See Appendix #2 for additional data.
III. KEY LEARNING/CHALLENGES RELATED TO PROGRAM IMPLEMENTATION

1. It was a challenge to help students to successfully write their business plans. The successful strategies we used that increased the number of completed plans included:

- Working in small groups during class time on sections of their business plans.
- Practicing presenting key parts of their plan to classmates and faculty.
- Developing a culminating presentation competition where students won small venture capital grants ($100 to $200) determined and judged by community professionals.
- Offering more one-to-one individual counseling.
- Using the computer business planning software program “Automate Your Business Plan”.
- Keeping students together for all parts of the program which helped to develop a safe network of peers to try out new skills.
- Coordinating the comprehensive curriculum so that skills learned in one program component was reinforced in the another component of the program.
- Affording an opportunity for students to articulate the emotional issues and fears in regard to placing ideas in writing and making presentations.

2. Some students resisted the personal/business readiness component of the program. We found it was important to address issues around feelings of rejection, discouragement, and communication skills, even when students resisted the focus. In early Cycles faculty focused on these issues from a personal development context. We found students were more open to these issues when they were re-framed in a business context. Examples of successful topics that were reframed included the following:

- Dealing with irate customers
- Identifying emotions using business situations
Early on in our training we offered the program in the daytime. However, we found that the target population (women who were the sole support of their families) was not available in the daytime. More than 80% of the participants worked outside of the home. For the majority of the participants, starting their own business was seen as a supplement to their income, and a way to improve their standard of living. More than one third of the participants earned less than $16,000, and starting a business was a way out of living in or near poverty.

It was a challenge to select the most appropriate applicants. In order to fill a class with 15 to 20 students, we needed to allow enough time (six to eight weeks) to recruit and screen applicants. We used some of the same criteria to assess the readiness for the self employment program that we used in the employment training programs. These criteria appeared valid:

- Has family care plans
- Shows appropriate motivation to work
- Able to fill out applications and complete all steps of the screening process
- Demonstrates ability to focus on goals
- Has transportation
- Takes responsibility for calling if there is a need to cancel or reschedule

Additional criteria for our self employment program:

- Solid idea for a business
- Conducted some research on the business' feasibility
- Implemented some initial steps to get idea off the ground
Financial stability (applicant has basic living expenses)

Realistic expectations of the time and resources needed

Those accepted into the program were expected to complete all steps in the process that we had developed for our other employment training programs. The screening process was designed to involve several steps: telephone screening, individual interview, narrative application, orientation to the expectations of program, and self assessment training component. We developed the many steps in our training programs in order to test the motivation, initiative, stability, and follow through ability of candidates. These steps seemed equally valid for the entrepreneur training program. (See Candidate Selection Flow Chart in Appendix #3 for details.) Several students who were simultaneously enrolled in our employment training programs did not complete the entrepreneur training. We found that it was not realistic to be seeking employment and also desiring to start a business.

5. We had planned to offer math instruction in the college’s self-paced math lab. In practice we found that the math lab did not have sufficient administrative and tutorial staff on weekends and evenings. We did make it optional to use the lab in the daytime, but even with an evening orientation to the lab, very few students availed themselves of the facilities. In later Cycles Excel was offered in our computer component and automatic calculations were used in conjunction with the business planning software. We are in the process of installing the business planning software in our open lab so that students will be able to use these labs.

6. We offered an average of 34 hours of computer training. Students come with a varying background in computers. We are now developing a novice computer workshop which will be a prerequisite for all new computer users. This training group will be smaller and the needs of the new computer user will be addressed. Despite the great differences in the skill level of students, great progress was made in mastering basic computer skills; developing their business plan on the computer; using the computer for research, calculations and numerical analysis; producing a marketing flyer and/or brochure using graphics; and beginning skills in database management (See Appendix #4 for a sample of marketing materials developed by students).
IV. TRAINING OUTCOMES

We were successful in assisting 71 of the 92 initial student group to complete the program, thus achieving a course completion rate of 78%. Almost 50% of those that have completed have started or are in the process of actually planning their business.

Of the 71 students who completed the course, 24 started a business; three found jobs in fields related to business; and seven are in various stages of planning a business.

SUCCESS STORIES

Delores is a 62 year-old divorced black woman. She designs bookmarks. Through applying what she learned about marketing a business in our Entrepreneur*Wise Program, she received an order for 1,000 bookmarks for Lenny Thomas', "Cooking with the Chickenman". She has hired 10 people to help produce the bookmarks. She has also received an order for 2,500 bookmarks for a Madison Avenue restaurant. Recently, she was interviewed for "Black Enterprise".

Christine is a 40 year-old widow with two teenagers. She has started an auto detailing business. She took care of all the legalities, found a location, developed flyers and business cards, and opened her auto detailing business.

Linda is a 28 year-old divorced woman with two children, ages 5 and 12. She has had a day care business in her home that she has wanted to expand in order to generate more income to better support herself and her children. Through skills developed in the Entrepreneur*Wise Program, she located a larger home, advertised, hired an employee, and recruited additional children.

Medina is a 41 year-old divorced black woman who works two part-time jobs to support herself and two children. Through her research during the course, she decided to switch her business from distress merchandise to nutrition. She is an iridologist, and has connected with "Nutrition for Life", a supplier of vitamins and minerals. She has made up business cards and is advertising in local health food stores and now has several clients.

Sandra is a 54 year-old divorced black woman who works as an LPN. She recently finished her "Post-Operative Exercise Book". She has had it copyrighted and has an attorney. She is now saving for the cost of printing the book, which is $850.

Daphne is a 50 year-old black woman, divorced, who works two part-time jobs and has a teenaged son. She has registered her motivational training business, "Clark-Hudson and Associates", developed flyers, and has connected with Quinnipiac College which hired her as a motivational speaker where she is scheduled to teach four seminars. She was recently interviewed by a local newspaper in regard to writing an article about her business.

Phyllis is a 40 year-old black woman. After taking the Entrepreneur*Wise Program, she realized that it will take several years before her home-based business will financially support her and her family. Therefore, she decided to take a job with a school district as a computer teacher in their computer lab, but will continue to plan and develop her home-based computer tutoring business.
Linda is a 55 year-old divorced woman who previously attended our employment training program. She works part time as an office temp. She has been successful in starting up her home-based business, "Divorce Guide Inc.", which is a consulting business to educate people about the various divorce processes such as: preparing people to interview and select an attorney; assisting in working more effectively with legal counsel; and informing people of how the legal system works. She recently advertised in the Yellow Pages and is in the process of publishing her divorce guide, a resource for those faced with or considering divorce.

Gizella is a 51 year-old disabled woman whose husband is also disabled. She has started a secretarial office service business from her home. She recently used her business plan developed in class to apply for updated computer equipment and software from the Office of the Disabled.

Renee is a 37 year-old black woman with a two year-old daughter. She has started a home-based floral business. The business enables her to bring in enough supplemental income which allows her to stay home with her daughter.

Eileen is a 49 year-old separated woman who is on disability. She started a decorative-faux painting business. She has been able to support herself on the profits from the business. Her latest endeavor is teaching decorative paintings in adult education programs.

Noreen is a 51 year-old widowed woman who worked in restaurants and the hotel business for 30 years. Noreen has training in floral design. She has opened a small floral design shop.

Ann is a 30 year-old woman with three young children and a disabled husband. She has started a profitable landscape business with her disabled husband. They offer landscaping, Fall and Spring cleanup, architectural design, and plowing, salting, and sanding.
V. SUPPORT GROUPS FORMED AND NETWORKING OPPORTUNITIES

1. SUPPORT GROUP

A student-led informal support group from the third training Cycle developed after the formal training ended in March, 1999. This group has been meeting monthly and has invited the graduates of our June, 1999 Cycle to its monthly meetings. Recently, the leader of the group has had less time for the organizational details since her business, "Divorce Guide Inc." has increased. There is a need to formalize the group for all graduates of our Entrepreneur Training Programs, and to structure the meetings. In December of 1999 (See Appendix # 5 flyer) we invited all former graduates to a focus group to assess the needs of our graduates. The group expressed an interest in meeting monthly for support and for technical workshops.

As you know, the Kauffman Foundation has funded our program to provide an Entrepreneurial Post Training Program. Starting in March, 2000, we plan to provide technical workshops facilitated by trained volunteers from the business community, networking and feedback opportunities through monthly group meetings, and on-going technical advice and support through trained mentors. In addition, we will develop exportable curriculum outlining the essential steps in establishing a post-training program.

2. NETWORKING OPPORTUNITIES ORGANIZED

The following organizations have helped our program and/or participants (See Appendix # 6 for a more detailed list of guest speakers who shared their expertise with our students):

VI. FUTURE CONTINUATION PLANS FOR PROGRAM

A. SHORT RANGE:

We have partnered with Women’s Enterprise Project (WEP), a Westchester micro enterprise development program, whose members include Westchester County Association, Westchester Women Business Owners, and New York State Division for Women. WEP is funded through public and private funds. Starting in January 2000, WEP will provide funding to continue our JumpStart Entrepreneur*Wise Program through December of 2000. The New York Department of Labor will continue funding of the administrative portion of the project through our Displaced Homemaker funding. As you know, we have been funded by the Kauffman Foundation to develop a Year 2000 Post Training Program for the graduates from our Entrepreneur*Wise and WEP programs. The programs will continue to be housed in the Division of Continuing Education at Westchester Community College.

B. LONG RANGE:

WEP and Westchester Community College are in the process of applying for a five year demonstration grant to become a Women’s Business Center through the U. S. Small Business Administration.

Westchester Community College is in the process of applying for a two-year workforce demonstration grant from the U.S. DOL. The purpose of the grant is to demonstrate how community agencies and educational institutions can work together to provide best training practices, enabling high risk populations (displaced homemaker, older individual, welfare single parent) to become employable in the technology fields. This grant will build upon our best practices experience with Kauffman-funded Entrepreneur*Wise program and our new post training grant. Funds from the U.S. DOL grants can be used to provide core funding of our Entrepreneur*Wise program.
VII. DISSEMINATION PLANS

A. LOCAL

We have shared our best practices, including our curriculum, with our Westchester WEP partner.

B. STATEWIDE

We are a member of an association of 25 DOL funded Displaced Homemakers centers in New York State. The 25 Directors meet monthly to exchange ideas and plan funding strategies. At our May 1999 meeting, I presented our Entrepreneur*Wise program and curriculum. Now that our curriculum is completed, we will make our Student and Instructors Guide available to interested Displaced Homemakers centers.

The following community colleges are connected to Displaced Homemaker Centers:

Fulton Montgomery Community College
Bronx Community College
Rockland Community College

C. NATIONWIDE

In addition, this report and Student and Instructors Guide will be made available to other community colleges.

If awarded U.S. DOL Workforce Demonstration Grant and/or U.S. Small Business Administration Grant (The Women's Business Center Program), we will be able to build upon the curriculum and learning from the grants to increase the body of knowledge nationally on how to build an effective workforce training program for specialized populations.

The sites selected for this U.S. Small Business Administration grant will be connected to The Women's Business Intranet (WBI), and the Online Women's Business Center (WBC) on the internet. WBI "provides a free flow" of information about best practices.
VII. FINAL BUDGET NARRATIVE

We expended all budget funds, and our bookkeeper is preparing the budget report. We will fax you the final budget report by January 14, 2000 (deadline of this report).
