can tell events from memory.)

2. Ask the partners to listen carefully, write simple notes if they wish, and then say back what has been spoken.

3. Direct the partners to work together (a) to evaluate their communication effectiveness (based on their understanding the main point, the important facts, and the correct sequence) and (b) to rate themselves on a scale of 0 ("no understanding") to 10 ("complete understanding").

4. Instruct partners to reverse their roles and then repeat steps 1-3 (may be adapted for time constraints).
Lesson 3: Tools for Conflict Resolution

My First Impression

I came to the US in 1986. My first impression was that I felt freedom, but lonely when I got home. On my first day here, I walked down the street. I felt hungry, so I stopped by a little snack shop to get something to eat. I gave my order: A hamburger and coke can. A cop was standing by the order window. He heard my order, looked at me, and asked, What do you want? I said: A hamburger and coke can. He said: What? coke can? The shop owner heard this and got scared. No coke sold here! he said. The cop came over to me and asked again: What do you want? I repeated: A coke can. Then everyone looked at me and laughed. They said: Next time, don’t do it again. I felt embarrassed and left. I’ve never forgotten my first day in the US.

ESL and Cross-Cultural Communication

When speaking to people for whom English is a second language (ESL) or people from other cultures:

1. Speak clearly, slowly, and simply. Avoid sophisticated language. Use short sentences. Stop so that the person can process what you are saying.
2. Don’t speak unnecessarily or louder.
3. Avoid idioms, slang, and abbreviations.
4. Be patient. You might need to say the same thing several times, especially names, numbers, and directions. Spell it or write it out if necessary. Say it another way, with different words, or helpful gestures. Remember: Communication is the goal. Without it, everyone loses.
5. Check your tone of voice. Even though an ESL person might not understand all of what you say, ask again (and give them time to think and respond).

For ESL Speakers:

1. Speak slowly, clearly, and boldly.
2. Speak loud enough for others to hear you, especially in meetings. Often, others cannot hear you. It’s not always your English, but your soft voice, that hinders communication.
3. Be willing to repeat your words as many times as needed until communication happens.
4. If someone doesn’t understand your pronunciation, try another word or describe what you mean. You can also try spelling or writing the word you are trying to pronounce. This can be very frustrating, but don’t give up too soon.
5. Take risks. Find someone you feel comfortable with and try new words and phrases. This is the only way to improve your communication skills.
6. Allow others to help you make the needed corrections. See the listener as your partner in communication.
7. Be open to make mistakes. Mistakes are not the end of communication. It’s simply a learning tool.
Activities

Fifth Activity: 15 Minutes (Optional)

1. Explain the special communication needs and conflicts that are presented in communication situations involving employees who are native English speakers, employees who speak English as their second language (ESL), and employees who are from different cultures. (Transparency 18A and Handout 18A are suitable for higher language skill levels and supervisors. Transparency 18B and Handout 18B are useful with limited-English classes)

2. Distribute “My First Impression” and read it aloud to the class. Afterward, ask employees if they have had similar experiences. (Option: Use this as a writing assignment.)

3. Distribute “ESL and Cross-Cultural Communication” and read it to the class.

4. Encourage comments, clarifications, and questions.

5. Ask for further constructive insights that might facilitate better communication between differing languages and cultures.
Activities

Ending: 5 Minutes

1. Review the objectives of this lesson.

2. Distribute the index cards. Instruct employees as follows: “On one side, write ‘1 thing I learned today’; on the other side, ‘1 thing I would like to work on improving”

3. Remind employees of the date and time of the next session. Also remind them to continue observing and noting conflicts and resolutions in the workplace and to make new entries (and review previous ones) in their Glossaries.

4. Collect employees' cards as you say good-bye.

Lesson 4

How to Have a Fair Fight

Winning At Work

JobLink
Lesson Description

This lesson helps employees to disagree respectfully, argue constructively, and minimize conflict damage so as to provide further opportunities for resolution.

The First Activity gives small groups the responsibility to come up with "Rules for a Fair Fight." Their rules or guidelines are shared with the whole class in an attempt to reach consensus.

The Second Activity presents a film clip of a conflict; employees then evaluate each character in light of their "Rules for a Fair Fight" and the "Win-Win Graph."

The Third Activity utilizes the employees' ongoing "Conflict Resolution Logs" in a partnered evaluation of the "Rules for a Fair Fight."

The Fourth Activity simulates a conflict that offers the opportunity to practice using the agreed-upon "Rules." After the simulated conflict, employees have an opportunity to incorporate special tips into the "Rules."

Finally, strategies are presented to help minimize conflict damage and create opportunities for future Win-Win resolutions.
Resolving Conflicts

Lesson 4: How to Have a Fair Fight

Objectives

By completing this lesson, employees will be able to:

1. Create and use "Rules for a Fair Fight," guidelines for respectful disagreement in conflict resolution.

2. Apply these "Rules" to the workplace so as to minimize conflict damage.

3. Create ways to handle conflict resolution in the future.

Materials Needed

- Hardware
  1. Name tags
  2. Pencils (1 per employee)
  3. Overhead
  4. Whiteboard or flip chart
  5. Markers
  6. Video clip
  7. TV and VCR
  8. Extra copies of the "Conflict Resolution Log" (Handout 5 in Lesson 1)
  9. Video(s) portraying a conflict. (Recommendation: Purchase an old Honeymooners video or a similar video that presents a conflict. Review the episode and select from it a short segment for use in class.)

- Transparencies

Activities

Opening: 10 Minutes

1. Have employees sign in and wear name tags.

2. Welcome everyone. Remind employees of the topic and the goal.

3. Project only the top half of "A Dog-Eat-Dog World" on the overhead. Read the phrase aloud; then ask employees for its meaning.

4. Now uncover the bottom half of the transparency and discuss the meaning of the question.

5. Introduce the following lesson:

   "That which distinguishes humans from animals is the ability to reason, discuss, and disagree without destroying one another.

   "In trying to resolve conflicts by making use of effective communication tools, what happens if we still disagree and cannot resolve the conflict?"

6. Explain the objectives of this lesson and distribute "A Dog-Eat-Dog World". (Option: Distribute this handout at the end as a conclusion to the lesson.)

Activities

First Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Divide the class into small groups.

2. Distribute "Rules for a Fair Fight" and ask the groups to come up with "Rules" (that is, with guidelines for arguments, disagreements, and conflicts).

3. Have groups share their "Rules" with the whole class.

4. Write the combined "Rules" or guidelines on the board, or list them on the transparency.

5. Ask employees if they agree or disagree with each guideline. (Omit steps 5 and 6 if time does not permit.)

6. Ask participants whether they reached a consensus on the "Rules for a Fair Fight."
Activities

Second Activity: 10 Minutes

1. Show a short video clip of characters in conflict (for example, a clip from a Honeymooners episode). The purpose is to show various ways that differing characters try to manage disagreement.

2. Ask the following questions after employees view the video:
   - Was this a "fair fight"? Why, or why not?
   - What are the conflict management styles (Dominator, Avoider, etc.) of each characters?
   - How could they resolve this conflict with a Win-Win solution?
Resolving Conflicts
Lesson 4: How to Have a Fair Fight

Past-Conflict Evaluation

Think of a time when you could not agree with another person or group. Describe the situation briefly below:

Was it a fair fight?  Yes  No

Why or why not?

Can you now think of a better way to handle it?

Tips for Disagreements

1. Treat the other person with respect. Don't blame or accuse.
   - Avoid personal attacks (for example, that's stupid! You don't know what you're talking about)
   - Tell why you disagree, explain your feelings

2. Ask questions to be sure you understand.
   - Ask, for example, Are you saying...? OR, Is this what you mean?

3. Find something you can agree to.
   - There must be something you both can agree to, even when you feel or think differently about the subject.
   - Find common ground.

4. Agree to disagree.
   - Some conflicts don't get resolved right away. Acknowledge that you have a difference of opinion and agree to respect one another.
   - Don't let the problem get in the way of your common tasks or in the way of company business.

5. Don't give up.
   - Keep open the option of a later resolution. Sometimes people need time to calm down and process the problem.

Can you add tips to this list? Use the space below.

Activities

Third Activity: 15 Minutes

1. Tell employees to use their ongoing “Conflict Resolution Logs” to evaluate the conflicts they have observed according to “Rules for a Fair Fight.” Ask them to label actions F for “fair” and U for “unfair.”

2. Ask employees to explain their markings to a partner.

3. Project and Distribute “Past Conflict Evaluation.” Ask employees to answer the questions and to share their answers with the same partner.

4. Project and Distribute “Tips for Disagreements.” Then read each tip aloud and allow a short time for discussing, adding, questioning, and clarifying.
Activities

Fourth Activity: 20 Minutes (Optional)

1. Divide employees into small groups.

2. Explain that employees will simulate a conflict, using one from their "Conflict Resolution Log" (that is, from their past experience). Before they act out their conflicts, instruct employees to explain the conflict situation and describe the conflict characters to their group.

3. Tell groups to choose two actors. The rest of the employees function as both observers and interveners. One actor's role is to break at least three of the "Rules for a Fair Fight"; the other actor must adhere to the rules. The observers note the broken rules, intervene in the conflict, and lead a discussion on the guidelines that were violated and how to resolve the conflict in a Win-Win fashion.

4. Reverse the actor and observer roles:
   a. Tell the former actors to choose another topic from their "Logs" and to assume the role of observers, notetakers, interveners, and discussion leaders.
   b. Tell the former observers to assume the roles of actors in the new conflict, following the instructions above.
Resolving Conflicts
Lesson 4: How to Have a Fair Fight

Strategies

1. Stop insisting on your point of view. Don't repeat it over and over. Say it once, simply and clearly. Give the other person time to process your point.
2. Try to stay calm. Anger worsens the problem. Then people say foolish words, reactions multiply, and doors to future resolution close.
3. Focus on understanding the other person's main point. Try to restate the other person's point clearly and fairly to make sure you are understanding correctly.
4. Ask for time to think and try to set up another time to talk. To make sure you keep working on the problem, set a day and time when you will meet again. Use the time to process and think about the other person's need and your real needs.
5. Suggest a third party or mediator. If the conflict seems to be at a standstill, consider asking a mutually respected person to help work out a resolution.
6. Minimize conflict damage by leaving doors open. Do... Don't...
   - Show respect
   - Stay calm
   - Think of the other person and the company
   - Use listening/speaking tools
   - Keep a Win-Win mindset
   - Give value
   - Blow up or rant and rave
   - Give ultimatums or impossible choices
   - Do all the talking
   - Give up
7. Use your conflict-resolution tools to think of alternative solutions that make for Win-Win conclusions.
8. Vent your feelings, or bounce your ideas off a neutral third party.
9. Try again. Listen to the other person's new ideas, and suggest your alternatives.
10. If step 8 doesn't bring a satisfactory conclusion, try using a mutually trusted mediator and repeat steps 1 through 10.

Activities

Fifth Activity: 10 Minutes

1. Project "Strategies" and distribute a copy of it to employees.

2. Allow employees time to read the handout silently.

3. When most employees seem finished, read each strategy aloud.

4. Lead the class in a discussion of the strategies—specifically, a discussion of ways in which the strategies might be used in their workplace. Emphasize minimizing conflict damage, creating opportunities for future resolution possibilities, and following the "Rules for a Fair Fight" (Adapt steps 4 and 5 if time is limited.)

5. Ask employees to add strategies of their own to this list and to share their strategies with the class.
It's a dog-eat-dog world but whoever said we had to be dogs?

Activities

Ending: 5 Minutes

1. Review the objectives of this lesson.

2. Encourage employees to continue their observations and entries in their “Conflict Resolution Log” and “Glossaries.”

3. Ask them to think about the communication skills they indicated a desire to improve in the last session. On one side of an index card tell employees to write down any attempts they made to improve those skills. On the other side of the index card, tell them to write the “Rules for a Fair Fight” that they still want to improve.

4. Project “A Dog-Eat-Dog World” again, and reread it as a conclusion to this session.

5. Remind the class of the day and time of the next session.

Resolving Conflicts

Getting Along With Co-Workers

Lesson 5
Managing the Conflicts Within

Winning At Work
Lesson Description

This lesson helps employees with unresolved inner conflicts that often affect job performance, company morale, and production quality. Unresolved inner conflicts also diminish the capacity to resolve other conflicts.

The First Activity helps employees to identify (1) their styles of managing anger and frustration and (2) preventive strategies.

In the Second Activity employees read and discuss an article on ways to break the cycles of anger that hinder personal and workplace productivity.

The Third Activity helps employees tap into or create company resources for conflict management.

In the Fourth Activity, employees read and respond to a story that provides a third alternative for dealing with the conflicts within.
Objectives

By completing this lesson, employees will be able to:

1. Identify their own inner conflicts and ways to manage them.
2. Develop alternative strategies for breaking cycles of anger and inner conflict.
3. Identify company resources for use in conflict resolution.

Materials Needed

Hardware

1. Name tags
2. Pencils (1 per employee)
3. Overhead projector
4. Whiteboard or flip chart
5. Markers
6. Index cards (3x5) (1 per employee)

Classroom Set-up

Total Time: 90 minutes

Opening- Large Group 15 min.
First Activity- Large Group 20 min.
Second Activity- Small Groups 20 min.
Third Activity- Small Groups 15 min.
Fourth Activity- Large Group 15 min.
Ending- Large Group 5 min.
Activities

Opening: 15 Minutes

1. Have employees sign in and wear name tags. Welcome everyone.

2. Remind employees of the overall goals and objectives of this module.

3. Ask employees to share observations from their Conflict Resolution Log.

4. Ask employees to name the most helpful or most useful techniques they've learned so far in these workshops. (Their responses help to review key points and at the same time provide feedback.)

5. Introduce the objectives of this lesson and explain them to the class.
Managing the Conflict Within

Part A

1. Write about a time when you were really angry. What happened and why? How did you act/react? Was the conflict resolved? If so, how? If not, why not? What do you wish you had done differently?

2. In the company, what things are really frustrating for you or make you angry? (Share with a partner)

3. How does your frustration or anger affect workplace productivity?

Part B

1. How do you manage or deal with your anger, frustration, or other inner conflicts? (Talk to a friend, go for a walk, sit in the day, pray or a partner about)

2. What are some conflict prevention strategies you can use? How can you plan before the problem? How can you contain the destructive factors of a conflict?

3. What is a useful strategy or plan you can use when you get frustrated or angry?

Handout 24, Transparency 24
Activities

First Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Distribute and project "Managing the Conflict Within".

2. Ask employees to answer question A1.

3. Tell employees to pair off with a partner. Ask each pair to discuss A2.

4. Ask employees as a class to respond to A3.

5. Ask employees as individuals to answer B1. Then ask them as a class to share some answers to B1. Write their answers on the board. Encourage employees to add any helpful ways to their own list.

6. Ask partners to discuss B2, and write their answers on the board.

7. Ask the class to share their ideas from B2, and write those ideas on the board. Encourage employees to expand their lists based on what they hear from others.

8. Ask individuals to complete B3 and then to share their plans/strategies with their partners.
Seeing Another Point of View May Help
Break the Cycle of Anger

By Doris Helmsing

Judy and her husband agreed that she would be a stay-at-home mom and raise their four children, even though she had a master's degree. The year before their last child was out of the nest, her husband announced he wanted a divorce. One of his reasons he offered was that she did something with her life other than raise children. Although this was five years ago, Judy continues to see things her husband and feels like a victim. Mark lost his job seven years ago. Although the handwriting was on the wall that his job might be ending, Mark did nothing to make himself a more valuable employee, nor did he start pursuing other job possibilities.

Today, still out of a job, Mark vacillates between feeling angry with his old boss and angry with himself. For years, he has told himself, "I must have been a failure. So many years. So many sacrifices for this company."

One technique is to try to understand the other person's point of view. What reasons did the husband have for leaving his wife? Why did the boss choose to let Mark go?

Mark needs to look at himself and search for his own unhealthy patterns. He needs to take a good hard look at himself and write down his own anger. He needs to take note of his own anger and analyze it. This can be done by asking himself questions such as these:

1. What are the main conflicts used as examples in the article?
2. What techniques does the article suggest to help break the cycle of anger?
3. Can you come up with any other strategies to break the cycle?
4. Think of a "cycle" situation in your company. How might "finding another point of view" or one of other strategies benefit this situation and possibly break the cycle?
5. Do you now face a personal conflict that might be healed by an alternative perspective or by some other strategy?
Activities

Second Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Divide the class into small groups.

2. Distribute and project "Seeing Another Point of View..." and "Breaking the Cycle of Anger".

3. Share the reading of the article "Seeing Another Point of View..." among all employees, or if you prefer select one strong reader to read the entire article. (Help ESL readers with difficult words, idiomatic expressions, etc.)

4. Allow the groups time to complete and then discuss 1 through 4 in "Breaking the Cycle of Anger." Write their answers on the board.

5. Ask the class as individuals to write their answers to 5.
Resolving Conflicts
Lesson 5: Managing the Conflicts Within

Workplace Resources

1. What avenues exist at your workplace for conflict resolution?

2. What resources are there for anger/inner conflict management? List as many as you know.

3. Are different kinds of conflicts handled by different people or departments?

4. Are you encouraged to participate in solving conflicts? If so, in what ways can or do you participate?

5. Do you believe your ideas are taken seriously? Are they ever implemented?

6. In the company, are "ground rules" used and followed? If so, what are they?

7. What kinds of resources, interpersonal or interpersonal do you wish were available in your company? If they do not exist now, how might they be created?

Handout 27, Transparency 27
Activities

Third Activity: 15 Minutes (Optional)

1. Keep employees in the same small groups as in the Second Activity.

2. Distribute and project “Workplace Resources”. Ask groups to discuss the questions and to share their answers with the class; then write the group answers on the transparency.

3. Have employees compare answers and develop a consensus.
Another Way

The train clanked and rattled through the suburbs of Tokyo on a drowsy spring afternoon. Our car was comparatively empty—a few housewives with their kids in tow; some old folks going shopping. I gazed absently at the shabby houses and dusty hedgerows.

At one station the doors opened, and suddenly the afternoon quiet was shattered by a man bellowing violent, incomprehensible runes. The train staggered as we came to a halt, and an elderly couple, holding a baby, screamed in terror.

I was young then, some 25 years ago, and in pretty good shape. I'd been putting in a solid eight-hour shift at the training facility every day for the past three years. I tried to throw and grapple. I thought I was tough. The trouble was, my martial skill was untried in actual combat. As students of Aikido, we were not allowed to fight.

"Aikido," my teacher had said again and again, "is the art of recombination. Whenever one has the mind to fight, one has broken his connection with the universe. If you try to dominate people, you're already defeated. We study how to resolve conflict, not how to start it."

I listened to his words. I tried hard. I even went so far as to cross the street to avoid the "shingos," the picks with nunchucks. My determination mocked me. I felt both tough and helpless. In my heart, however, I wanted an absolutely legitimate opportunity whereby I might save the innocent from being destroyed.

"This is my last chance," I told myself. I must try it. "I'm not even in danger. If I don't do something, somebody will probably get hurt."

Seeing me stand up, the drunk recognized his chance to flex his muscles. "Aikido!" he snarled. "Aikido!"

I stepped forward. "You need to learn something. You need a lesson in Japanese manners!"

I held on tightly to the commuter stop overhead and gave him a solid kick of daggers and dismay. I wanted him to know I meant business. I knew he meant me. I aimed my strike and blew him an insolent grin.

"All right," he bellowed. "You're gonna get a lesson!" He gathered himself for a rush at me.

A fraction of a second before he could move, someone shouted, "Hey!" It was Gymnastics. A stranger saw the struggle, a veteran of martial arts. "Hey! Hey! Hey!"

What other emotions, problems, and kinds of stress cause inner conflict and affect the workplace? How can they be turned into productive factors?
Activities

Fourth Activity: 15 Minutes (Adapt if time is limited)

1. Distribute and project "Another Way" and read it aloud to the class.

2. Distribute and project "A Third Alternative".

3. Discuss #1 and #2 with the class.

4. Ask employees to complete #3 individually.

5. Instruct employees to pair off with a partner. Ask each pair of partners to discuss #4 through #6 and to write their answers. Ask employees to share some answers to #4 through #6 with the whole class.
Activities

Ending: 5 Minutes

1. Distribute one index card to each employee. Ask employees to write on one side...Something you learned today; on the other side, Any question you have.

2. Remind employees to continue their observations and entries in their Conflict Resolution Log (provide more copies, if necessary) and Glossaries.

3. Tell employees the date and time of the last session, and say good-bye.
Resolving Conflicts

Getting Along With Co-Workers

Lesson 6
Conflicts—Heading'em Off at the Pass
Lesson Description

This lesson is designed to help employees think of and implement preventive strategies in conflict resolution. It also serves to review and evaluate all the previous workshops in this module.

The First Activity elicits prevention strategies from the whole class.

The Second Activity uses small groups to show how simple principles can serve as a basis for developing workplace applications.

The Third Activity reviews the objectives of each workshop in this module.

And in the Fourth Activity, employees create a company poster, a process that allows them to apply everything they've learned thus far.
Lesson 6: Conflicts—Heading 'em Off at the Pass

Objectives

By completing this lesson, employees will be able to:

1. Apply strategies of conflict prevention.
2. Develop workplace applications for preventive purposes.
3. Display what they have learned via a poster that will serve as a useful product for their company.

Materials Needed

Hardware

1. Name tags
2. Pencils (1 per person)
3. Overhead
4. Whiteboard or flip chart
5. Markers

Activities

Opening: 10 Minutes

1. Have employees sign in and wear name tags, and welcome them to class.

2. Ask employees to share what they learned in the last session.

3. Ask employees to share observations from their Conflict Resolution Log, and encourage them to continue their observations and evaluations beyond this class, as well as their Glossaries.

4. Introduce the objectives of this workshop.
Strategies of Prevention

1. How can we prevent conflicts in the workplace? List as many strategies as you can:

2. Which strategies have you already used?

3. Which ones might be helpful for you to try in the future?

4. Which ones need to be further developed within your company?

5. Can you suggest how these strategies might be developed in your company?
Activities

First Activity: 10 Minutes

1. Distribute "Strategies of Prevention", project it, and ask employees to work with a partner to answer the questions.

2. Allow employees time to complete the Strategies; then ask employees to share their ideas with whole class.

3. Write employees ideas on the board or on a blank transparency.
All I Really Needed to Learn, I Learned in Kindergarten

I realized then that I already knew most of what's necessary to live a meaningful life - that it isn't all that complicated; I know it. And I have known it for a long long time. Living it - well, that's another matter. Here's my credo:

1. I really need to know how to live. What do I mean? Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours.

2. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours. Wash your hands before you eat. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours.

3. Don't hit people. Play fair. Don't hit people. Play fair. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours. Wash your hands before you eat. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours.

4. Put things back where you found them. Don't hit people. Play fair. Don't hit people. Play fair. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours. Wash your hands before you eat. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours.

5. Clean up your own messes. Put things back where you found them. Don't hit people. Play fair. Don't hit people. Play fair. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours. Wash your hands before you eat. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours.

6. Don't take things that aren't yours. Clean up your own messes. Put things back where you found them. Don't hit people. Play fair. Don't hit people. Play fair. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours. Wash your hands before you eat. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own messes. Don't take things that aren't yours.

Everything you need to know is in there somewhere. The Golden Rule and love and basic sanitation. Ecology and politics and equality and some living. Take any one of those items and apply it to your family life or your work or your government or your world and it holds true and clear and firm.

Activities

Second Activity: 20 Minutes

1. Divide employees into small groups.

2. Distribute "All I Really Needed to Learn, ..." and project it.

3. Read aloud Robert Fulghum's introduction; then discuss the introduction with the class.

4. Allow employees time to develop workplace applications in the Personal/Company column for each principle listed under Kindergarten. Encourage them to add some principles of their own at the end of the chart. Invite groups to share their applications with the whole class. Ask employees to discuss these applications as ways to prevent or resolve conflicts in their companies.
Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1-6

Goal: To help students (1) understand workplace conflicts and (2) develop skills for handling conflicts constructively and calmly.

Objectives of Workshop 1: "Identifying Workplace Conflicts and Ways of Resolution"
1. To identify common workplace conflicts.
2. To identify (a) ways of resolution that help and (b) ways that hinder.
3. To understand the meaning of consensus.

Objectives of Workshop 2: "Developing a Win-Win Attitude"
1. To identify your own conflict-management style.
2. To understand why Win-Win options are better solutions.
3. To receive some practical and personal workplace conflict "real-life" examples.

Objectives of Workshop 3: "Tools for Conflict Resolution Speaking and Listening Constructively"
1. To identify and improve effective speaking and listening skills.
2. To use communication tools appropriately in conflict resolutions.
3. To improve communication and understanding among employees who are native English speakers, employees for whom English is a second language (ESL), and employees from different cultures.

Objectives of Workshop 4: "How to Have a Fair Fight"
1. To create and use guidelines for respectful and constructive disagreement.
2. To apply these guidelines to the workplace in an effort to minimize conflict damage.
3. To use strategies necessary for creating future possibilities of conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 5: "Managing the Conflicts Wisely"
1. To identify inner conflicts and ways of managing them.
2. To develop strategies and alternative ways of breaking cycles of anger and other inner conflicts.
3. To identify and create company resources useful in conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 6: "Conflict Resolution: How to Defuse it Right"
1. To learn strategies for conflict prevention.
2. To develop workplace application for preventive measures.
3. To present what has been learned as a useful product for the company.

Activities

Third Activity: 10 Minutes

1. Distribute "Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1-6" and project it.

2. Review the objectives in the context of the main goals of this module, and integrate the discussion into those goals.

3. Allow time for clarification and for employees questions.
Conflict Resolution Poster

1. Create a poster that presents what you have learned in these workshops—a poster that can be helpful to your company.

2. Add your company's logo to the poster. Make it colorful, multidimensional, informative, graphic, and simple to understand.

3. Evaluate the posters to determine which is best. Using group consensus, evaluate the posters for their content, presentation, and usefulness to people in your company.

Handout 33, Transparency 33
Activities

Fourth Activity: 30 Minutes

1. Divide the class into small groups.

2. Distribute the poster boards and multicolored markers.

3. Distribute the directions for creating the “Conflict Resolution Poster”, and project it as you read aloud steps 1 and 2.

4. Explain the poster-evaluation criteria in step 3.

5. Encourage everyone to participate and have fun! Suggest that they decide on task roles before they begin.

6. Display the finished posters. Ask the class to evaluate them using the criteria in step 3.

Optional: Recommend that the company publish, produce, or in some other way use the posters constructively within the company.

Conflict Resolution Survey

1. What are the most frequent kinds of conflicts in the workplace?

2. How do people at work usually deal with conflicts? (Check as many as apply to your worksite.)
   - Get angry
   - Avoid the conflict
   - Listen to one another carefully
   - Look for revenge in some way
   - Force others to do it their way
   - Talk directly to the people involved
   - Have a meeting to talk it over
   - Take sides
   - Gossip or spread rumors
   - Get a supervisor to solve the conflict
   - Let it go
   - Silently resist
   - Try to understand the other persons point of view
   - Other ____________________

3. How do you usually deal with a company conflict or with a personal conflict?

4. How do you wish people would handle conflicts?

5. What effects do unresolved conflicts have on people? On companies?

6. Describe your companys policy for dealing with conflicts in the workplace.

7. How could we prevent workplace conflicts?
8. Rate your ability to resolve conflicts. On a scale of 0 (not able) to 100 (very able), enter the number that best describes your competence:

- Dealing with your own conflicts: _____
- Helping with the conflicts of others: _____
- Handling company conflicts: _____

9. Rate yourself as a communicator. On each line below, write A (excellent), B (effective), C (average), or D (ineffective):

- As a speaker
- As a listener
- With someone who speaks English as a second language
- With someone from a different culture
- With your co-workers
- With your supervisor or manager
- With your employees (if you're a supervisor)

10. Rate your company's communication effectiveness. Write A (excellent), B (effective), C (average), or D (ineffective):
Common Conflicts/Resolutions

Common Conflicts in the Workplace:

Typical Ways of Resolving Conflicts in the Workplace
Consensus =

The general opinion or agreement of a group.

Consensus =

A decision agreed upon by the entire group or team. A decision that all members can support and no members oppose.

Consensus involves time, listening, consideration of all ideas, flexibility, cooperation, and the will to act as a team for the best of the company, group, and individual.

Might not be everyone's first choice or priority. Might not make everyone totally satisfied.

Does not violate or compromise any strong convictions.

Is the most effective and desired goal of decision-making and conflict resolution.
Giving Advice

Option 1

Write a short letter asking for advice (i.e., a Dear Abby letter) containing an unresolved conflict (either real or imagined) that you have had at work.

Share your letter with another person, who will give you advice, will write a solution, and then return your letter to you.

Option 2

Half of the class: As an employee, write a letter to your company (Dear Company), describing a conflict you are aware of and asking for a solution.

Other half of the class: Acting as a spokesperson for the company, write a letter to the employees (Dear Employees) concerning a company conflict and asking for a solution.

Exchange your letter with someone from the other half and propose resolutions to the conflicts raised.

Developing a “Win-Win” Mindset

When trying to resolve a conflict, one person does not have to be completely right and the other person completely wrong. There can be two winners! With some patience, thoughtfulness, and creativity we can often find a solution which allows both sides to be content. This is called a Win-Win situation. It is usually the most effective resolution.

To find a Win-Win solution, we have to be clear about what the real conflict is. We have to discuss the real issue or problem. We have to think about what each person involved in the conflict needs.

Consider the following conflict and what each person needs:

Pedro goes to the company tool room to find a tool he needs to complete a rush job. The tool is not there. Later he sees that Jim has the needed tool in his personal tool box. Pedro gets angry and yells at Jim. Jim tries to explain that he has had to use the tool several times that day, also for an important job. Pedro feels the pressure of his own deadline, becomes more angry, and demands the tool. Jim becomes more defensive and refuses to give Pedro the tool. They become involved in a lengthy argument until the supervisor comes and tells them to get back to work.

What is the conflict?

What does each person need?

What solutions can you think of for Jim and Pedro’s conflict?

Which solution could be a Win-Win solution?

For each person to win, who needs to do what?

Steps Toward Conflict Resolution

Win-Win Resolution

(Steps person A or group A can take)

(Steps person B or group B can take)

Name the conflict

1. Name, identify, or describe the primary conflict in the blank above.
2. Think of steps each party involved in the conflict can take.
3. Write the steps in the blanks above. (You may add additional steps for additional parties, for example, person C or D.)
4. Will any or all of these steps lead to a Win-Win resolution? Why or why not?
Workplace Conflict Scenarios

Read the following situation together. Discuss the questions with your group and write your answers.

Don, Amy, and Phillipe work in the same department, on the Day Shift. When they came in Friday morning, they realized the Night Shift had left several parts unfinished or with problems. This had happened several times before. Resentfully, Don, Amy, and Phillipe finished the work and fixed the problems. However this reduced their own shift's productivity. Their supervisor became angry when he saw their shift's production. Though Don, Amy, and Phillipe tried to explain the problem to their supervisor, he just said he didn't want to hear any excuses—he wanted to see results; if they couldn't do the job effectively, someone else would. When they confronted the Night Shift angrily, it turned into a huge argument with no resolve.

Part A
1. Name the conflict(s).

2. What does each person in the situation need?

3. What is a possible solution? (Try to use a Win-Win mindset, using the "Steps Toward Conflict Resolution" chart.)

4. What could you do if the first solution isn't effective?

Part B

Name a conflict you are having, or have had, with someone at work:

What are some possible solutions?

How might there be a Win-Win resolution be achieved in your situation? (Write the steps on the "Steps Toward Conflict Resolution" chart)

Communication Tips

When you are speaking:

1. Try to be clear and concise as to your point.
2. Tell people exactly what you want them to know or do.
3. Use words your listener(s) will understand. (Avoid overly sophisticated, acronyms, or technical talk.)
4. Pay attention to the listeners body language.
5. Give your listener a chance to respond, clarify, or ask questions.
6. Make sure listeners understand your topic or context.
7. Check your tone of voice. How you say something is as important (if not more so) as what you say.
8. Try to enunciate clearly.
9. Think carefully before you speak.
10. Remember: Just because you know what you mean and you think you’ve said it clearly, others may still not know what you mean or understand you.

*Can you add another important tip for speaking effectively?

When you are listening:

1. Look at the person speaking to pay attention and show respect.
2. Ask questions to clarify or check your understanding.
3. Ignore distracting noises, people, or events as much as possible.
4. Don’t think about what you want to say while the other person is speaking.
5. Always respond to the person speaking.
6. Don’t interrupt, finish sentences, or hurry the person speaking.
7. Never assume you understand another person. Make sure!
8. Suspend your judgments for the moment. Allow yourself to really consider what the speaker is saying.
9. Try to restate the speakers main point and important facts, asking the speaker if your understanding is correct.
10. Listen with your eyes, face, body, mind, and heart. Be present to the one speaking. Remember: Listening is hard work, but it gives a high return on your investment.

I came to the U.S. in 1986. My first impression was that I felt freedom, but lonely when I got home. On my first day here, I walked down the street. I felt hungry, so I stopped by a little snack shop to get something to eat. I gave my order: a hamburger and coke can. A cop was standing by the order window. He heard my order, looked at me, and asked, What do you want? I said, A hamburger and Coke can. He said, What, cocaine! The snack shop owner heard this and got scared. No cocaine sold here! he said. The cop came over to me and asked again, What do you want? I repeated, A Coke can, a Coke in can. Then everyone looked at me and laughed. They said, Next time, don't do it again. I felt embarrassed and left. I've never forgotten my first day in the U.S.
ESL and Cross-Cultural Communication

When speaking to people for whom English is a second language (ESL) or people from other cultures:

1. Speak clearly, slowly and simply. Avoid sophisticated language. Use short sentences. Stop so that the person can process what you are saying.
2. Don't speak unnaturally or louder.
3. Avoid idioms, slang, and abbreviations.
4. Be patient. You might need to say the same thing several times, especially names, numbers, and directions. Spell it or write it out if necessary. Say it another way, with different words, or helpful gestures. Remember: Communication is the goal. Without it, everyone loses.
5. Check your tone of voice. Even though an ESL person might not understand all of what you say, he or she most often understands your tone, especially a negative one. All people respond better to gentleness, kindness, and respect.
6. Check to see if the person understands by asking specific questions. Do not ask, Do you understand? People from other cultures will often answer yes, especially to a person in a position of authority, as a sign of respect or politeness not as an indication of understanding.
7. People from many cultures will not look directly at you, believing it is disrespectful. Don't force them to look you in the eye. They are most likely listening very carefully. You can try to explain or assure a person from another culture that it's okay to face you directly, but it's best not to force your customs on others.
8. Gestures are different in other cultures. Don't assume that a gesture in America means the same in other parts of the world (or vice-versa). For example, the positive Okay sign in America is very offensive to a Brazilian. Try to learn about another's culture, especially gestures and customs.
9. Speak to ESL people the way you would want to be spoken to if you lived in a foreign country and had to survive using another language.
EsL and Cross-Cultural Communication

When listening to people for whom English is a second language or who are from other cultures:

1. Help them understand. Make it easier rather than more difficult.
2. If you don't understand something they say, ask again (and give them time to think and formulate a response - don't cut them off).
3. If you didn't hear what they said (sometimes ESL people speak softly due to a lack of confidence or a fear of ridicule), ask them to repeat the same words (when someone doesn't hear them they often assume it is because of their poor English skills).
4. Don't misinterpret or be offended by an ESL persons tone of voice. They are concentrating on choosing the right words, pronunciation, and grammatical structures, and they are considering cultural differences. Intonation is very difficult for them. Listen to their words.
5. Try not to correct an ESL speakers English while he or she is talking or in front of others to avoid confusion and embarrassment. Its better to help afterwards.
6. Understand that many cultures communicate effectively through indirect means vs. directly. They are usually not trying to be evasive or deceptive. Try to listen carefully for their intended meaning, it is often very thoughtful and considerate. Ask questions to clarify meaning or intent.
7. Many cultures are more passive than the U. S. They are not accustomed to speaking out in meetings, volunteering information, or speaking on behalf of themselves. This can be a very uncomfortable experience for both sides. Considerate questions, careful explanations, encouragement, and patience can yield the desired goals of communication and participation.
8. Use available moments during the work day to speak English with an ESL person. This can cultivate a relationship in which English skills can be developed and confidence gained. You will be greatly appreciated, and communication will occur, to the benefit of all.
For ESL speakers:

1. Speak slowly, clearly, and boldly.
2. Speak loud enough for others to hear you, especially in meetings. Often, others cannot hear you. It's not always your English, but your soft voice, that hinders communication.
3. Be willing to repeat your words as many times as needed until communication happens.
4. If someone doesn't understand your pronunciation, try another word or describe what you mean. You can also try spelling or writing the word you are trying to pronounce. This can be very frustrating, but don't give up too soon.
5. Take risks. Find someone you feel comfortable with and try new words and phrases. This is the only way to improve your communication skills.
6. Allow others to help you make the needed corrections - see the listener as your partner in communication.
7. It's okay to make mistakes. Perfection is not the goal communication is! Smile or laugh when you make mistakes and try again.
8. Don't let people discourage you by their laughter or insults. Deflect negativity and keep going towards your goal: to communicate in English. Your efforts to learn and use English are admirable and worthy of respect.
9. Just because something is polite, respectful, or important in your culture, don't assume it is the same in another culture. Your company has its own culture. You must work with a variety of different people in a common company culture while at work. Learn from, respect, and cooperate with people who are different.
10. Offer your ideas, suggestions, and opinions in meetings and on teams. Companies expect and need your verbal participation in groups.
ESL and Cross-Cultural Communication

For ESL listeners

1. Focus on understanding main points, not every word, otherwise you might get lost and miss the important information. Make sure you know the context or topic; it will help you understand necessary words and concepts.

2. Listen for important details and the order of steps or procedures (sequence: pay attention to words like first-second-third., then, next, before, after, finally, etc.).

3. Try to get the important facts and information in any discussion. If you do not understand what has been said in a meeting or class, after class ask someone to explain the necessary information.

4. Avoid side discussions (especially with someone in your first language) and other distractions while another is speaking. It's important to concentrate fully on the person speaking in order to understand. Conversation is like a puzzle; you need all the pieces for understanding.

5. Ask people to spell names and addresses, especially on the phone. Use the A-as-in-apple, B-as-in-boy, C-as-in-cat technique to clarify similar-sounding letters or words. Distinguish between O (say oh) and 0 (say zero), and be extra careful to distinguish between difficult sounds like 15 and 50, 13 and 30, etc.

6. Ask questions if you do not understand or need more information.

7. Say back what you think you understand to assure communication.

8. Ask supervisors or others to write down information important to your job.

9. Ask others to repeat if you do not understand. Don't just say Yes or Thank you or leave. Understanding the correct information is important for your job and your life. Don't guess make sure you understand!

10. Practice at home. Listen to native-spoken English in short amounts. Tape or video record short segments to listen to repetitively. Use scripts of TV shows or closed-caption machines to check understanding. Most importantly, practice listening to native-speakers talking, and check for understanding.

* Keep learning English. Be a continual, lifelong student. It takes a long time, so be patient with yourself and others. Use what you learn, especially on the job. Your attempts to learn and use English are important for you and very important to your company.

Think of a time when you could not agree with another person or group. Describe the situation briefly below:

Was it a fair fight?       Yes  No

Why or why not?

Can you now think of a better way to handle it?
Tips for Disagreements

1. Treat the other person with respect. Don’t blame or accuse!
   Avoid personal attacks (for example, That’s stupid! You don’t know what you’re talking about!)
   Tip: Tell why you disagree; explain your feelings.

2. Ask questions to be sure you understand.
   Ask, for example, Are you saying...? OR: Is this what you mean...?

3. Find something you can agree to.
   There must be something you both can agree to, even when you feel or think differently about the subject. Find common ground.

4. Agree to disagree.
   Some conflicts don’t get resolved right away. Acknowledge that you have a difference of opinion and agree to respect one another. Don’t let the problem get in the way of your common tasks or in the way of company business.

5. Don’t give up.
   Keep open the option of a later resolution. Sometimes people need time to calm down and process the problem.

Can you add tips to this list? Use the space below.

6. ______________________________________________________________________________________

7. ______________________________________________________________________________________
Strategies

1. Stop insisting on your point of view.
   Don't repeat it over and over. Say it once, simply and clearly. Give the other person(s) time to process your point.

2. Try to stay calm.
   Anger worsens the problem! Then people say foolish words, reactions multiply, and doors to future resolution close.

3. Focus on understanding the other persons main point.
   Try to restate the other persons point clearly and fairly to make sure you are understanding correctly.

4. Ask for time to think and try to set up another time to talk.
   To make sure you keep working on the problem, set a day and time when you'll meet again. Use the time to process and think about the others need and your real needs.

5. Suggest a third party or mediator.
   If the conflict seems to be at a standstill, consider asking a mutually respected person to help work out a resolution.

6. Minimize conflict damage to leave doors open.
   Do...
   - Show respect
   - Stay calm.
   - Think of the other person and the company.
   - Use listening/speaking tools.
   - Keep a Win-Win mindset.
   Don't...
   - Devalue, insult, ridicule.
   - Blow up or rant and rave.
   - Give ultimatums or impossible choices.
   - Do all the talking.
   - Give up.

7. Use your conflict-resolution tools to think of alternative solutions that make for Win-Win conclusions.

8. Vent your feelings, or bounce your ideas off a neutral third party.

9. Try again! Listen to the other persons new ideas, and suggest your alternatives.

10. If step 9 doesn't bring a satisfactory conclusion, try using a mutually trusted mediator and repeat steps 1 through 9!
Managing the Conflict Within

Part A

1. Write about a time when you were really angry. What happened and why? How did you act/react? Was the conflict resolved? If so, how? If not, why not? What do you wish you had done differently?

2. In the company, what things are really frustrating for you or make you angry? (Share with a partner)

3. How does your frustration or anger affect workplace productivity?

Part B

1. How do you manage or deal with your anger, frustration, or other inner conflicts? (Count to 100? Go for a walk? Yell at the dog? Vent to a partner? other?)

2. What are some conflict prevention strategies you can use? How can you plan before the problem? How can you contain the destructive factors of a conflict?

3. What is a useful strategy or plan you can use when you get frustrated or angry?
Seeing Another Point of View May Help
Break the Cycle of Anger

By Doris Helmering
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Fighting with someone over an event that happened two months ago? Two years ago? Seven years ago?

Judy and her husband agreed that she would be a stay-at-home mom and raise their four children even though she had a master’s degree. The year before their last child was out of the nest, her husband announced he wanted a divorce.

One of his reasons he desired a woman who did something with her life other than baby-sit children. Although this was five years ago, Judy continues to fight with her husband in her head and feels like a victim.

Mark lost his job seven months ago. Although the handwriting was on the wall that his job might be ending, Mark did nothing to make himself a more valuable employee, nor did he start pursuing other job possibilities.

Today, still out of a job, Mark vacillates between feeling angry with his old boss and angry with himself.

The question: How do you rid yourself of continuing a fight in your head and move on in your life?

One technique is to try to understand the other person’s point of view. What other reasons did the husband have for leaving his wife? Why did the boss choose to let Mark go?

Most people who are continually bound up in their anger are unable to clearly see the situation from the other person’s vantage point. They justify their own behavior and exaggerate what the other person did. As soon as you can see an event from another person’s viewpoint, you soften emotionally and your anger dissipates.

Another technique is not to allow yourself to think about the event. Judy must stop herself from reflecting on her life with her ex-husband. For her these thoughts of the past are dangerous because they provoke her anger.

Mark needs to forget his old job and concentrate on looking for a new one.

Research shows the way to sustain anger is to brood about the event or to rehash it again and again with your friends. Once you change your thinking and conversations to other topics, your feelings of being trod upon will leave.

Exercise is another way to shed anger. It’s just too physically taxing to fight with someone in your head while at the same time walking briskly, pumping iron or using a stair-stepper.

Feeling angry is unpleasant and mostly a waste of energy. It makes feeling intimate and close to others impossible. And it often results in lowered self-esteem.

The best way to rid yourself of ongoing anger—use the techniques suggested above, and remember: There is almost nothing you can’t forgive.
Breaking the Cycle of Anger

Read "Seeing Another Point of View..." and answer the following questions:

1. What are the main conflicts used as examples in the article?

2. What techniques does the article suggest to help break the cycle of anger?

3. Can you come up with any other strategies to break the cycle?

4. Think of a "cycle" situation in your company. How might "finding another point of view" or one of other strategies benefit this situation and possibly break the cycle?

5. Do you now face a personal conflict that might be healed by an alternative perspective or by some other strategy?
Workplace Resources

1. What avenues exist at your workplace for conflict resolution?

2. What resources are there for anger/inner conflict management? List as many as you know:

3. Are different kinds of conflicts handled by different people or departments?

4. Are you encouraged to participate in solving conflicts? If so, in what ways can or do you participate?

5. Do you believe your ideas are taken seriously? Are they ever implemented?

6. In the company, are “ground rules” used and followed? If so what are they?

7. What kinds of resources, intrapersonal or interpersonal do you wish were available in your company? If they do not exist now, how might they be created?
Another Way

The train clanked and rattled through the suburbs of Tokyo on a drowsy spring afternoon. Our car was comparatively empty—a few housewives with their kids in tow, some old folks going shopping. I gazed absent at the drab houses and dusty hedgerows.

At one station the doors opened, and suddenly the afternoon quiet was shattered by a man bellowing violent, incomprehensible curses. The man staggered into our car. He wore laborer’s clothing and was big, drunk and dirty. Screaming, he swung at a woman holding a baby. The blow sent her spinning into the laps of an elderly couple. It was a miracle that the baby was unharmed.

Terrified, the couple jumped up and scrambled toward the other end of the car. The laborer aimed a kick at the retreating back of the old woman but missed as she scuttled to safety. This so enraged the drunk that he grabbed the metal pole in the center of the car and tried to wrench it out of its stanchion. I could see that one of his hands was cut and bleeding. The train lurched ahead, the passengers frozen with fear. I stood up.

I was young then, some 20 years ago, and in pretty good shape. I’d been putting in a solid eight hours of Aikido training nearly every day for the past three years. I liked to throw and grapple. I thought I was tough. The trouble was, my martial skill was untested in actual combat. As students of Aikido, we were not allowed to fight.

“Aikido,” my teacher had said again and again, “is the art of reconciliation. Whoever has the mind to fight has broken his connection with the universe. If you try to dominate people, you’re already defeated. We study how to resolve conflict, not how to start it.”

I listened to his words. I tried hard. I even went so far as to cross the street to avoid the “chimpira,” the pinball punks who lounged around the train stations. My forbearance exalted me. I felt both tough and holy. In my heart, however, I wanted an absolutely legitimate opportunity whereby I might save the innocent by destroying the guilty.

“This is it!” I said to myself as I got to my feet. “People are in danger. If I don’t do something fast, somebody will probably get hurt.”

Seeing me stand up, the drunk recognized a chance to focus his rage. “Aha!” he roared. “A foreigner! You need a lesson in Japanese manners!”

I held on lightly to the commuter strap overhead and gave him a slow look of disgust and dismissal. I planned to take this turkey apart, but he had to make the first move. I wanted him mad, so I pursed my lips and blew him an insolent kiss.

“All right!” he hollered. “You’re gonna get a lesson!” He gathered himself for a rush at me.

A fraction of a second before he could move, someone shouted “Hey!” It was earsplitting. I remember the strangely joyous, lilting quality of it—as though you and a friend had been searching diligently for something, and he had suddenly stumbled upon it. “Hey!”

Another Way

I wheeled to my left; the drunk spun to his right. We both stared down at a little old Japanese man. He must have been well into his seventies, this tiny gentleman, sitting there immaculate in his kimono. He took no notice of me, but beamed delightedly at the laborer, as though he had a most important, most welcome secret to share.

"C'mere," the old man said in an easy vernacular, beckoning to the drunk. "C'mere and talk with me." He waved his hands lightly.

The big man followed, as if on a string. He planted his feet belligerently in front of the old gentleman and roared above the clacking wheels, "Why the hell should I talk to you?" The drunk now had his back to me. If his elbow moved so much as a millimeter, I'd drop him in his socks.

The old man continued to beam at the laborer. "What'cha been drinkin'?" he asked, his eyes sparkling with interest. "I been drinkin' sake," the laborer bellowed back, "and it's none of your business!"
Flecks of spittle spattered the old man.

"Oh, that's wonderful," the old man said, "absolutely wonderful! You see, I love sake, too. Every night, me and my wife (she's 76, you know), we warm up a little bottle of sake and take it out into the garden, and we sit on an old wooden bench. We watch the sun go down, and we look to see how our persimmon tree is doing. My great-grandfather planted that tree, and we worry about whether it will recover from those ice storms we had last winter. Our tree has done better than I expected, though, especially when you consider the poor quality of the soil. It is gratifying to watch when we take our sake and go out to enjoy the evening—even when it rains!" He looked up at the laborer, eyes twinkling.

As he struggled to follow the old man, his face began to soften. His fists slowly unclenched. "Yeah," he said. "I love persimmons, too..." His voice trailed off.

"Yes," said the old man, smiling, "and I'm sure you have a wonderful wife!"

"No," replied the laborer. "My wife died." Very gently, swaying with the motion of the train, the big man began to sob. "I don't got no wife, I don't got no home, I don't got no job. I'm so ashamed of myself." Tears rolled down his cheeks, a spasm of despair rippled through his body.

As I stood there in my well-scrubbed youthful innocence, my make-this-world-safe-for-democracy righteousness, I felt dirtier than he was.

Then the train arrived at my stop. As the doors opened, I heard the old man cluck sympathetically.
"My, my," he said, "that is a difficult predicament indeed. Sit down here and tell me about it."

I turned my head for one last look. The laborer was sprawled on the seat with his head in the old man's lap. The old man was softly stroking the filthy, matted hair.

As the train pulled away, I sat down on a bench in the station. What I had wanted to do with muscle had been accomplished with kind words. I had just seen Aikido in action, and the essence of it was love. I would have to practice the art with an entirely different spirit. It would be a long time before
I could speak about the resolution of conflict.
A Third Alternative

1. Read "Another Way." What is the main point of this story?

2. How did each character in the story manage conflict?

3. Can you find a personal application for this story?

4. Is there a way to apply this story to a company conflict?

5. Are conflicts always negative? How can conflicts benefit a person or a company?

6. What other emotions, problems, and kinds of stress cause inner conflict and affect the workplace? How can they be turned into productive factors?
Strategies of Prevention

1. How can we prevent conflicts in the workplace? List as many strategies as you can:

2. Which strategies have you already used?

3. Which ones might be helpful for you to try in the future?

4. Which ones need to be further developed within your company?

5. Can you suggest how these strategies might be developed in your company?
All I Really Needed to Learn, I Learned in Kindergarten

"I realized then that I already know most of what's necessary to live a meaningful life - that it isn't all that complicated. I know it. And have known it for a long, long time. Living it -well, that's another matter, yes? Here's my Credo:

"All I really need to know about how to live and what to do and how to be I learned in kindergarten. Wisdom was not at the top of the graduate-school mountain, but there in the sandpile of Sunday School. These are the things I learned:

"Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and milk are good for you. Live a balanced life-learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work every day some. Take a nap every afternoon. When you go out into the world, watch for traffic, hold hands, and stick together. Be aware of wonder. Remember the little seed in the Styrofoam cup: the roots go down and the plants go up and nobody really knows how or why, but we are all like that. Goldfish and hamsters and white mice and even the little seed in the Styrofoam cup-they all die. So do we. And then remember the Dick-and-Jane books and the first word you learned--the biggest word of all-LOOK.

"Everything you need to know is in there somewhere. The Golden Rule and love and basic sanitation. Ecology and politics and equality and sane living.

"Take any one of those items and extrapolate it to your family life or your work or your government or your world and it holds true and clear and firm."

Robert Fulgham

Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1–6

Goals: To help students (1) understand workplace conflicts and (2) develop skills for handling conflicts constructively and creatively.

Objectives of Workshop 1: “Identifying Workplace Conflicts and Ways of Resolution”
1. To identify common workplace conflicts.
2. To identify (a) ways of resolution that help and (b) ways that hinder.
3. To understand the meaning of consensus.

Objectives of Workshop 2: “Developing a Win-Win Attitude”
1. To identify your own conflict-management style.
2. To understand why Win-Win options are better solutions.
3. To resolve some practical and personal workplace conflicts. [AU:“practical” OK?]

Objectives of Workshop 3: “Tools for Conflict Resolution: Speaking and Listening Constructively”
1. To identify and improve effective speaking and listening skills.
2. To use communication tools appropriately in conflict resolutions.
3. To improve communication and understanding among employees who are native English speakers, employees for whom English is a second language (ESL), and employees from different cultures.

Objectives of Workshop 4: “How to Have a Fair Fight”
1. To create and use guidelines for respectful and constructive disagreement.
2. To apply these guidelines to the workplace in an effort to minimize conflict damage.
3. To use strategies necessary for creating future possibilities of conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 5: “Managing the Conflicts Within”
1. To identify inner conflicts and ways of managing them.
2. To develop strategies and alternative ways of breaking cycles of anger and other inner conflicts.
3. To identify and create company resources useful in conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 6: “Conflicts: Heading ’em Off at the Pass”
1. To learn strategies for conflict prevention.
2. To develop workplace application for preventive measures.
3. To present what has been learned as a useful product for the company.
Conflict Resolution Poster

1. Create a poster that presents what you have learned in these workshops—a poster that can be helpful to your company.

2. Add your company’s logo to the poster. Make it colorful, multidimensional, informative, graphic, and simple to understand.

3. Evaluate the posters to determine which is best. Using group consensus, evaluate the posters for their content, presentation, and usefulness to people in your company.
Conflict Resolution Survey

1. What are the most frequent kinds of conflicts in the workplace?

2. How do people at work usually deal with conflicts? (Check as many as apply to your worksite.)

   ___ Get angry
   ___ Avoid the conflict
   ___ Listen to one another carefully
   ___ Look for revenge in some way
   ___ Force others to do it their way
   ___ Talk directly to the people involved
   ___ Have a meeting to talk it over
   ___ Take sides
   ___ Gossip or spread rumors
   ___ Get a supervisor to solve the conflict
   ___ Let it go
   ___ Silently resist
   ___ Try to understand the other persons point of view
   ___ Other ________________________________

3. How do you usually deal with a company conflict or with a personal conflict?

4. How do you wish people would handle conflicts?

5. What effects do unresolved conflicts have on people? On companies?

6. Describe your companys policy for dealing with conflicts in the workplace.

7. How could we prevent workplace conflicts?
8. Rate your ability to resolve conflicts. On a scale of 0 (not able) to 100 (very able), enter the number that best describes your competence:

- Dealing with your own conflicts: ______%
- Helping with the conflicts of others: ______%
- Handling company conflicts: ______%

9. Rate yourself as a communicator. On each line below, write A (excellent), B (effective), C (average), or D (ineffective):

- As a speaker
- As a listener
- With someone who speaks English as a second language
- With someone from a different culture
- With your co-workers
- With your supervisor or manager
- With your employees (if you're a supervisor)

10. Rate your company's communication effectiveness. Write A (excellent), B (effective), C (average), or D (ineffective):
Common Conflicts/Resolutions

Common Conflicts in the Workplace:

Typical Ways of Resolving Conflicts in the Workplace
Consensus =

The general opinion or agreement of a group.

Consensus =

A decision agreed upon by the entire group or team. A decision that all members can support and no members oppose.

Consensus involves time, listening, consideration of all ideas, flexibility, cooperation, and the will to act as a team for the best of the company, group, and individual.

Might not be everyone's first choice or priority. Might not make everyone totally satisfied.

Does not violate or compromise any strong convictions.

Is the most effective and desired goal of decision-making and conflict resolution.
Dear Abby

Part A

Read the letter to Abby.

Discuss a solution with your partner. Make sure you identify the real conflict. Try to find some helpful solutions. Share your ideas with the whole class.

Compare Abbys answer to your own and to the other answers read in class.

Working with the class, decide on the best solution.

Part B

Option 1

Write a short letter to Abby containing an unresolved conflict (either real or imagined) that you have had at work.

Share your letter with another person, who will play Abby, will write a solution, and then return your letter to you.

Option 2

Half of the class: As an employee, write a letter to your company (Dear Company), describing a conflict you are aware of and asking for a solution.

Other half of the class: Acting as a spokesperson for the company, write a letter to the employees (Dear Employees) concerning a company conflict and asking for a solution.

Exchange your letter with someone from the other half and propose resolutions to the conflicts raised.

Return your letters to the original writers and discuss the solutions.

A Hole in the Boat

Some people were sitting in a boat, when one of them took a drill and began to drill a hole under his seat.

The other people in the boat became very concerned and said to him, "What are you doing?"

He replied, "Am I not drilling the hole under my own seat? What does this have to do with you?"

Questions to discuss and ponder:

What does this have to do with you?
What does this have to do with your company?
What does this have to do with conflict resolution?

Resolving Conflicts

Lesson 2: Developing a Win-Win Attitude

Developing a “Win-Win” Mindset

When trying to resolve a conflict, one person does not have to be completely right and the other person completely wrong. There can be two winners! With some patience, thoughtfulness, and creativity we can often find a solution which allows both sides to be content. This is called a Win-Win situation. It is usually the most effective resolution.

To find a Win-Win solution, we have to be clear about what the real conflict is. We have to discuss the real issue or problem. We have to think about what each person involved in the conflict needs.

Consider the following conflict and what each person needs:

Pedro goes to the company tool room to find a tool he needs to complete a rush job. The tool is not there. Later he sees that Jim has the needed tool in his personal tool box. Pedro gets angry and yells at Jim. Jim tries to explain that he has had to use the tool several times that day, also for an important job. Pedro feels the pressure of his own deadline, becomes more angry, and demands the tool. Jim becomes more defensive and refuses to give Pedro the tool. They become involved in a lengthy argument until the supervisor comes and tells them to get back to work.

What is the conflict?

What does each person need?

What solutions can you think of for Jim and Pedro’s conflict?

Which solution could be a Win-Win solution?

For each person to win, who needs to do what?

Pedro needs to ____________________________________________

Jim needs to ____________________________________________

The Supervisor needs to ____________________________________

Name the conflict

1. Name, identify, or describe the primary conflict in the blank above.

2. Think of steps each party involved in the conflict can take.

3. Write the steps in the blanks above. (You may add additional steps for additional parties, for example, person C or D.)

4. Will any or all of these steps lead to a Win-Win resolution? Why or why not?
Workplace Conflict Scenarios

Read the following situation together. Discuss the questions with your group and write your answers.

Don, Amy, and Phillipe work in the same department, on the Day Shift. When they came in Friday morning, they realized the Night Shift had left several parts unfinished or with problems. This had happened several times before. Resentfully, Don, Amy, and Phillipe finished the work and fixed the problems. However, this reduced their own shift’s productivity. Their supervisor became angry when he saw their shift’s production. Though Don, Amy, and Phillipe tried to explain the problem to their supervisor, he just said he didn’t want to hear any excuses—he wanted to see results; if they couldn’t do the job effectively, someone else would. When they confronted the Night Shift, angrily, it turned into a huge argument with no resolve.

Part A
1. Name the conflict(s).
2. What does each person in the situation need?
3. What is a possible solution? (Try to use a Win-Win mindset, using the “Steps Toward Conflict Resolution” chart.)
4. What could you do if the first solution isn’t effective?

Part B
Name a conflict you are having, or have had, with someone at work:

What are some possible solutions?

How might there be a Win-Win resolution be achieved in your situation? (Write the steps on the “Steps Toward Conflict Resolution” chart)

Communication Tips

When you are speaking:

1. Try to be clear and concise as to your point.
2. Tell people exactly what you want them to know or do.
3. Use words your listener(s) will understand. (Avoid overly sophisticated, acronyms, or technical talk.)
4. Pay attention to the listeners body language.
5. Give your listener a chance to respond, clarify, or ask questions.
6. Make sure listeners understand your topic or context.
7. Check your tone of voice. How you say something is as important (if not more so) as what you say.
8. Try to enunciate clearly.
9. Think carefully before you speak.
10. Remember: Just because you know what you mean and you think you've said it clearly, others may still not know what you mean or understand you.

*Can you add another important tip for speaking effectively?

When you are listening:

1. Look at the person speaking to pay attention and show respect.
2. Ask questions to clarify or check your understanding.
3. Ignore distracting noises, people, or events as much as possible.
4. Don't think about what you want to say while the other person is speaking.
5. Always respond to the person speaking.
6. Don't interrupt, finish sentences, or hurry the person speaking.
7. Never assume you understand another person. Make sure!
8. Suspend your judgments for the moment. Allow yourself to really consider what the speaker is saying.
9. Try to restate the speakers main point and important facts, asking the speaker if your understanding is correct.
10. Listen with your eyes, face, body, mind, and heart. Be present to the one speaking. Remember: Listening is hard work, but it gives a high return on your investment.

*Can you add another tip for listening skillfully?

I came to the U.S. in 1986. My first impression was that I felt freedom, but lonely when I got home. On my first day here, I walked down the street. I felt hungry, so I stopped by a little snack shop to get something to eat. I gave my order: A hamburger and coke can. A cop was standing by the order window. He heard my order, looked at me, and asked, What do you want? I said, A hamburger and Coke can. He said, What, cocaine! The snack shop owner heard this and got scared. No cocaine sold here! he said. The cop came over to me and asked again, What do you want? I repeated, A Coke can, a Coke in can. Then everyone looked at me and laughed. They said, Next time, don't do it again. I felt embarrassed and left. I've never forgotten my first day in the U.S.
ESL and Cross-Cultural Communication

When speaking to people for whom English is a second language (ESL) or people from other cultures:

1. Speak clearly, slowly and simply. Avoid sophisticated language. Use short sentences. Stop so that the person can process what you are saying.
2. Don’t speak unnaturally or louder.
3. Avoid idioms, slang, and abbreviations.
4. Be patient. You might need to say the same thing several times, especially names, numbers, and directions. Spell it or write it out if necessary. Say it another way, with different words, or helpful gestures. Remember: Communication is the goal. Without it, everyone loses.
5. Check your tone of voice. Even though an ESL person might not understand all of what you say, he or she most often understands your tone, especially a negative one. All people respond better to gentleness, kindness, and respect.
6. Check to see if the person understands by asking specific questions. Do not ask, Do you understand? People from other cultures will often answer yes, especially to a person in a position of authority, as a sign of respect or politeness not as an indication of understanding.
7. People from many cultures will not look directly at you, believing it is disrespectful. Don’t force them to look you in the eye. They are most likely listening very carefully. You can try to explain or assure a person from another culture that it’s okay to face you directly, but it’s best not to force your customs on others.
8. Gestures are different in other cultures. Don’t assume that a gesture in America means the same in other parts of the world (or vice-versa). For example the positive Okay sign in America is very offensive to a Brazilian. Try to learn about another’s culture, especially gestures and customs.
9. Speak to ESL people the way you would want to be spoken to if you lived in a foreign country and had to survive using another language.
When listening to people for whom English is a second language or who are from other cultures:

1. Help them understand. Make it easier rather than more difficult.
2. If you don't understand something they say, ask again (and give them time to think and formulate a response - don't cut them off).
3. If you didn't hear what they said (sometimes ESL people speak softly due to a lack of confidence or a fear of ridicule), ask them to repeat the same words (when someone doesn't hear them they often assume it is because of their poor English skills).
4. Don't misinterpret or be offended by an ESL persons tone of voice. They are concentrating on choosing the right words, pronunciation, and grammatical structures, and they are considering cultural differences. Intonation is very difficult for them. Listen to their words.
5. Try not to correct an ESL speakers English while he or she is talking or in front of others to avoid confusion and embarrassment. Its better to help afterwards.
6. Understand that many cultures communicate effectively through indirect means vs. directly. They are usually not trying to be evasive or deceptive. Try to listen carefully for their intended meaning, it is often very thoughtful and considerate. Ask questions to clarify meaning or intent.
7. Many cultures are more passive than the U. S. They are not accustomed to speaking out in meetings, volunteering information, or speaking on behalf of themselves. This can be a very uncomfortable experience for both sides. Considerate questions, careful explanations, encouragement, and patience can yield the desired goals of communication and participation.
8. Use available moments during the work day to speak English with an ESL person. This can cultivate a relationship in which English skills can be developed and confidence gained. You will be greatly appreciated, and communication will occur, to the benefit of all.
For ESL speakers:

1. Speak slowly, clearly, and boldly.
2. Speak loud enough for others to hear you, especially in meetings. Often, others cannot hear you. Its not always your English, but your soft voice, that hinders communication.
3. Be willing to repeat your words as many times as needed until communication happens.
4. If someone doesn’t understand your pronunciation, try another word or describe what you mean. You can also try spelling or writing the word you are trying to pronounce. This can be very frustrating, but don’t give up too soon.
5. Take risks. Find someone you feel comfortable with and try new words and phrases. This is the only way to improve your communication skills.
6. Allow others to help you make the needed corrections—see the listener as your partner in communication.
7. It's okay to make mistakes. Perfection is not the goal communication is! Smile or laugh when you make mistakes and try again.
8. Don’t let people discourage you by their laughter or insults. Deflect negativity and keep going towards your goal: to communicate in English. Your efforts to learn and use English are admirable and worthy of respect.
9. Just because something is polite, respectful, or important in your culture, don’t assume it is the same in another culture. Your company has its own culture. You must work with a variety of different people in a common company culture while at work. Learn from, respect, and cooperate with people who are different.
10. Offer your ideas, suggestions, and opinions in meetings and on teams. Companies expect and need your verbal participation in groups.
ESL and Cross-Cultural Communication

For ESL listeners

1. Focus on understanding main points, not every word, otherwise you might get lost and miss the important information. Make sure you know the context or topic; it will help you understand necessary words and concepts.

2. Listen for important details and the order of steps or procedures (sequence: pay attention to words like first-second-third, then, next, before, after, finally, etc.).

3. Try to get the important facts and information in any discussion. If you do not understand what has been said in a meeting or class, after class ask someone to explain the necessary information.

4. Avoid side discussions (especially with someone in your first language) and other distractions while another is speaking. It's important to concentrate fully on the person speaking in order to understand. Conversation is like a puzzle: you need all the pieces for understanding.

5. Ask people to spell names and addresses, especially on the phone. Use the A-as-in-apple, B-as-in-boy, C-as-in-cat technique to clarify similar-sounding letters or words. Distinguish between O (say oh) and 0 (say zero), and be extra careful to distinguish between difficult sounds like 15 and 50, 13 and 30, etc.

6. Ask questions if you do not understand or need more information.

7. Say back what you think you understand to assure communication.

8. Ask supervisors or others to write down information important to your job.

9. Ask others to repeat if you do not understand. Don't just say Yes or Thank you or leave. Understanding the correct information is important for your job and your life. Don't guess; make sure you understand!

10. Practice at home. Listen to native-spoken English in short amounts. Tape or video record short segments to listen to repetitively. Use scripts of TV shows or closed-caption machines to check understanding. Most importantly, practice listening to native-speakers talking, and check for understanding.

* Keep learning English. Be a continual, lifelong student. It takes a long time, so be patient with yourself and others. Use what you learn, especially on the job. Your attempts to learn and use English are important for you and very important to your company.

Past-Conflict Evaluation

Think of a time when you could not agree with another person or group. Describe the situation briefly below:

Was it a fair fight?
Yes
No

Why or why not?

Can you now think of a better way to handle it?
Tips for Disagreements

1. Treat the other person with respect. Don't blame or accuse!
   Avoid personal attacks (for example, That's stupid! You don't know what you're talking about!)
   Tip: Tell why you disagree; explain your feelings.

2. Ask questions to be sure you understand.
   Ask, for example, Are you saying...? OR: Is this what you mean...?

3. Find something you can agree to.
   There must be something you both can agree to, even when you feel or think differently about the subject. Find common ground.

4. Agree to disagree.
   Some conflicts don't get resolved right away. Acknowledge that you have a difference of opinion and agree to respect one another. Don't let the problem get in the way of your common tasks or in the way of company business.

5. Don't give up.
   Keep open the option of a later resolution. Sometimes people need time to calm down and process the problem.

Can you add tips to this list? Use the space below.

Lesson 4: How to Have a Fair Fight

Strategies

1. Stop insisting on your point of view.
   Don't repeat it over and over. Say it once, simply and clearly. Give the other person(s) time to process your point.

2. Try to stay calm.
   Anger worsens the problem! Then people say foolish words, reactions multiply, and doors to future resolution close.

3. Focus on understanding the other person's main point.
   Try to restate the other person's point clearly and fairly to make sure you are understanding correctly.

4. Ask for time to think and try to set up another time to talk.
   To make sure you keep working on the problem, set a day and time when you'll meet again. Use the time to process and think about the others need and your real needs.

5. Suggest a third party or mediator.
   If the conflict seems to be at a standstill, consider asking a mutually respected person to help work out a resolution.

6. Minimize conflict damage to leave doors open.
   Do...
   - Show respect
   - Stay calm.
   - Think of the other person and the company.
   - Use listening/speaking tools.
   - Keep a Win-Win mindset.
   Don't...
   - Devalue, insult, ridicule.
   - Blow up or rant and rave.
   - Give ultimatums or impossible choices.
   - Do all the talking.
   - Give up.

7. Use your conflict-resolution tools to think of alternative solutions that make for Win-Win conclusions.

8. Vent your feelings, or bounce your ideas off a neutral third party.

9. Try again! Listen to the other person's new ideas, and suggest your alternatives.

10. If step 9 doesn't bring a satisfactory conclusion, try using a mutually trusted mediator and repeat steps 1 through 9!
Managing the Conflict Within

Part A
1. Write about a time when you were really angry. What happened and why? How did you act/react? Was the conflict resolved? If so, how? If not, why not? What do you wish you had done differently?

2. In the company, what things are really frustrating for you or make you angry? (Share with a partner)

3. How does your frustration or anger affect workplace productivity?

Part B
1. How do you manage or deal with your anger, frustration, or other inner conflicts? (Count to 100? Go for a walk? Yell at the dog? Vent to a partner? other?)

2. What are some conflict prevention strategies you can use? How can you plan before the problem? How can you contain the destructive factors of a conflict?

3. What is a useful strategy or plan you can use when you get frustrated or angry?
Seeing Another Point of View May Help Break the Cycle of Anger

By Doris Helmering
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Fighting with someone over an event that happened two months ago? Two years ago? Seven years ago?

Judy and her husband agreed that she would be a stay-at-home mom and raise their four children even though she had a master's degree. The year before their last child was out of the nest, her husband announced he wanted a divorce.

One of his reasons he desired a woman who did something with her life other than baby-sit children. Although this was five years ago, Judy continues to fight with her husband in her head and feels like a victim.

Mark lost his job seven months ago. Although the handwriting was on the wall that his job might be ending, Mark did nothing to make himself a more valuable employee, nor did he start pursuing other job possibilities.

Today, still out of a job, Mark vacillates between feeling angry with his old boss and angry with himself.

The question: How do you rid yourself of continuing a fight in your head and move on in your life?

One technique is to try to understand the other person's point of view. What other reasons did the husband have for leaving his wife? Why did the boss choose to let Mark go?

Most people who are continually bound up in their anger are unable to clearly see the situation from the other person's vantage point. They justify their own behavior and exaggerate what the other person did. As soon as you can see an event from another person's viewpoint, you soften emotionally and your anger dissipates.

Another technique is not to allow yourself to think about the event. Judy must stop herself from reflecting on her life with her ex-husband. For her these thoughts of the past are dangerous because they provoke her anger.

Mark needs to forget his old job and concentrate on looking for a new one.

Research shows the way to sustain anger is to brood about the event or to rehash it again and again with your friends. Once you change your thinking and conversations to other topics, your feelings of being trod upon will leave.

Exercise is another way to shed anger. It's just too physically taxing to fight with someone in your head while at the same time walking briskly, pumping iron or using a stair-stepper.

Feeling angry is unpleasant and mostly a waste of energy. It makes feeling intimate and close to others impossible. And it often results in lowered self-esteem.

The best way to rid yourself of ongoing anger—use the techniques suggested above, and remember: There is almost nothing you can't forgive.
Breaking the Cycle of Anger

Read "Seeing Another Point of View..." and answer the following questions:

1. What are the main conflicts used as examples in the article?

2. What techniques does the article suggest to help break the cycle of anger?

3. Can you come up with any other strategies to break the cycle?

4. Think of a "cycle" situation in your company. How might "finding another point of view" or one of other strategies benefit this situation and possibly break the cycle?

5. Do you now face a personal conflict that might be healed by an alternative perspective or by some other strategy?
Workplace Resources

1. What avenues exist at your workplace for conflict resolution?

2. What resources are there for anger/inner conflict management? List as many as you know:

3. Are different kinds of conflicts handled by different people or departments?

4. Are you encouraged to participate in solving conflicts? If so, in what ways can or do you participate?

5. Do you believe your ideas are taken seriously? Are they ever implemented?

6. In the company, are "ground rules" used and followed? If so what are they?

7. What kinds of resources, intrapersonal or interpersonal do you wish were available in your company? If they do not exist now, how might they be created?
Another Way

The train clanked and rattled through the suburbs of Tokyo on a drowsy spring afternoon. Our car was comparatively empty—a few housewives with their kids in tow, some old folks going shopping. I gazed absently at the drab houses and dusty hedgerows.

At one station the doors opened, and suddenly the afternoon quiet was shattered by a man bellowing violent, incomprehensible curses. The man staggered into our car. He wore laborer’s clothing and was big, drunk and dirty. Screaming, he swung at a woman holding a baby. The blow sent her spinning into the laps of an elderly couple. It was a miracle that the baby was unharmed.

Terrified, the couple jumped up and scrambled toward the other end of the car. The laborer aimed a kick at the retreating back of the old woman but missed as she scuttled to safety. This so enraged the drunk that he grabbed the metal pole in the center of the car and tried to wrench it out of its stanchion. I could see that one of his hands was cut and bleeding. The train lurches ahead, the passengers frozen with fear. I stood up.

I was young then, some 20 years ago, and in pretty good shape. I’d been putting in a solid eight hours of Aikido training nearly every day for the past three years. I liked to throw and grapple. I thought I was tough. The trouble was, my martial skill was untested in actual combat. As students of Aikido, we were not allowed to fight.

“Aikido,” my teacher had said again and again, “is the art of reconciliation. Whoever has the mind to fight has broken his connection with the universe. If you try to dominate people, you’re already defeated. We study how to resolve conflict, not how to start it.”

I listened to his words. I tried hard. I even went so far as to cross the street to avoid the “chimpira,” the pinball punks who lounged around the train stations. My forbearance exalted me. I felt both tough and holy. In my heart, however, I wanted an absolutely legitimate opportunity whereby I might save the innocent by destroying the guilty.

“This is it!” I said to myself as I got to my feet. “People are in danger. If I don’t do something fast, somebody will probably get hurt.”

Seeing me stand up, the drunk recognized a chance to focus his rage. “Aha!” he roared. “A foreigner! You need a lesson in Japanese manners!”

I held on lightly to the commuter strap overhead and gave him a slow look of disgust and dismissal. I planned to take this turkey apart, but he had to make the first move. I wanted him mad, so I pursed my lips and blew him an insolent kiss.

“All right!” he hollered. “You’re gonna get a lesson!” He gathered himself for a rush at me.

A fraction of a second before he could move, someone shouted “Hey!” It was ear-splitting. I remember the strangely joyous, lilting quality of it—as though you and a friend had been searching diligently for something, and he had suddenly stumbled upon it. “Hey!”

Another Way

I wheeled to my left; the drunk spun to his right. We both stared down at a little old Japanese man. He must have been well into his seventies, this tiny gentleman, sitting there immaculate in his kimono. He took no notice of me, but beamed delightedly at the laborer, as though he had a most important, most welcome secret to share.

"C'mere," the old man said in an easy vernacular, beckoning to the drunk. "C'mere and talk with me." He waved his hands lightly.

The big man followed, as if on a string. He planted his feet belligerently in front of the old gentleman and roared above the clacking wheels, "Why the hell should I talk to you?" The drunk now had his back to me. If his elbow moved so much as a millimeter, I'd drop him in his socks.

The old man continued to beam at the laborer. "What'cha been drinkin'? he asked, his eyes sparkling with interest. "I been drinkin' sake," the laborer bellowed back, "and it's none of your business!"

Flecks of spittle spattered the old man.

"Oh, that's wonderful," the old man said, "absolutely wonderful! You see, I love sake, too. Every night, me and my wife (she's 76, you know), we warm up a little bottle of sake and take it out into the garden, and we sit on an old wooden bench. We watch the sun go down, and we look to see how our persimmon tree is doing. My great-grandfather planted that tree, and we worry about whether it will recover from those ice storms we had last winter. Our tree has done better than I expected, though, especially when you consider the poor quality of the soil. It is gratifying to watch when we take our sake and go out to enjoy the evening—even when it rains!" He looked up at the laborer, eyes twinkling.

As he struggled to follow the old man, his face began to soften. His fists slowly unclenched. "Yeah," he said. "I love persimmons, too..." His voice trailed off.

"Yes," said the old man, smiling, "and I'm sure you have a wonderful wife."

"No," replied the laborer. "My wife died." Very gently, swaying with the motion of the train, the big man began to sob. "I don't got no wife, I don't got no home, I don't got no job. I'm so ashamed of myself." Tears rolled down his cheeks, a spasm of despair rippled through his body.

As I stood there in my well-scrubbed youthful innocence, my make-this-world-safe-for-democracy righteousness, I felt dirtier than he was.

Then the train arrived at my stop. As the doors opened, I heard the old man cluck sympathetically. "My, my," he said, "that is a difficult predicament indeed. Sit down here and tell me about it."

I turned my head for one last look. The laborer was sprawled on the seat with his head in the old man's lap. The old man was softly stroking the filthy, matted hair.

As the train pulled away, I sat down on a bench in the station. What I had wanted to do with muscle had been accomplished with kind words. I had just seen Aikido in action, and the essence of it was love. I would have to practice the art with an entirely different spirit. It would be a long time before I could speak about the resolution of conflict.
A Third Alternative

1. Read "Another Way." What is the main point of this story?

2. How did each character in the story manage conflict?

3. Can you find a personal application for this story?

4. Is there a way to apply this story to a company conflict?

5. Are conflicts always negative? How can conflicts benefit a person or a company?

6. What other emotions, problems, and kinds of stress cause inner conflict and affect the workplace? How can they be turned into productive factors?
Strategies of Prevention

1. How can we prevent conflicts in the workplace? List as many strategies as you can:

2. Which strategies have you already used?

3. Which ones might be helpful for you to try in the future?

4. Which ones need to be further developed within your company?

5. Can you suggest how these strategies might be developed in your company?
All I Really Needed to Learn, I Learned in Kindergarten

"I realized then that I already know most of what's necessary to live a meaningful life - that it isn't all that complicated. I know it. And have known it for a long, long time. Living it - well, that's another matter, yes? Here's my Credo:

"All I really need to know about how to live and what to do and how to be I learned in kindergarten. Wisdom was not at the top of the graduate-school mountain, but there in the sandpile of Sunday School. These are the things I learned:

"Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and milk are good for you. Live a balanced life - learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work every day some. Take a nap every afternoon. When you go out into the world, watch for traffic, hold hands, and stick together. Be aware of wonder. Remember the little seed in the Styrofoam cup: the roots go down and the plants go up and nobody really knows how or why, but we are all like that. Goldfish and hamsters and white mice and even the little seed in the Styrofoam cup - they all die. So do we. And then remember the Dick-and-Jane books and the first word you learned - the biggest word of all - LOOK.

"Everything you need to know is in there somewhere. The Golden Rule and love and basic sanitation. Ecology and politics and equality and sane living.

"Take any one of those items and extrapolate it to your family life or your work or your government or your world and it holds true and clear and firm."

Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1–6

Goals: To help students (1) understand workplace conflicts and (2) develop skills for handling conflicts constructively and creatively.

Objectives of Workshop 1: “Identifying Workplace Conflicts and Ways of Resolution”
1. To identify common workplace conflicts.
2. To identify (a) ways of resolution that help and (b) ways that hinder.
3. To understand the meaning of consensus.

Objectives of Workshop 2: “Developing a Win-Win Attitude”
1. To identify your own conflict-management style.
2. To understand why Win-Win options are better solutions.
3. To resolve some practical and personal workplace conflicts. [AU:”practical” OK?]

1. To identify and improve effective speaking and listening skills.
2. To use communication tools appropriately in conflict resolutions.
3. To improve communication and understanding among employees who are native English speakers, employees for whom English is a second language (ESL), and employees from different cultures.

Objectives of Workshop 4: “How to Have a Fair Fight”
1. To create and use guidelines for respectful and constructive disagreement.
2. To apply these guidelines to the workplace in an effort to minimize conflict damage.
3. To use strategies necessary for creating future possibilities of conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 5: “Managing the Conflicts Within”
1. To identify inner conflicts and ways of managing them.
2. To develop strategies and alternative ways of breaking cycles of anger and other inner conflicts.
3. To identify and create company resources useful in conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 6: “Conflicts: Heading ’em Off at the Pass”
1. To learn strategies for conflict prevention.
2. To develop workplace application for preventive measures.
3. To present what has been learned as a useful product for the company.
Conflict Resolution Poster

1. Create a poster that presents what you have learned in these workshops—a poster that can be helpful to your company.

2. Add your company’s logo to the poster. Make it colorful, multidimensional, informative, graphic, and simple to understand.

3. Evaluate the posters to determine which is best. Using group consensus, evaluate the posters for their content, presentation, and usefulness to people in your company.

Supervisor Lesson 1
\textbf{Lesson Description}

This session assists supervisors in understanding the goals and objectives of the conflict resolution module. By including the supervisors in the training up front, the instructor can address their needs and concerns and encourage continual support for the employees throughout the sessions and consequent implementation.

The session begins with a discussion about how conflict is handled in the company. Supervisors then fill out the same survey as their employees will. Then the trainer presents an overview of the module's topics and objectives, gives the supervisors a chance to "flip through" the module, and allows time for questions and clarification.

Supervisors are then asked what effect unresolved conflicts have on their company's ROI. A list of answers is compiled, as well as the potential ROI of this module.
Objectives

By completing this lesson, supervisors will be able to:

1. Understand the objectives of the training their employees will be given.
2. Participate in the training and its workplace applications.
3. Realize the ROI benefit of this training.

Opening: 15 Minutes

1. Welcome everyone and introduce yourself, JobLink, and the module topic.

2. Ask "How are conflicts at work typically handled at (company name)?"

3. Lead a discussion on the process of conflict resolution at the company. Write down on a flipchart or overhead the options the company recommends.

4. Ask, "How do conflicts between employees or between supervisors and employees effect your business? Do they have an impact? How?"
Conflict Resolution Survey

1. What are the most frequent kinds of conflicts in the workplace?

2. How do people at work usually deal with conflicts? (Check as many as apply to your workplace.)
   - Get angry
   - Avoid the conflict
   - Listen to one another carefully
   - Look for revenge in some way
   - Do others to do it their way
   - Talk directly to the people involved
   - Have a meeting to talk it over
   - Take sides
   - Gossip or spread rumors
   - Get a supervisor to solve the conflict
   - Let it go
   - Stand by resist
   - Try to understand the other person's point of view
   - Other

3. How do you usually deal with a company conflict or with a personal conflict?

4. How do you wish people would handle conflicts?

5. What effects do unresolved conflicts have on people? On companies?

6. Describe your company's policy for dealing with conflicts in the workplace.

7. How could we prevent workplace conflicts?

Supervisor Lesson 1

Supervisor's Role In Training

Generally it would be helpful to aware of what your employees are doing each week. Your list of "Assignments - 1/4" will help you do this. It would be beneficial to read some of the material and do some of the activities along with them.

Lesson 1: Identity Conflicts and Ways of Resolution in the Workplace

What you can do:
- Go over the Conflict Resolution Log with your employees.

What to watch for:
- Employees will begin "Conflict Resolution Log" this week.

Questions to ask:
- "What is conflict resolution?" "What conflicts do you see in the workplace that affect your job?"

Discussion topics:
- How do conflicts negatively affect our productivity and morale? What can we do to make changes?

Lesson 2: Developing a "Win-Win" Attitude

What you can do:
- Continue participation and discussion of the "Log" Read "A Hole in the Boat" Encourage the vocabulary discussion of, and applications of a "Win-Win" mindset within teams, cells, and departments.

What to watch for:
- Application of a "Win-Win" mindset in resolving conflicts.

Questions to ask:
- "What is a "Win-Win" mindset?" "How can we apply it to resolving conflicts?"

Discussion topics:
- Discuss how the "Role in the Boat" applies to work situations.

Lesson 3: Tools for Conflict Resolution: Speaking and Listening Constructively

What you can do:
- Continue observations, notes, and discussion of "Log" Read "Communication Tips" and do the "Self-Evaluation" Read ESL and Cross-Cultural Communication. Encourage ESL workers to practice their skills.

What to watch for:
- Employees asking more questions for understanding.

Questions to ask:
- "How do you bring a good communicator aid in conflict resolution?" "Which of the communication skills do you think you are good at?" "Which of the tips do you find most helpful?"

Discussion topics:
- How can we help each other communicate better?

Supervisor's Role In Training (continued)

Lesson 4: Managing Conflicts Within

What you can do:
- Continue observations, notes, and discussion of "Log" Read "Seeing Another Point of View." Do and discuss "Workplace Resources" Read "Another Way." Encourage employees to use their knowledge and skills at home and at work.

What to watch for:
- Ways employees try to break the cycle of anger and stress by finding helpful alternatives to dealing with anger at work.

Questions to ask:
- "What resources are available or needed at our worksite to help in conflict and anger resolutions?"

Discussion topics:
- What strategies could we implement in our department to better manage conflicts and anger?

Lesson 5: Conflicts: Heading 'Em Off at the Pass

What you can do:
- Continue work on "Log" Help conflict observation, conflict management, and "win-win" become mindset in your work area. End up the Conflict Resolution Strategies Lessons 1-4 or "Wolf Pack" "Workplace as Community" by Pack. Appreciate and encourage your employees with regard to their training efforts and applications to the workplace. Be interested in their project posters and find ways to bring the ideas into other parts of your area or company. Continually emphasize the ROI aspect of conflict resolutions.

What to watch for:
- Employees implementation of training in specific workplace contexts. Ways to facilitate conflict resolution strategies and prevention. The effect of conflict resolutions on company ROI.

Questions to ask:
- "How can our department transfer the conflict resolution training and build it into the structure of our company?" "How can each situation in my department become a "win-win" possibility?"

Discussion topics:
- How can we continually implement simple strategies, such as "what we learned in Kindergarten," in preventative ways and in conflict resolutions?
Fourth Activity: 5 Minutes

1. Distribute "Supervisor's Role in Training" project it, and explain how supervisors can assist and help transfer this training into the workplace.

2. Allow for questions, clarifications, and additions (or subtractions, if necessary).

Fifth Activity: 10 Minutes (Optional)

1. Distribute "All I Really Need..." and project it on the overhead.
2. Read Fulgham's introduction aloud.
3. Divide supervisors into small groups.
4. Ask them to determine workplace applications for each simple principle.
5. In the large group, ask for responses.

Supervisor Lesson 2
Lesson Description

This session is intended to help supervisors evaluate the training their employees were given and to determine ways to extend the training into continued workplace application.

The session begins with supervisors filling out a Post-Survey, which becomes the basis for a discussion of their observations and reactions.

The instructor then presents observations, evaluations, and recommendations based on the training sessions and post assessments. ROI is evaluated in light of supervisor/instructor comments. This is followed by a question-and-answer, open-discussion.

The last activity gives supervisors an opportunity to explore "What's Next?" with the instructor serving as a facilitator for future implementation of the conflict resolution knowledge and skills within this particular company.
Objectives

By completing this lesson, supervisors will be able to:

1. Evaluate the training given in light of present and future benefit.
2. Receive information to help implementation.
3. Determine next-step applications for the workplace.

Materials Needed

Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1–6

Objectives of Workshop 1: "Identifying Workplace Conflicts and Ways of Resolution"
1. To identify common workplace conflicts.
2. To identify the causes and underlying reasons for conflicts.
3. To determine the impact of conflicts on the workplace.
4. To develop strategies for preventing conflicts.

Objectives of Workshop 2: "Developing a Win-Win Attitude"
1. To identify your own conflict-management style.
2. To understand why Win-Win options are better solutions.
3. To resolve some practical and personal workplace conflicts.

Objectives of Workshop 3: "Tools for Conflict Resolution: Speaking and Listening Effectively"
1. To identify and improve effective speaking and listening skills.
2. To use communication tools appropriately in conflict resolutions.
3. To improve communication and understanding among employees who are native English speakers, employees for whom English is a second language (ESL), and employees from different cultures.

Objectives of Workshop 4: "How to Have a Fair Fight"
1. To create and use guidelines for respectful and constructive disagreement.
2. To apply these guidelines to the workplace in an effort to minimize conflict damage.
3. To use strategies necessary for creating future possibilities of conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 5: "Managing the Conflicts Within"
1. To identify inner conflicts and ways of managing them.
2. To develop strategies and alternative ways of breaking cycles of anger and other inner conflicts.
3. To identify and create company resources useful in conflict resolution.

Objectives of Workshop 6: "Conflicts: Heading 'em Off at the Pass"
1. To learn strategies for conflict prevention.
2. To develop workplace application for preventive measures.
3. To present what has been learned as a useful product for the company.
Activities

Opening: 5 Minutes

1. Welcome supervisors.

2. Remind them, in summary fashion, of the goals and objectives of the training lessons. Use "Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1-6".
Activities

First Activity: 15 Minutes

1. Encourage them to share their observations, reactions, and evaluations of the training sessions and/or themselves.

2. Record supervisor's comments and bring them back to JobLink.
Activities

Second Activity: 15 Minutes

1. Share your observations, evaluations, and recommendations based on the six sessions and assessment tools. (Pre/Post surveys/tests, final posters, 'Conflict Resolution Logs,' class participation, etc.) Make a copy for JobLink.

2. Present student-made posters as a graphic, concise evaluation of what has been learned. Encourage the use of these posters within the company. Explore with supervisors the possibilities of awarding the best poster (or all posters) some special honor by the company, department, and cell.

3. Allow for questions and clarifications.
Activities

Third Activity: 10 Minutes

1. Lead supervisors in a discussion of an evaluation of present and future ROI for their company ("Be on the lookout for future benefits"), based on their previous comments and evaluations.

2. Facilitate an open discussion as to what this all means for the company, the employees, and the supervisors.
What's Next?

1. What aspects of the training did you find helpful for your employees?

2. How did you see the training being used back at work?

3. What are you currently doing to support the training your employees have received?

4. What could you do that you are not doing now to support the continued use of the skills your employees learned in training?

5. Where do you recommend we go from here?
Activities

Fourth Activity: 10 Minutes

1. Divide supervisors into small groups.

2. Distribute, project and ask them to discuss "What's Next?", so as to explore the next steps in implementing conflict-resolution training and skill development.

3. Ask supervisors to share some of their steps with the whole group.

4. Write their steps on a blank transparency.

5. Determine together whether there is any consensus—and if so, indicate it.

6. If appropriate, recommend other JobLink modules or resources as bridges for the desired steps.
Activities

Ending: 5 Minutes

1. Restate, in summary form, the goals and objectives of the Conflict Resolution lesson, as well as those of the supervisor sessions.

2. Encourage ongoing implementation, involvement, and support of what has been learned in this module.

3. Thank supervisors for their time, participation, and support. Remind them that their investment will bring further ROI.

4. Collect materials and say good-bye!
Conflict Resolution Survey

1. What are the most frequent kinds of conflicts in the workplace?

2. How do people at work usually deal with conflicts? (Check as many as apply to your worksite.)

   - Get angry
   - Avoid the conflict
   - Listen to one another carefully
   - Look for revenge in some way
   - Force others to do it their way
   - Talk directly to the people involved
   - Have a meeting to talk it over
   - Take sides
   - Gossip or spread rumors
   - Get a supervisor to solve the conflict
   - Let it go
   - Silently resist
   - Try to understand the other persons point of view
   - Other _____________________

3. How do you usually deal with a company conflict or with a personal conflict?

4. How do you wish people would handle conflicts?

5. What effects do unresolved conflicts have on people? On companies?

6. Describe your company's policy for dealing with conflicts in the workplace.

7. How could we prevent workplace conflicts?
Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1–6

Goals: To help students (1) understand workplace conflicts and (2) develop skills for handling conflicts constructively and creatively.

Objectives of Workshop 1: “Identifying Workplace Conflicts and Ways of Resolution”
1. To identify common workplace conflicts.
2. To identify (a) ways of resolution that help and (b) ways that hinder.
3. To understand the meaning of consensus.

Objectives of Workshop 2: “Developing a Win-Win Attitude”
1. To identify your own conflict-management style.
2. To understand why Win-Win options are better solutions.
3. To resolve some practical and personal workplace conflicts. [AU: “practical” OK?]

Objectives of Workshop 3: “Tools for Conflict Resolution: Speaking and Listening Constructively”
1. To identify and improve effective speaking and listening skills.
2. To use communication tools appropriately in conflict resolutions.
3. To improve communication and understanding among employees who are native English speakers, employees for whom English is a second language (ESL), and employees from different cultures.

Objectives of Workshop 4: “How to Have a Fair Fight”
1. To create and use guidelines for respectful and constructive disagreement.
2. To apply these guidelines to the workplace in an effort to minimize conflict damage.

Comments/Questions:
Supervisor's Role in Training

Generally it would be helpful to be aware of what your employees are working on each week. Your list of "Lesson Objectives: 1-6" will help you do this. It would be beneficial to read some of the material and do some of the activities along with them. (Being "in it" with them will yield the greatest payoff.) A packet of materials will be given to you for this purpose. These are general guidelines you may use as time and opportunity permit. As you know, the more time and energy invested, the higher will be the return—for the employee, yourself, and this company.

Lesson 1: Identify Conflicts and Ways of Resolution in the Workplace

What you can do: Go over the Conflict Resolution Logs with your employees.
What to watch for: Employees will begin "Conflict Resolution Logs" this week.
Questions to ask: "What is conflict resolution?" "What conflicts do you see in the workplace that effect your job?"
Discussion topics: How do conflicts negatively affect our productivity and morale? What can we do to reach consensus?

Lesson 2: Developing a "Win-Win" Attitude

What you can do: Continue participation and discussion of the "Logs." Read "A Hole in the Boat." Encourage the vocabulary, discussion of, and applications of a "Win-Win" mindset within teams, cells, and departments.
What to watch for: Application of a "Win-Win" mindset in resolving conflicts.
Questions to ask: "What is a "Win-Win" mindset?" "How can we apply it to resolving conflicts?"
Discussion topics: Discuss how the "Hole in the Boat" applies to work situations.

Lesson 3: Tools for Conflict Resolution: Speaking and Listening Constructively

What you can do: Continue observations, entries, and discussion of "Logs." Read "Communication Tips" and do the "Self-Evaluation." Read "ESL & Cross-Cultural Communication." Encourage ESL workers to practice their skills.
What to watch for: Employees asking more questions for understanding.
Questions to ask: "How does being a good communicator aid in conflict resolution?" "Which of the communication skills do you think you are good at?" "Which of the communication skills would you like to get better at?" "How do you plan to do that?"
Discussion topics: How can we help each other communicate better?
Supervisor's Role in Training

Lesson 4: How to Have a Fair Fight

What you can do: Continue participating in the discussion of the "Logs." Read "Tips for Disagreements" and "Strategies." Encourage their implementation. Give any observations, feedback, or suggestions to the trainer so that any necessary adjustments might be made.

What to watch for: Constructive disagreements, respectful arguments, uses of strategies in resolving conflicts.

Questions to ask: Are you using any strategies in your training to help in disagreements? Has anyone been respectful to you during a recent conflict?

Discussion topics: "Dog eat dog world." Rules for a fair fight. Strategies and tips for disagreements.

Lesson 5: Managing the Conflicts Within

What you can do: Continue observations, entries, and discussion of "Logs." Read "Seeing Another Point of View...." Do and discuss "Workplace Resources" Read "Another Way." Encourage employees to use their knowledge and skills at home and at work.

What to watch for: Ways employees try to break the cycles of anger. People who demonstrate skill in finding helpful alternatives to dealing with anger at work.

Questions to ask: What resources are available or needed at our worksite to help in conflict and anger resolution?

Discussion topics: What strategies could we implement in our department to better manage conflicts and anger?

Lesson 6: Conflicts: Heading 'Em Off at the Pass

What you can do: Continue work on "Logs." Help conflict observation, conflict management, and "win-win" become mindsets in your work arena. Reread the "Conflict Resolution Objectives: Lessons 1-6." Reread "Workplace as Community" by Peck. Appreciate and encourage your employees with regard to their training efforts and applications to the workplace. Be interested in their project posters and find ways to bring the ideas into other parts of your area or company. Continually emphasize the ROI aspect of conflict resolutions.

What to watch for: Employees implementation of training in specific worksite contexts. Ways to facilitate conflict resolution strategies and prevention. The effect of conflict resolutions on company ROI.

Questions to ask: How can our department transfer the conflict resolution training and build it into the structures of our company? How can each situation in my department become a "win-win" possibility?

Discussion topics: How can we continually implement simple strategies, such as "what we learned in Kindergarten," in preventative ways and in conflict resolution?
All I Really Needed to Learn, I Learned in Kindergarten

"I realized then that I already know most of what's necessary to live a meaningful life - that it isn't all that complicated. I know it. And have known it for a long, long time. Living it - well, that's another matter, yes? Here's my Credo:

"All I really need to know about how to live and what to do and how to be I learned in kindergarten. Wisdom was not at the top of the graduate-school mountain, but there in the sandpile of Sunday School. These are the things I learned:

"Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and milk are good for you. Live a balanced life - learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work every day some. Take a nap every afternoon. When you go out into the world, watch for traffic, hold hands, and stick together. Be aware of wonder. Remember the little seed in the Styrofoam cup: the roots go down and the plants go up and nobody really knows how or why, but we are all like that. Goldfish and hamsters and white mice and even the little seed in the Styrofoam cup - they all die. So do we. And then remember the Dick-and-Jane books and the first word you learned - the biggest word of all - LOOK.

"Everything you need to know is in there somewhere. The Golden Rule and love and basic sanitation. Ecology and politics and equality and sane living.

"Take any one of those items and extrapolate it to your family life or your work or your government or your world and it holds true and dear and firm."
