Discussion of business ethics rests on rather ambiguous grounds. What one person considers highly unethical can be legitimate in another person's eye. Many businesses operate under tenets that, although not illegal, most people would consider unethical. Having the ability to distinguish between ethical and unethical practices does not guarantee that a business owner will consistently choose the ethical decision. Business owners need to realize the tremendous benefits of operating an ethical company and severe disadvantages of using unethical operations. Guidelines that can help them create or improve the ethical standards within their companies include the following: (1) if the company has committed a serious error, do not attempt to cover it up; (2) create a believable public commitment to ethical operations; (3) establish a strategy to communicate the ethics guidelines to the staff; (4) build trust with employees and constantly monitor the ethics program; (5) hire people who can uphold the company's high ethical standards; and (5) realize that company executives are role models. Trust is one of the company's most vital assets. Maintaining the highest ethical standards adds to a company's value and success. Consequences of success in an unethical business are short lived. If customers or clients learn a company cheats, they may never return. A business cannot operate successfully if employees abuse sick days, cut corners on quality, lie to colleagues, cover up incidents, deceive customers, and take credit for co-workers' ideas. (YLB)
Business Ethics
Digest Number 98-1
February 25, 1998

Business Ethics
By Kambiz Akhavan

The goal of any for-profit business is obviously to make money—and lots of it. The issue that this digest intends to raise is whether or not the pursuit of profit should continue without regard to ethical considerations. Business ethics, as a topic of discussion and study, has been expanding rapidly since the 1980s. The Ethics Resource Center reports that the percentage of American businesses with codes of ethics has jumped from 13% to 73% over the last decade (Haddad, 1997). Apparently, the term business ethics—once considered an oxymoron—has become a buzzword in today's economy. Everyone from established multi-national corporations to start-up entrepreneurs needs to be aware of the scope and relevance of this growing issue and its various nuances.

The entire discussion of business ethics still rests on rather ambiguous grounds. Often, what one person considers highly unethical can be absolutely legitimate in another person's eyes. Many businesses owners feel that as long as the law is not violated, then anything goes. Despite the subjectivity of many ethical issues, the following activities are almost unanimously considered unethical: breaking the law, misleading consumers, cheating on taxes, exploiting labor, and harming the environment.

Many businesses operate under tenets that, although not illegal, most Americans would still consider unethical. Consider that between 1990 and 1995, workers' average pay rose by 16% in the United States, while corporate profits jumped by 75%, and chief executives' average annual income increased by 92%. These statistics illustrate that the motto "spread the wealth" rarely applies to corporate America. The qualifier "rarely" must be emphasized since several mega-corporations do weigh ethical considerations heavily. For example, billionaire finance wizard George Soros says that capitalism fosters "too much competition and too little cooperation." (Lloyd, 1997, p.27). He always tries to encourage ethical practices, and he also regularly gives huge sums of money to small, progressive charities. Other well-known "alternative capitalists" include: Paul Newman of Newman's Own—a company which gives 100% of its after-tax profits to charity, the board members of international environmental groups such as Greenpeace, and people like Aaron Feuerstein—a wealthy executive who continued to pay his employees' salaries for 90 days even though the factory where they worked had burned down (Vaughn, 1997).

Having the ability to distinguish between ethical and unethical practices does not always guarantee that a business owner will consistently choose the ethical decision. Business owners may recognize that certain activities are unethical and still continue to do them. For example, an Inc. Magazine poll asked business owners if they would skirt the intent of the law without actually violating the letter of the law; many of them said yes. In fact, 57% would do so against the IRS; 50% against their competitors; 38% against their health insurance company; 31% against the Environmental Protection Agency; and 7% against their own customers (Caggiano, 1992). Rather than simply recognizing the difference between ethical and unethical practices, business owners need to realize the tremendous benefits of operating an ethical company, and the severe disadvantages of utilizing unethical operations.

The following guidelines will help business owners create and/or improve the ethical standards within their respective companies:
- If the company has committed a serious error, DO NOT attempt to cover it up. "An n saves you lots of trouble down the road," states Dr. William Woo, a journalism professor at Berkeley and Stanford. He warns that, "Nothing is more damaging to credibility than the retraction or modification of a story." (LaGanga, 1997 p. 11)

- Create a believable public commitment to ethical operations. Have it signed by the chief executive and display it prominently.
- Establish a strategy to communicate the ethics guidelines to the staff.
- Build trust with employees and constantly monitor the ethics program (Groves, 1997).
- Give employees the opportunity to participate in the development of corporate policies and decisions that affect their lives. This inclusion will boost morale and increase productivity.
- Judge corporate economic policies and decisions on whether they protect or undermine the dignity of the people affected. Remember that employees also have needs and dreams, problems and potential.
- Hire people who can uphold your company's high ethical standards. A worker can always follow the rules, but no one can change their employees deep-seated personality traits. (Bernardin, 1996).
- Realize that company executives are also role models. These individuals must create and foster the proper office culture in which all employees can thrive. Many business analysts maintain that a strong office culture is the most vital aspect of a successful company.
- Recycle. Pay employees to volunteer. Support charities. Host company outings. If workers associate their boss with fairness, idealism, and friendliness, then they will invariably treat their employer with more respect. A happy employee is a good employee.

In any business, the bottom line should not come at any price. Stockholders and business partners have much to gain through the implementation of an ethics program. Since trust is one of the most vital assets that a company can possess, then maintaining the highest ethical standards will only add to a company's value and success. Besides, the consequences of success in an unethical business are short lived. If the customers or clients learn that a company cheats, they may never return. Once the employees discover that their boss lies, then a detrimental business environment is established where lying is tolerated-or worse, in which lying is linked to success (Brokaw and Cook, 1992). A 1997 survey conducted by the Ethics Officers Association indicates that 56% of workers feel some pressure to act illegally or unethically, and that 47% admitted to having engaged in one or more illegal and/or unethical acts in the previous year. A business simply cannot operate successfully if employees: abuse sick days, cut corners on quality, lie to colleagues, cover up incidents, deceive customers, and take credit for a coworkers ideas (Groves, 1997).

By creating and enforcing ethical parameters, not only does a business stand to gain profit, prestige, and employee loyalty, but that business also helps to make its world a better and more honest place.

References

LaGanga, M. (1997, November 3). The truth, the whole truth and nothing but... Los Angeles Times. Careers-Business Part II, 11-12. c980241

* CELCEE Document Number

CELCEE is an Adjunct ERIC Clearinghouse funded by the Kauffman Center for Entrepreneurial Leadership. The opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect those of the sponsoring institutions, and no official endorsement should be inferred.
I. DOCUMENT IDENTIFICATION:

Title: Business Ethics

Author(s): Kambiz Akhavan

Corporate Source: Center for Entrepreneurial Leadership
Clearinghouse on Entrepreneurship Education

Publication Date: February 25, 1998

II. REPRODUCTION RELEASE:

In order to disseminate as widely as possible timely and significant materials of interest to the educational community, documents announced in the monthly abstract journal of the ERIC system, Resources in Education (RIE), are usually made available to users in microfiche, reproduced paper copy, and electronic media, and sold through the ERIC Document Reproduction Service (EDRS). Credit is given to the source of each document, and, if reproduction release is granted, one of the following notices is affixed to the document.

If permission is granted to reproduce and disseminate the identified document, please CHECK ONE of the following three options and sign at the bottom of the page.

The sample sticker shown below will be affixed to all Level 1 documents

PERMISSION TO REPRODUCE AND DISSEMINATE THIS MATERIAL HAS BEEN GRANTED BY

M.B. Dockendorf

TO THE EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)

Check here for Level 1 release, permitting reproduction and dissemination in microfiche or other ERIC archival media (e.g., electronic) and paper copy.

Level 1

1

X

The sample sticker shown below will be affixed to all Level 2A documents

PERMISSION TO REPRODUCE AND DISSEMINATE THIS MATERIAL IN MICROFICHE, AND IN ELECTRONIC MEDIA FOR ERIC COLLECTION SUBSCRIBERS ONLY, HAS BEEN GRANTED BY

TO THE EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)

Check here for Level 2A release, permitting reproduction and dissemination in microfiche and in electronic media for ERIC archival collection subscribers only.

Level 2A

2A

The sample sticker shown below will be affixed to all Level 2B documents

PERMISSION TO REPRODUCE AND DISSEMINATE THIS MATERIAL IN MICROFICHE ONLY HAS BEEN GRANTED BY

TO THE EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)

Check here for Level 2B release, permitting reproduction and dissemination in microfiche only.

Level 2B

2B

Documents will be processed as indicated provided reproduction quality permits.

If permission to reproduce is granted, but no box is checked, documents will be processed at Level 1.

I hereby grant to the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) nonexclusive permission to reproduce and disseminate this document as indicated above. Reproduction from the ERIC microfiche or electronic media by persons other than ERIC employees and its system contractors requires permission from the copyright holder. Exception is made for non-profit reproduction by libraries and other service agencies to satisfy information needs of educators in response to discrete inquiries.

Signature: Mary Beth Dockendorf/ Administrator

Printed Name/Position/Title: Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation
4801 Rockhill Road
Kansas City, MO 64110-2046
III. DOCUMENT AVAILABILITY INFORMATION (FROM NON-ERIC SOURCE):

If permission to reproduce is not granted to ERIC, or, if you wish ERIC to cite the availability of the document from another source, please provide the following information regarding the availability of the document. (ERIC will not announce a document unless it is publicly available, and a dependable source can be specified. Contributors should also be aware that ERIC selection criteria are significantly more stringent for documents that cannot be made available through EDRS.)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Publisher/Distributor:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Address:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Price:</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

IV. REFERRAL OF ERIC TO COPYRIGHT/REPRODUCTION RIGHTS HOLDER:

If the right to grant this reproduction release is held by someone other than the addressee, please provide the appropriate name and address:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Address:</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

V. WHERE TO SEND THIS FORM:

Send this form to the following ERIC Clearinghouse:

ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult, Career, and Vocational Education
1900 Kenny Road
Columbus, OH 43210-1090

However, if solicited by the ERIC Facility, or if making an unsolicited contribution to ERIC, return this form (and the document being contributed) to:

ERIC Processing and Reference Facility
1100 West Street, 2nd Floor
Laurel, Maryland 20707-3598

Telephone: 301-497-4080
Toll Free: 800-799-3742
FAX: 301-953-0263
e-mail: ericfac@inet.ed.gov
WWW: http://ericfac.piccard.csc.com