The report presents Truckee Meadows Community College's (Colorado) model for assessing institutional effectiveness and validating the College's mission and vision, and the strategic plan for carrying out the institutional effectiveness model. It also outlines strategic goals for the years 1999-2001. From the system-wide directive that education and training are the chief means of developing human capital for investment in the economic health of the state of Nevada, the College has developed its own mission statement: "To develop our communities' diverse human potential." Truckee Meadows vision is to become the nexus for life-long learning for all members of the community. With the development and accessibility to information systems and networks (interactive learning), the College will provide customized quality learning at any location, at any time, for any level of readiness, and in flexible learning environments. Some of the key strategic goals include: (1) keeping pace with changing technologies to ensure student success; (2) functioning as a catalyst for strategic alliances with business and industry; (3) enhancing the college's outreach efforts; (4) delivering high quality education and services to upgrade skills; (5) expanding environmental scanning, forecasting, and research activities; and (6) assessing instructional effectiveness and student satisfaction. (JA)
Truckee Meadows Community College is committed to a process of assessing and promoting institutional effectiveness. Through a continuous cycle of establishing goals, creating initiatives, and evaluating performance, TMCC has produced a highly effective means of not only assessing institutional effectiveness, but also validating the College’s mission and vision.

TMCC utilizes collective institutional values, as well as environmental trends to establish a concise and direct mission, “To Develop Our Communities’ Diverse Human Potential.” This mission is the driving force behind the evolution of a vision to provide quality education and services characterized by a distinct commitment to excellence. From the strength and focus of this vision, strategic goals are produced in order to provide direction into the twenty-first century. These goals are also influenced by a campus-wide environmental scanning effort, and reflect the dedication of TMCC’s staff and faculty to furthering student success.

This institutional effectiveness model is carried out by a commitment to strategic planning that is aimed at funneling a collective vision into individual goals. Each college unit is charged with the annual task of delineating specific goals and directions. These unit goals are then reviewed, categorized, and prioritized within the broader strategic areas, thus producing college initiatives for future planning and development.

A comprehensive analysis and evaluation of performance closes the loop on the institutional effectiveness process. The utility of this research serves to examine the effectiveness of initiatives, provide a level of accountability to external constituents, as well as validate TMCC’s mission and vision. When this annual cycle is complete, the College engages in a renewal process where its mission, vision, and values are adjusted to meet the changing needs of today’s society.
