This directory provides information on foundations, corporations, religious organizations, and federal agencies that award grants to Native American tribes, schools, colleges, community services, and nonprofit organizations. Chapter 1 describes how to find funding sources, develop and write a proposal, apply for a grant, and follow through. Chapters 2-4 describe the grant-making activities of over 270 foundations, over 140 corporations, and 34 religious sources. Entries include contact information; availability of application form, proposal guidelines, and annual report; due dates and normal response time; number and amount of grants made annually; general policy on grants; purposes of grants; areas of interest; restrictions on grants; how to apply; officers and directors or trustees; and examples of Native American grants. Chapter 5 provides similar information on federal programs that make grants to Native Americans. Programs are listed by federal government agency. (Contains a subject index.) (SV)

PREFACE

This Grants Directory is an update of a book published in 1983 and updated in 1985. The first two editions were called "The Funding Guide for Native Americans" and were published under my imprimatur, DCA Publishers. Both had information on some 180 giving organizations.

This volume reflects some dramatic and positive changes for the better for Indian nonprofits, schools, colleges, and tribes. The number of organizations which are giving to Native Americans has increased from 180 to over 500. The total giving to Indian organizations per year has increased from $2 million in 1978 to over $10 million, or 500%, according to a report by Native Americans in Philanthropy published in 1991. The total has increased even more since, perhaps to $15 to $20 million.

Only six foundation and corporations identified Native Americans in their policy statement in 1983. In 1999, fully 87 foundations and 40 corporations target Native Americans.

Two other things have changed since 1985. The Indian population has increased from 1.4 million to 2.2 million. Foundation and corporate giving have increased dramatically (see Chart 1), from a total of $8 to $26 billion. Unfortunately, giving to Indians has not risen nearly as fast as I giving to others.

Total giving to Indians is still far from parity. Foundation and corporate giving last year was $26 billion. The Indian population is 2.2 million people out of 272 million, or .081%. The parity figure for giving to Indians is thus $210 million--much more than is actually being given. Indians are clearly getting less than 10% of what they should be getting. That is not mainly the fault of the givers. It is mainly the fault of the Indian organizations. They (we) are not asking enough people often enough to fund Indian grants.

The Native American Scholarship Fund has done a great deal of work to develop this book. First of all, we solicited all 31,000 foundations and corporate foundations in the U.S. in 1990 and 1991. This work alone opened dozens of doors which had always been closed before. We receive grants on a weekly basis from foundations and corporations which have previously never made even one grant to any Indian organization.

To solicit the foundations and corporations, we built a complete data base of foundations using the National Data Book published by The Foundation Center. This data base is one of the most valuable of the many things the esteemed Center maintains.

Second, we searched a wide variety of sources to compile the information in this book. The Foundations on CD-ROM from The Foundation Center, the Internet, numerous state foundation directories, the Grants Index from The Foundation Center, individual reports, our own data base of active foundations, and several other sources were consulted.

Also contributing to this work greatly has been the group Native Americans in Philanthropy. This tiny handful of Native American foundation executives and board members has literally opened hundreds of doors for Native American grant seekers. Their publications are trend-setting, timely, and valuable.

A few words of advice. First, use the subject index in the back of this book to do quick searches for grants. It is almost certainly a waste of time to sit and read all the information on the numerous sources listed. No one should do that.

Second, DO NOT USE THIS BOOK AS THE ONLY SOURCE YOU CONSULT BEFORE WRITING A PROPOSAL. Use the Foundation Directory, the Grants Index, the several publications on corporate giving, and most important, the guidelines and policies of the specific foundation or corporation, to help fashion your grant request. Many foundations are on the Internet now, and many have their own web sites, so collecting information about them is easier than ever.
Third, read the first chapter before you start doing work on private sector grants. There are many ways to do things wrong, to take the wrong approach. Some of them can do you permanent harm, such as closing the doors of a particular source to you forever. DO YOUR HOMEWORK CAREFULLY AND WELL.

Finally, a word about authorship. I wrote this Preface and the first chapter on Preparation and Writing. Stacey Jenkins compiled the information and wrote the other four chapters. So the major credit for authorship goes to Ms. Jenkins. We wish her and her husband Dr. Devin Jenkins and their son David the best as they move from Albuquerque to Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg, Virginia.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

This manual should be used in the search process for grant funds. It should be used primarily for special projects which require outside funds.

It should not be used by an organization in the hope that the basic operating funds for the organization can be obtained through grant funds. This expectation is a difficult one to bring about; there is relatively little money in the private sector for general support for nonprofit organizations.

"Nonprofit" here means an organization which is tax exempt under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Service Code. Contributions to such an organization by individuals, foundations, and corporations are exempt from taxation under the IRS Code.

Foundations must contribute almost all their income to such organizations, and corporations can contribute up to five percent of their net profits and deduct these contributions dollar for dollar from their taxable income. Individuals can contribute up to 50 percent of their adjusted gross income and take such contributions off taxable income dollar for dollar.

Some tips we recommend:

- Start at home first. Seek first funds from local organizations that make grants. Starting with the larger national foundations is frustrating, as many have learned.
- Match your needs to the interests of the funding agency. It is up to you to learn all you can about the agency. If the match-up is made, the chances of funding are higher.
- Do not write any proposal based only on the information contained in this Directory. It is impossible for us to put all the information you need about a funding source on a couple of pages, so we did not try. Use this Directory as just that-some-thing to point you to the best possible sources. DO YOUR RESEARCH BEFORE WRITING THE PROPOSAL. Get all the information you can from the foundation or corporation itself.

The sample grants listed in this guide are just that-a sample of the grants the foundations have actually made to Native Americans. While we think we have researched the majority of such grants for each foundation, for many reasons it is impossible to research them all. We tried not to list any grant over five years old, because foundations change emphasis. The listing does not include all grants listed as "minor-ity." If it did, the list would be much longer. Only the grants listed to Native groups are included here.

CHARACTERISTICS OF FOUNDATIONS

Competition is intense for private sector funds. It is reported that foundations receive 20 applications for every one which receives funds. (Many of the ones they receive, however, are not well done.)

If only half the proposals foundations receive are well prepared, the result is that only one out of ten of them is funded. This statistic alone is an indication of the care that must go into the preparation of foundation proposals to be successful.

Be prepared to wait anywhere from two to six months for a response. Very few will respond in under two months, and a few will, if your proposal is not funded at the first quarterly meeting, carry it over to the next one. This could make the waiting time over six months.

Most foundations do not make grants outside a given geographic area. It may be a city, a metropolitan area, a state, or several states. Most do not give general support to nonprofit groups, but only special project funds.

Some provide continuing support, year after year, to nonprofits that they are interested in, but those who do generally give such support to organizations in their geographic area. From the nonprofit standpoint, this type of support is highly desirable; but it is difficult for those which do not already have it to generate it. Perhaps the best way is to be successful with a special project.

Most foundations focus on specific needs. The range of these is enormous—health, education, science, teaching, aged, scholarships, minorities, women, business, economics, and many others. Foundations which specify the things they are interested in funding rarely fund other things.

Because funds are limited, most have restrictions on the size of grants. It is wise to look at the average grant, the maximum, the minimum, and at the over-all pattern of grants in determining how your organization matches up with theirs. It is this match which should determine how much you will ask them for.

A few hundred foundations have paid professional staff, but the majority do not. With many family-established trusts, it is the family attorney who serves as the foundation executive. You should be sensitive to the staffing of the foundation, and not cause them unnecessary work.

A few hundred foundations make grants on a national basis, anywhere in the U.S. But these well-known ones receive hundreds or thousands of requests each month. Yours may be lost in the shuffle. Be sure you have a project that is in their interest area if you apply to them, and be sure to follow it up. It will be wise to make personal contact with the program officer who will handle your application in advance of submitting it.

Most request that proposals not be over 15 pages long; some request even shorter ones, two pages, five pages, etc. Exceed this page limitation at your own risk. You will likely be rejected if you exceed it.

NOTES AND REMINDERS

• General funds are difficult to raise from the private sector. Many have tried, and almost all have not been successful. Despite this warning, many readers will try to raise general funds in the future; proceed at your own risk. You should have the bulk of your operating funds in hand from another source (federal funds, university funds, United Way, membership fees, dues, contributions from the public, etc.) It is possible to raise seed funds from the private sector, to help you get a start at raising general support funds, but not easy to do.

• Foundations change emphasis from time to time, and some change every few years. The priorities today may not be the priorities of tomorrow. Check every time, just before submission of a proposal, to make sure the interests of the foundation are what you think they are. It is wise to start a collection of annual reports, proposal guidelines, lists of grants, etc., from the foundations you are interested in. Keep your files up to date.

• All foundations listed in this Guide have expressed an interest in Native Americans in the past five years. Mainly, this interest has been expressed by making a grant. In other cases, the interest has not resulted in a grant, because the right type of application has not been received by them. For years the response to our question to foundation executives about why they have not made any grants to Native Americans is that they did not receive applications, or that they did not receive the right kind of applications, or that the ones they received were of poor quality. If all these factors are met, the level of funds flowing to Native people will increase.

• Send your application in at least a month before the Board meeting, if no other instructions are given. For example, Board meetings are listed as March, June, September, December; send proposals in by the first day of February, May, August, November. To be really safe, send them in six weeks before the first day of the month of the Board meeting.

• Expect delays in responses, lost mail, lost applications, and the like if you send out several applications. Since many have no full time staff, there are many problems of communication. To be sure the foundation has received your application, if you don't receive notice of it, call about two weeks after mailing the proposal. The secretary or receptionist can usually locate it for you, or refer you to someone who can.

• Get as much information about the foundation as you can before applying. You will see this piece of advice repeated in various ways in this Guide. It is advice well to heed.

• For larger projects (over about $20,000), break them up into various components, and seek separate funds for each component. This will be more successful in the long run than seeking funds from one source for a major project. Can your project be broken into travel, communication, equipment, salaries, etc.? If so, do it. Then match each component with its logical funding source.

CHAPTER ONE

PREPARATION AND WRITING

by Dean Chavers, Ph.D.

How to find, prepare for, apply to, and follow through on sources of funding for your organization's projects.
DIMENSIONS OF THE PRIVATE SECTOR

There are some 41,000 foundations in the U.S., according to the Foundation Directory. Most of these are private foundations, meaning, in general, that they were endowed by one individual or family through a trust, which is intended to last through the ages (in perpetuity).

Included in this foundation world are several hundred corporations which have foundations attached to them. Some of these corporations also have corporate giving programs, which are less structured than the foundation arrangement. Two of the most popular arrangements for corporate giving are for the corporation to match any funds given to a charity by employees and for the corporation to give scholarships to children of employees. In addition, there are other corporations which give funds and/or make grants under a less structured arrangement. Some of these are good sources for local Native projects.

In 1998, the latest year for which figures were available, foundations gave away a total of $17.4 billion dollars and corporations gave $7.3 billion dollars (see Chart 1, next page). The number of grants made by foundations is reported by the Foundation Center to be 500,000 each year, or an aggregate average of only $5,600 per grant. The number given by corporations is not known, but is about the same number and the same average roughly.

Foundation assets are over $200 billion. Over half of all foundation funds went to education, with about a third going to higher education. About a quarter of corporate funds went to higher education. Corporate funds tend to be given largely in the communities in which the corporations do business, and/or have manufacturing plants.

Foundation dollars are not distributed equally throughout the nation, but are concentrated in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Dallas, Atlanta, Minneapolis-St. Paul, and a few other regionally important cities.

There are some 18 Protestant denominations with "Indian desks" which sometimes have grant programs they operate. Their grants are usually small, with $5,000 being considered a large grant. Churches contribute about one-sixth as much to higher education as do foundations.

Finally, there are a few hundred federal agencies which have grant funds available in various forms.

WHAT TO ASK FOR ON INITIAL CONTACT

There are basically four different ways to approach a foundation or a corporation for the first time: (1) in person, (2) by letter, (3) by telephone, and (4) through a full proposal. Each foundation is different, and in general it is easy to find from published materials (the Foundation Directory, the Corporate 500, etc.) the preferred method of a particular organization.

The rule here is: Approach the foundation using its recommended approach. Each one is set up to operate a certain way, and when they are approached differently, it can cause them problems. For instance, most foundations, except the very largest ones, do not have full time staff workers. Consequently, many of them prefer to be approached by letter; they can let the mail accumulate, and answer it when they have the time.

For such a foundation, a personal visit would often work a hardship; the staff person, who might have other duties (law, accounting, etc.), would have to interrupt his or her normal work to see the visitor. So using the recommended method of contact is very important. It is also courteous, and helpful to the foundation.

Nevertheless, the careful fund raiser will do what the careless ignore-homework. The most successful private sector fund raisers are the ones who do their homework, their research, the best, not the ones who contact the most organizations, or send out the most proposals. It is quality that counts, not quantity. Incidentally, we recommend never to use the "shotgun" approach, that is, write "a" proposal and sent it to several foundations. This approach almost never works, and the carelessness of this way of working may close the door to you in the future with many foundations.

The most important part of your research is learning everything you can about the foundation you are applying to. (See Rules of Writing, pg. 25) One good way to do this is to get as much information from them as you can.

Some of the things you can ask for on initial contact are:

- Program guidelines
- Annual Reports
- Average/maximum/minimum amounts of grants
- Due dates of proposals
- What categories grants are made in
- List of Directors and Trustees
- Application forms (if used)
- General statement of policy
- Restrictions on grants and/or recipients
At this point, you are not trying to sell your organization or your project (in our opinion, it is always a mistake to try to "sell" it). You are basically doing library research to put yourself, as the proposer, into the frame of mind of the foundation, and to get outside of your own frame of reference. The better you can understand the foundation and what it is trying to accomplish, the more you can relate your needs to their interests. The conjunction of those two things often leads to success in grant seeking.

HOW TO SPEAK THEIR LANGUAGE

Common definitions used in proposals:

RATIONALE

Problem: a question raised for solution, either through the development of new knowledge (research), or the delivery of some services (action).

Need: a socially generally defined desirable attribute not now available, or available in a lesser amount, to a particular population of people.

Goal: a long range outcome (usually, longer than three years) affecting clients.

Objective: a short range outcome affecting clients.

Result: an outcome, including reports, models which can be exported or replicated, surveys, matching funds, jobs, increased institutional capacity, etc.

Benefit: a good or desirable outcome benefiting clients.

ADMINISTRATION

Program: an overall plan which is put into effect through one or more projects.

Project: a set of activities designed to achieve short range objectives.

Nonprofit organization: an institution which forbids benefits to any private shareholders (for the purposes of the private sector, only the IRS 501(c)(3) letter certifies this status).

Accountability: the acceptance of responsibility for something to someone, with consequences for success associated with it.

Method of administration: a description of responsibility.

Responsible official: the person (1) to whom communications are directed, (2) who has the authority for receipt, custody, and disbursement of funds, and (3) who must account for funds.

Ultimate authority: the institution to whom a grant is made.

Fiscal year: a period beginning on the first day of a month, and ending on the last of the eleventh month following. The ending date designates the fiscal year.

Grant: the awarding of a sum of money for specified purposes.

Contract: The awarding of a sum of money for specific work to be performed for the awarding agency by the contractor.

Approval of application: written notice that a project has been funded, through the issuing of an award letter or a contract.

Audit: a third party review of funds.

Service population: those to be served by a project or a program.

Amendment: a material change in policies, administration, organization, operation, or objectives of a project.

WORK PLAN

Method of operation: a description of the work to be done or accomplished by a project.

Activities: work or events in support of objectives.

Project activity: work in direct support of objectives, which can be charged to direct costs.

Support activity: work in indirect support of objectives, which can be charged to indirect costs.

Task accomplishment: completion of a specific activity.

Travel: movement outside the local area in support of a project.

Mileage: movement inside the local area in support of Dissemination: the act of reaching as many persons as possible.

Budget

Application: a request for funds (including a proposal, cover letter or page, documentation, clearances, attachments, etc.).

Allowable expense: an encumbrance for the purposes of the project.

Fringe benefits: extra-salary compensation normally paid to employees.

Revision: a change in budget needs, resulting from (1) changes in objectives, (2) a need for additional funds, or (3) changes between direct and indirect costs. (Applies mainly to federal projects)

Direct costs: expenditures readily identifiable as being in direct support of a project, which are usually itemized in the budget.

Indirect costs: expenditures not readily identifiable as being in direct support of a project, but which are incurred by the recipient, and which are difficult to itemize in project budgets.

Cost sharing: the sharing of costs between the grantor and the grantee; applicable to grants, but not usually to contracts.

Matching funds: cost sharing in which the institution must contribute a specific amount or percentage from its own funds or other funds.

Documentation

Data: facts from which conclusions can be drawn.

Statistics: population parameters; abstractions or generalizations from data.

Graph: a plot showing the variation of a continuous variable in comparison to another continuous variable.

Cross tabulation: a table showing the variation of a discrete variable in comparison to another discrete variable.

Histogram: a graphic illustration of a frequency distribution.

Frequency distribution: a tabulation showing the frequencies of the values of a variable in order of magnitude.

Effectiveness

Evaluation: an audit of processes and results.

Assessment: determining the degree or amount of something.

Evaluation audit: a third party review of procedures, techniques, and results.

Demographics: vital statistics of populations, primarily used to determine the rate of change.

Cost benefit analysis: the determination of the approach which will produce the most benefit for the resources expended.

Evaluation design: a predetermined strategy for judging the effects of a project, including variables, methods of comparison, sampling, data collection, controls, and statistics.

Criterion: a standard used for comparison.

Evaluation plan: an outline of the steps to be taken to evaluate a project.

Miscellaneous

Proposal: used formally, a narrative description of a project which, together with cover sheets, letters, budget forms, assurances, clearances, etc., make up an application. Used informally, the total application itself.

Attachment: an appendage to a narrative (also called an appendix, addendum, exhibit, etc.)

Equipment: necessary tangible personal property and machinery which is nonexpendable.

Supplies: consumable, non-equipment tangible personal property.

The Search and the Follow-Through

Tom Katus of the Phelps-Stokes Fund recommends six steps in the search and application process:

1. Doing Your Homework: Research. This step is the basis for all the following steps, and should be done carefully. Outside consultants should be used with caution, if at all.

2. Getting Your Foot in the Door: Obtaining the Appointment. Only make appointments with those who make grants to programs like yours, at your funding level needs, and in your geographic area. If a personal visit is necessary, schedule it well in advance.

3. Making the Pitch: The Call. The most important thing you can do at this meeting is learn all you can about the organization. Dress appropriately. Be on time.

4. Stating Your Case: The Proposal. Make sure it is of high quality, neat looking, well laid out, and easy to read visually.

5. Hanging in There: Follow-up. Call or write to see if they have received your proposal and acted on it. Program officers have sometimes dozens of projects to keep track of; help them with yours.

6. Keeping in Touch: Reports. Tell them what your project has accomplished. Have a representative of the foundation visit the project. Send them formal reports. This is the best way to build long range credibility for your organization, which is its surest hope of support in the future.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF FUNDING SOURCES

There are a few basic sources of information on foundations and their programs that are very useful to the proposal writer. These sources can be divided into those which report information on private foundations, and those which report information on corporations and corporate foundations, although there is some overlap between the two groups.

The Foundation Directory, is the single broadest source. It contains information on over 10,400 of the largest private and corporate foundations, and reportedly covers about 95% of all foundation total dollars. It, like this Directory, should be used to search for funding sources, not to be used as a total information source about them. It is available from The Foundation Center, 79 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10003, Phone: (212) 620-4230 or 1-800-424-9836.

The Center also prepares COMSEARCH (computer search) printouts on 104 different funding areas. Using these printouts, writers interested in specific project areas can further refine their search.

Foundation News, available from the Council on Foundations, 1828 L Street NW, Washington, DC, 20036, is published six times each year, and is in magazine format. The News covers developments in the foundation field, and can be scanned for ideas and funding sources. It is perhaps best used for keeping up to date in the field.

At last report, some 55 states had a publication about the private foundations located in these states. They vary in cost, but are moderately priced. Various individuals and groups have written, compiled, and published them. In Colorado, for instance, the directory is published by the Junior League; in California, a Bay Area foundation and other organizations have published various directories of the state's foundations. State directories are usually well worth their cost, because they usually include almost all the foundations in a given state, not just the largest ones.

The Foundation Center also publishes the National Data Book, a two-volume listing of all foundations in the U.S. At last count, this list contained some 41,000 foundations. With such a huge list, it is not possible to provide much information on each one; only the name, address, contact person, and basic financial information about each foundation are listed. For local organizations this directory has little use. For regional or national organizations, it probably has many uses.

The Grantsmanship Center News is published every other month by the Grantsmanship Center, 1031 S. Grand Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90015. It has become a source of basic information on how to write proposals, how to evaluate programs, and the technical details of managing a nonprofit organization. Some of its reprints of articles have become classics, such as the Kiritz article (see below).

There are several sources of information on corporate philanthropy. The Foundation Center publishes the National Directory of Corporate Giving, providing information on most of the largest corporate foundations.

The Council for Financial Aid to Education in New York City publishes an annual book titled "Aid to Education Programs of Some Leading Business Concerns," which is a good place to start your search for corporate sources as well. The publication, like all the Council's activities, is aimed at higher education, and is of little value at all to other organizations. They are, however, very valuable for this sector.

The "Handbook of Corporate Social Responsibility: Profiles of Involvement" was published by the Human Resources Network in Philadelphia. It is of a certain extent similar to the "Bibliography of Corporate Social Responsibility: Programs and Policies" published by the BankAmerica Corporation in San Francisco. Both of these publications, as well as the book published by the Council for Financial Aid to Education, are moderately priced.

There are numerous books, articles, reprints, and other materials which will help the new proposal writer learn the field. Only three of the best are cited here; none of them will cover all aspects that a professional fund raiser or proposal writer will need to know, but they are all good in their areas.

Virginia Decker's "The Funding Process: Grantsmanship and Proposal Development," written with Larry E. Decker, is good for the beginning proposal writer. It is available from Community Collaborators, in Charlottesville, VA. Decker has also written other books on this topic.

Thomas E. Broce's, Fund Raising: The Guide to Raising Money from Private Sources is a book with a broad scope. In addition to the foundation and corporation sectors, Dr. Broce covers alumni, local campaigns, and other topics. The book was published by the University of Oklahoma Press, Norman, OK.

One of the best introductory articles on proposal writing is the one by Norton J. Kiritz, President of the Grantsmanship Center, in 1974. This article was expanded in 1979; both were published in the Grantsmanship Center News, and are available as reprints for a modest cost.

If one were to purchase all the materials suggested in this section, some twelve books, articles, magazines, and reprints of journal articles, the total cost would be under $600. All are not necessary for any particular person or organization, but well-chosen ones are valuable aids in fund raising.

CHARACTERISTICS OF PROPOSAL READERS

One of the most difficult things for most proposal writers to learn, and writers in general, is to think like their readers.

This particular ability, which is one of the most important ones for successful proposal writers, is not easily learned. When not learned, for instance, it has led to such things as presenting project proposals for family planning to a board of trustees of a foundation which was dominated by Catholics, and writing projects aimed at draft registration to a foundation whose trustees were conservative businessmen who were pro-military.

These extreme examples are so ridiculous as not to be believed, but they actually happened. Other such mistakes, less severe, happen every day with private sector grant seeking, and cost the careless proposal writer grants. They can be avoided by research on the particular agency to which the application goes.

Although each foundation and corporation is unique, and this point should not be forgotten, there are some characteristics of proposal readers in general that are not in line with the thinking of most proposal writers. The basic difference is that the typical grant seeker is not rich, and the typical grant maker tends to be. This fact alone makes them have different views of the world.

In teaching proposal writing seminars over the past 20+ years, it has become evident to us that there are some commonly held stereotypes about proposal readers held by proposal writers that are wrong. We will present the twelve most common of these in this section.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE REPUBLICANS. Since most writers are not Republicans, they mistakenly think the reader is not, and write accordingly. The virtues of the Democratic party are lost on most readers; they tend to be more interested in fiscal conservatism than in Populism. This can lead not only to failures to communicate in the same language, but to errors which will prevent proposals from being funded. For instance, the writer who does not have a solid, workable plan for the support of the proposed project at the end of foundation funding will at the very least tend to rub the reader the wrong way, and will more than likely cause the proposal to be rejected.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE RICH. While some might disagree with this statement, especially the staff of foundations who make less than they could command in other fields, for the boards of trustees or directors of foundations and corporations it is true. As "rich" people (if we draw the line at $100,000 or more in annual income), they tend to read Forbes and Fortune magazines much more often than they do People or the National Inquirer. Moral: it behooves proposal writers to read the things that rich people read, to try to think about problems the way they do, so as to be able to explain projects in terms they can understand.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE EDUCATED. A surprising number have advanced degrees, and the great majority have at least a bachelor's degree. To assume they have to be patronized, using too-simple language, is often a mistake. This does not mean that the writer should use technical jargon (educationese, bureaucratese), but standard English usage is the safest medium for maximum communication with readers.

MORE PROPOSAL READERS ARE GOLFERS
THAN ARE BOWLERS. This does not mean that it is wrong to be a bowler, but that proposal readers tend to be found more often at country clubs than at bowling alleys.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE MALE. This should caution against using the in-language of women's groups too liberally; male readers may not understand it.

MORE PROPOSAL READERS ARE MIDDLE-AGED AND OLDER THAN ARE YOUNG. They may not understand, or have the ability to empathize with, young adults and sub-adults and their problems. Writers for these types of organizations should try to use the language and the mental set of the World War Two generation, rather than those of the campus radicals of the 1970's, for instance. Again, it is not wrong to use the language and thought patterns of campus radicals, intrinsically; for communication to occur at its best between proposal writer and reader, however, it is usually a mistake to use it in proposals. (The exception here is the handful of foundations which are referred to as "change-oriented." This small group of a few dozen, most of which are readily identifiable, is unlike most foundations in many ways.)

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE CONSERVATIVE. Thinking that they are for the most part liberals is one of the most common "mistakes" proposal writers make. An example of the misfit between grantor and potential grantee is the strong emphasis some writers place on "community involvement." Most readers would tend to agree that democratic principles are to be advocated and followed, but would be thinking that there is still a need for sound, strong, responsible leadership by a board of directors. They would regard unbridled egalitarianism without responsibility clearly spelled out as a mistake.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE MEMBERS OF THE MAJORITY ETHNIC GROUP. On this factor, there is a strong trend. While there are few women readers, there are even fewer ethnic minority readers among the 300,000 or more foundation and corporation trustees and staff members. For these readers to understand the problems of ethnic minorities, therefore, the problems will best be understood if they are stated in the language of the majority.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE HARD WORKING. Some proposal writers, among them some who correctly draw the conclusion that proposal readers are rich, think the readers are by and large part of the leisured class. Nothing could be further from the truth, as a general statement. The typical reader is a slave driver, not an idler.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE BUSINESS PEOPLE, as opposed to being persons of the arts and humanities. That is, they tend to be logical thinkers, not dreamers. They tend to be doers, not philosophers, scientifically oriented rather than artistic. This general statement has many exceptions, of course, but is probably more true than not true. They tend to want to see evidence of statements made in proposals, to want documentation, to want proof. Failure to provide it can be damaging.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE LEGALISTIC, that is, they believe in strict adherence to the law. They are not radicals, and anything which smacks of not working within the US system of government and society will, in many quarters, automatically be suspicious, and not worth funding.

MOST PROPOSAL READERS ARE CAPITALISTS, not socialists. They tend to believe in the American dream, mainly because many of them achieved it. They believe that the US is the land of opportunity, and that hard work for a clear goal will reward people ultimately.

Having made all these generalized statements, many of which readers of this Guide will recognize as having many exceptions, another statement needs to be made. This statement is: Each foundation is unique, with a unique board of directors, a unique set of interests, a unique set of terms of bequests or trusts, and so forth. Nothing is better for success in proposal writing than doing the necessary background research to learn everything you can about the foundation before applying for a grant.

Our experience as fund raisers and as trainers of proposal writers leads us to believe that no other one thing is more likely to lead to success in having proposals funded.

PROPOSAL OUTLINE

Our general sequence of steps in developing a proposal is as follows:

PROBLEM
This Problem Oriented Planning Model has proven to be a good way of thinking about problems. Using it, the writer has made the first step toward thinking the way most readers think.

Notice that the sequence is logical. That is, thinking of the first step in the sequence, and having the problem clearly stated, will often make the rest of the sequence seem obvious. It is really just a way of helping the writer to ask the right questions.

Many writers, unfortunately, will not start at the beginning of the sequence, but in the middle, usually with objectives or with activities. (For definitions of these, see pages 9-12.) When asked what they are seeking funds for, for instance, they will often state something like "For our tutoring program," or "For our senior citizens program," which are activities. Or they will have gone a step further, and say "to lower the dropout rate among our high school children," or "to help more people in our community begin and operate successful businesses."

The latter two are, using our terminology, objectives, while the former two are activities. We advocate starting not in the middle of the paradigm, but at the beginning.

This necessitates, for example, thinking about what causes the problem, and the various things that could be done to solve it. Evidence of this backrounding is a definite plus in almost any proposal.

We recommend the following general proposal outline, for funding agencies which do not provide one to follow. But remember this outline is a generic. Do not follow it slavishly.

I. INTRODUCTION (also called the statement of the problem, needs assessment, outline of the problem, background, need for assistance, and similar titles.)

For action proposals, this section should be as short as possible, outlining the general problem, part of which is to be attacked by the project outlined in the proposal. It may summarize the entire proposal (briefly; not usually required).

Typically, this section outlines more than you can accomplish in the project, for two reasons: (1) you want to show the reader that you fully understand the total problem, and (2) you want to show the reader that you are attacking the most important part of the problem.

DOCUMENT YOUR STATEMENTS WITH DATA (FACTS) AND/OR STATISTICS. Any theoretical considerations or statements should be in this part.

This section should answer these questions:

- What is the overall problem?
- Why is this project needed?
- What aspect of the problem is the most important?
- How serious is the problem?
- How many people are affected by the problem, and who are they?
- What possible approaches could be taken to solve the problem?
- What is the best approach?
- What will be the results of the project?
- Why are the existing institutions and programs not adequate to address the problem?
- How is the problem related to the general community?
- How will the community benefit from this project?
- What research has been done on this problem?
- How would the results be relevant to other communities?

II. OBJECTIVES (also called goals of the project, results, benefits, outcomes, etc.)

This is the most important section. It should also be the shortest section, with the possible exception of the budget section. Be precise. Be concise. Be specific. Be prescient. Be brilliant. Do not exaggerate. Do not overreach. Do not underestimate. Be realistic. Do not use any extra words. This section defines the rest of the proposal, and everything else in the proposal should correspond to some aspect of this section.

This section should answer these questions:

- What EXACTLY do you plan to accomplish?
- How many people will be affected?
- How much will each person be affected?
- What is the most important activity?
- What can be eliminated most easily?

OBJECTIVES SHOULD ALWAYS BE WRITTEN
AS OUTCOMES, NOT AS ACTIVITIES. State exactly how people will be better off at the end of the project, and by how much will they be better off, not what you are going to do to make them better off.

III. METHOD OF OPERATION (also called plan of action, plan of attack, project description, outline of activities, approach, work plan, etc.)

This is the longest section, and the most complicated. It is a "catch-all" for the proposal; things that are difficult to explain in other sections are explained here.

Usually, activities are explained (1) chronologically, (2) according to tasks, or (3) according to outcomes (objectives). This section should describe all the major activities of the project from start to finish, the methods of administration, the accounting for funds, documentation, etc.

This section should answer the following questions, and perhaps others:

- Why was this plan of action taken, rather than another one?
- Why will this plan work?
- Why is this approach better than similar approaches tried previously?
- How will this project help other communities with similar problems?
- How long will the project last?
- Are there factors which might accelerate or decelerate the work?
- What additional resources will be available to the project?
- How will the activities be coordinated with other resources?
- Who will be the coordinator for each?
- Who will be responsible for the project?
- Who will set policy?
- How will funds be handled?
- How will audits be handled?
- What facilities will be used?
- How will the project be administered?
- How will the project be evaluated?
- Who will evaluate the project?
- What criteria will be used in evaluation?
- What data will be collected?
- How will data be maintained?
- How will data be analyzed?

IV. STAFFING (also called personnel, staff, employees, project personnel, etc.)

This section describes the staff-their duties, qualifications, training, evaluation, compensation, supervision, etc.

It should answer these questions:

- How will staff be selected?
- How will they be trained?
- What will be their qualifications?
- What will be their duties?
- How will they be compensated?
- Who will hire staff?
- How will they be evaluated?
- What personnel policies will apply to staff?
- Why will they be able to do the job?
- To whom will staff report?
- How will they be coordinated?
- How long will they work?
- How much time will each put on each major activity?

V. BUDGET

Surprisingly, to many people, this section is frequently the hardest to write. Be practical. If there is an activity, chances are that there will be some costs for it. All items must correspond to some activity, staff duty, or support need.

The more detailed this section, the better, because (1) you want enough money to accomplish the objectives, and (2) you want to show the reader that you know what is needed for the project. If you have to guess, guess high, but not elaborately high. Be complete. Be holistic. Be thorough. Be comprehensive. Justify every line item (previously, in the narrative). Be reasonable.

This section should answer the following questions:

- What is needed to carry out the project?
- How much will each item cost?
- How many of each item are needed?
- Are there any in-kind contributions available to the project, and if so, how much do they defray the cost?
- What is the total share provided by the applicant, and how much is provided for each line item?

VI. APPENDIX (also called addenda, attachments, exhibits, documentation, etc.) This section is a way of keeping the narrative (the first five sections) as short and as neat as possible. It should be preceded by a list, or table of contents. If possible, the order of attachments should correspond to the serial order in the narrative.

Each page of each attachment should be numbered, e.g.,
Reference to specific attachments should be made in the narrative, to help the reader.

Many writers will break the major sections into sub-sections. For instance, the introduction could be:

I. INTRODUCTION
   A. Historical Background
   B. Geography of the Area
   C. The Problem
   D. Factors Causing the Problem
   E. History of the Organization
   F. Corporate Capability
   G. (etc.)

The Work Plan Could be:
   A. Outreach Work
   B. Testing Activities
   C. Placement
   D. Coordination
   E. Evaluation
   F. (etc.)

NOTES
Schedule For Proposal Development

This section is intended as an aid to the proposal writer who wants to be competitive and to win grants more often than the average, run-of-the-mill writer. The desire for excellence carries through to more than the quality of the proposal; it is also an aspect of the writer's working habits. This schedule will be used mostly with government proposals and major proposals to foundations.

To make this schedule work for you, do the following things:

1. Determine the due date for the proposal under consideration.
2. Collect all the information possible about the granting agency (type of program interests, size of grants, restrictions, past grants, etc.)
3. Determine which actions on the schedule will be necessary for you to accomplish for this particular proposal.
4. Beginning with the last date on the schedule, estimate how many days (to the nearest 1/4 day) each task will take to finish.
5. Write in the date due (number 43). Work in reverse from this date to determine what your starting date will be.

QUESTIONS

- How many times has the proposal been written and rewritten?
- What steps in this Schedule are not necessary for your organization?
- What steps can be combined?
- What tasks can be assigned to one person in your organization?
- What steps have you been ignoring?
- How ready is your organization, and are you, to undertake thorough preparation for fund raising, as outlined above?
- What aids/techniques/materials/skills do you and your organization need to acquire?
- How many days will it take to go from step 1 to step 43?
- What can you do to shorten the time frame, without giving up quality of proposals?
THE 25 RULES OF WRITING

Perhaps the most frequent reason that proposals are not funded is that they violate some of the basic rules of writing that have evolved in the past few decades of philanthropy in the U.S. At the same time, those proposals, and the proposal writers who are frequently funded, follow certain informal rules.

There has been very little research done on this topic, but the research that has been done indicates that there are certain expectations that proposal readers bring with them. Proposals which live up to these expectations stand an excellent chance of being funded. Those which do not, even if they meet the technical guidelines of the program or the funding agency, stand a good chance of not being funded.

Earlier sections of this chapter have hinted or stated things about these rules already. Keep in mind that these rules are seldom written anywhere, but that they still affect the lives and thinking of proposal readers.

RULE NUMBER ONE—Write for the reader. Try to put yourself in the place of the reader. Is the reader liberal or conservative, minority or majority, male or female, program officer or consultant, rich or poor, professional or layperson, etc.? Getting this information will require doing some research about the persons who will be reading your proposal. This can be done by gathering materials that are available (program announcements, annual reports, regulations, program guidelines, etc.) before writing begins. If the reader is a layman, don’t use “in” jargon or technical language, for instance. One of the tools that is readily available, but seldom used, is Who's Who, which can tell you the basics of a person's life. Many proposal readers are listed in the Who’s Who volumes.

RULE NUMBER TWO—Make it easy for the reader. Use things like:

- footnotes (not end notes)
- cross references
- lists of consultants and cooperating agencies
- attachments following the narrative instead of in it
- outlines
- thorough and logical organization of the application
- pagination of the entire application
- a table of contents
- complete labeling of all pages of all attachments and narrative pages
- an abstract where possible.

Again, imagine you are the reader; no one likes to search through a long application, with no table of contents, for the resume of the project director.

RULE NUMBER THREE—Write clearly. Often confused thinking leads to confused syntax, or the attempt to cover up or explain away. This is bad for proposals; don’t make the reader guess at what you want to get across. The reader may guess wrong. Don’t obfuscate, or use arcane language, or use big words for the sake of using big words.

RULE NUMBER FOUR—Use the right word. The almost right word is not good enough. Mark Twain spelled out the contrast: "The difference between the right word and the almost right word is the same as the difference between lightning and a lightning bug." A dictionary is an absolute essential, as is a good thesaurus. Also use "spell check" on your computer, and have a good secretary's handbook nearby.

RULE NUMBER FIVE—Prove points with documentation. Any statement central to the exposition which is not supported by documentation is liable to be taken by the reader as an educated guess, which is the lowest level of documentation. This will detract from the quality of the proposal. The levels of documentation that are commonly available to writers are:

1. Facts (total knowledge of something)
2. Statistics and census data (randomized)
3. Surveys (not randomized)
4. Institutional records
5. Opinions or estimates of knowledgeable persons

The secret is to move as high up the scale as possible. For instance, there is no reason for a proposal writer to guess at the crime rate for the community; someone in the police department or sheriff’s office knows what it is, and can write a letter to you with the facts. This would give your proposal much more credibility in the eyes of the reader than your own educated guess.

RULE NUMBER SIX—Do not try to accomplish too much. This is a very common mistake. Objectives should be realistic and capable of attainment, always. A good rule of thumb is to take the level of accomplishment you think it is possible to reach for each objective, and reduce it by half. Contrary to the thinking of many writers, this will improve the quality of the proposal, not detract from it.
RULE NUMBER SEVEN—Document everything a staff person will do, using thorough job descriptions, in the narrative under method of operation, and in the narrative under personnel.

RULE NUMBER EIGHT—Rewrite. Share a draft version with colleagues. Then rewrite again. Cut and paste. Then rewrite again. Repeat until perfect. And there is no substitute for getting the thoughts on paper. It is important to discuss and agree on the project among staff members and planners, but remember that often the only connection between your agency and the actual funders will be the pieces of paper which make up your proposal.

RULE NUMBER NINE—Never develop a proposal or write completely alone. The result is likely to be poor quality. Reactions from others are often extremely helpful. The result of writing alone will be that only your thoughts are reflected in the proposal. With the biases that all of us carry around with us daily, it is impossible to gain the perspective of a community or an organization without having help in the writing and development of proposals.

RULE NUMBER TEN—Develop a checklist and use it. This should be an individual checklist for each proposal you write. This is particularly important for federal programs, which are many times quite involved with requirements. But many foundations and corporations have specific requirements that they want followed. It is also an excellent idea to develop an outline for the proposal before writing begins.

RULE NUMBER ELEVEN—Be consistent in the narrative between and among the objectives, the budget, and the approach sections. An activity which implies expenditures should have them reflected in the budget, and it should be in support of an objective. Likewise, all line items in the budget should be explained in the narrative. And all objectives imply both activities and costs, both of which should be there when the reader looks for them. The only way to make sure this "magic triangle" is internally coordinated is to go over each item carefully, checking it against the other two.

RULE NUMBER TWELVE—Announce and make transitions, through the use of language, the use of outlines, the use of paragraph headings, and the like. (See Rule Number One)

RULE NUMBER THIRTEEN—Avoid technical and bureaucratic language, and similar language usage. Most proposals can be written using plain English; even bureaucrats don't like to read bureaucratize. During the Second World War, President Roosevelt was in a building in Washington which had the following sign by the light switch: THE LAST PERSON DEPARTING THE PREMISES SHOULD EXTINGUISH THE ILLUMINATION UPON VACATING THE PREMISES. He said, "Why don't they just say 'Please turn out the lights when you leave'?

RULE NUMBER FOURTEEN—Be brief.

RULE NUMBER FIFTEEN—Stick to the point. Irrelevant facts, however interesting they may be, detract from the quality of the proposal. Try to have every sentence related to the central idea.

RULE NUMBER SIXTEEN—Get help with the budget, even if you as the writer will also be the project director. Frequently, supervisors and business managers can give great help with budgets, the finer points of which are sometimes lost on persons who are not accountants.

RULE NUMBER SEVENTEEN—Correct all typographical errors, grammatical errors, syntax errors, and the like. Don't detract the reader's attention from the important point you are trying to develop by the funny way it is written or typed.

RULE NUMBER EIGHTEEN—Don't write long sentences. If it is possible, break sentences longer than 15-20 words into two or more sentences. If your average sentence length is over 20, your writing is bordering on being too complicated for easy understanding.

RULE NUMBER NINETEEN—Don't use colloquialisms. Since they are by definition understood only in a limited area, or by a limited number of persons, others outside the group may not understand them at all. Be aware of the difference between the spoken word and the written word. The dictionary will tell you if a word is collegial.

RULE NUMBER TWENTY—Don't editorialize. Leave this job to the newspapers.

RULE NUMBER TWENTY-ONE—Don't use clichés. They are dead language, and indicate to the reader that not enough thought may have gone into the proposal.
RULE NUMBER TWENTY-TWO—Make positive statements; don't equivocate. This rule is frequently violated, and is a basic one of proposal development. Remember, a proposal is a plan of action, and statements such as "We hope to serve 50 adults in this project," or "The coordinator should be able to make contact with most of the school counselors" tell the reader immediately that your proposal is not a plan of action, but a plan of wishes which may not come true.

RULE NUMBER TWENTY-THREE—Don't generalize; be specific. Vagueness or generalities in almost any form will detract from your proposal. Try to paint a word picture for the reader, for instance, in the method of operation section, which will let the reader see what staff persons are actually doing. Don't quote national statistics, unless your organization is a national one, and the problem the project will address is national in scope as well.

RULE NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR—Write an abstract, to clarify your thinking, and to help the reader. Some foundations request an abstract, while others don't request one. For those which do not request one, it is good idea to include one. Keep it to one page, double-spaced, typed, 250 words or fewer. Briefly outline the problem, the proposed solution, and the total cost for the project.

RULE NUMBER TWENTY-FIVE—Be thorough, making absolutely certain that all the things called for in the guidelines are covered. It is almost demoralizing to learn after the proposal has been submitted that an important element was inadvertently left out.

To summarize ways to follow the rules, timelines are important. The proposal which is rushed through over the weekend, to meet the Monday morning deadline, is often more of a mistake than a plan of action. Second, plan thoroughly. Most people think of proposals as applications for money. We advocate thinking about them as plans of action, with the money being incidental. Third, work at polishing your writing. The methods of operation section, normally the most important section, should be clear and detailed. Fourth, think through the whole proposal before starting to write. If it is not clear to you, it will almost certainly not be clear to the readers.

NOTES

GRANTSMANSHIP

One of the most talked about, and least written about, topics in fund raising is grantsmanship. To some, the term itself is used with scorn, as one would refer to a shyster lawyer or a snake oil salesman.

To the honest grant writer, there is nothing bad about grantsmanship. In its clearest meaning, it is simply the total act of making your agency's case to a source of support. The actions necessary to make the case should, of course, be totally honest and without guile. There is no good reason not to engage in honest grant seeking; after all, why bother with the labor of writing up good plans without good prospects of having them funded?

There are various things a fund raiser can do in addition to simply writing the proposal which can help to sell it. In some organizations, these duties can well be the responsibility of the chief adminis-
But a genuine relationship, or a partnership, can be productive for both parties. The funding agency can learn about other aspects of the problems it is interested in helping to solve, and other organizations which are trying to solve it. The grant writer can learn about other ways that could be tried to solve the problem, about other sources of funding, and about new developments in the philanthropic field.

In general, proposal writers need to have clearly defined plans for the continuation of a project once the funds sought for it are spent. It is rare to have a private funding source give a grant for a period longer than a year. Some will give another grant to the same project, but many will not fund a second year. This leaves the writer with a problem. The problem can be solved in a number of ways that are within the scope of most organizations—membership dues, fees for services, contributions, other grants, products which can be sold, and so forth. In many cases, the solution to this problem is difficult to come up with, but failure to address it is one of the leading reasons why proposals are not funded.

It is important in proposals to spell out the credentials of the staff AND the organization. Staff credentials are often documented, but organizational credentials are often left out. Questions you might want to address are:

- What has the organization set as its goals?
- What has it done to accomplish these goals?
- What specific milestones has it achieved in this regard?
- Is it fiscally capable of managing funds?
- How long have key staff been with the organization, and what have they been able to accomplish in their tenure?
- How well respected is the organization in the community?

Again, put yourself in the place of the proposal reader/staff person at the funding agency, and ask what questions they will have about the organization. Or, better yet, ask them directly what they are interested in seeing.

Organizations, for their own stability and for credibility, should strive to build a broad base of support. It is a risky business to rely on a single source of funds, as many federal grantees are now learning. But in grantsmanship, it is a definite factor in your favor to have many sources of funding. The various sources should be explained to funding agencies with pride, and no attempt should be made to conceal them.

An easy way to portray them graphically is... by the use of a needs matrix (see page 8). Many fundraisers, when presented with this proposition, will immediately think that funding agencies, if they know an organization already has funds, will be reluctant to give the organization more funds. In fact, the reverse tends to be true—those which have successful programs tend to be able to attract other grants to themselves. One of the facts of life that funding agencies are well aware of is that there are not nearly enough dollars in the total philanthropic arena to meet the needs they are trying to meet. The only alternative, then, is to get the most "mileage" out of their dollars.

So, contrary to what many directors and staff members of nonprofit organizations think, it is much better to have successful programs going on than not to have any. The question is not one so much of just money, but of the ability of an organization to deliver what it promises to deliver.

Don't be afraid to write, to call, to visit, to ask questions, to make comments, and in general try to learn all you can about a funding agency. A gap exists between Native people and tribes and foundation; only Native people can bridge the gap. The reason is very simple—by their nature, foundations, corporations, and associations cannot be very effective in outreach to their potential grantees. Often an attempt by a funder at outreach is misinterpreted by the agencies contacted as an offer of assistance, or an offer of a grant, so they tend not to make outreach. Too, funding agencies most often have more applicants than they can help support, and must turn down many more requests than they can honor.

Unless the gap is bridged, Native people will continue to be shortchanged in grants from this sector.

Use the preferred method of contact when approaching a new foundation. There are basically four ways to contact them—telephone, letter, proposal, and visit. Being careless, and using the wrong method, can cause them problems, and can be bad public relations for your organization.

The real secret, and the only one, to grantsmanship, is matching your agency's needs to the funding agency's interests. This is the main reason you want to learn everything you can about the agency, to make the job of the board members, the staff members, and others as easy and as pleasant as possible. They should not have to make agonizing decisions on your application, if you submit one that is on the borderline. (You should not submit such an application anyway.) The way to avoid having an application on the borderline is to prepare carefully, to write clearly, to plan well, and to learn all you can about the funding agency.

Finally, contact the foundations in your local area first, rather than going to national foundations first. The national ones—those which make grants all over the U.S.—are besieged by requests the year round. It is difficult for a writer to make a reader understand a local situation if the reader has never been in the area physically.

Local foundations are more likely to have some knowledge of your situation, or be able to get this knowledge through a phone call or a visit.

We recommend that you exhaust all possibilities for funding from local foundations before making contact with national ones, or with ones outside your area.

NOTES

THE MAGIC TRIANGLE

The "magic triangle" is the three important parts of a proposal—the objectives, the activities or methods, and the budget. There are other important parts, but the relationship among these three is particularly important.

The first point about them is that they should be regarded as interrelated.

Once objectives are decided upon, they should strongly determine the choice of a set of activities which will lead to their accomplishment. The budget is only the activities section translated into dollar costs.

Good objectives should have five attributes, according to the guidelines of several programs:

- They should be realistic. They should not try to do too much, and they should not try to do too little. If they have either quality, this fact will detract from the quality of the proposal. Perhaps one of the most unrealistic aspects of objectives as they are written by many writers is the too-high expectation about the level of participation they anticipate from the persons they will serve. In general, it is not realistic to expect over 50 percent of any group of people to become involved in anything; objectives such as one which said "Eighty percent of the parents will be involved in this project during the course of the year" are asking too much. An estimate this high should be lowered to something in the vicinity of reality, perhaps 20 percent.

- They should be measurable. This means that a number applied to them will have some logical connection with them. Examples are how much improvement students achieve on test scores, how many homes are built, what percentage of people served act a certain way (remain in school, go to meetings, etc.), and so on. Ideally, this number should be an indication of an outcome (see page 12 ff.). In cases where this is not possible, it can be in terms of how many people do a certain thing, or act in a certain way, or achieve certain things (jobs, medical exams, school enrollment, and so on).

- They should be attainable. That is, they should be accomplishable in the time frame of the project, with the funds that will be available, and with the personnel that will be at work on the project. There is a difference between realism and attainability; realism asks "can it ever be done?" while attainability asks "can it be done with the resources available to this project"?

- They should be sharply defined. That is, they should be so narrowly defined that the reader can picture them as they are read. There should be no room here for generalities.

They should be clearly stated. The almost right word is not good enough. Excellent objectives can be written in one short sentence, and frequently are. Poor objectives can be written in half a page each, and frequently are. They should be so clear that they leave no doubt in anyone's mind about what is intended in the whole project.

It should be obvious that project objectives should be consistent with the overall objectives of your organization, but sometimes it is not. For the record, and for sanity and calm within your staff, let us state it here. Objectives which are widely divergent from the overall goals of the organization will tend to cause internal conflicts which could be beyond repair.

Objectives should be stated in outcome terms, and in client terms (how much better off will clients be?), that is, measurable changes which have taken place during the course of the project. One of the most common mistakes planners and proposal writers make is to state objectives in activities terms, that is, outcomes are stated in terms of work. The number of hours people will work, the travel that will be done, and the other work tasks that are necessary to bring about changes will be stated as objectives. This is fine if the "objectives" are given the label of "goals" or something similar, but frequently activities are called objectives and the outcomes are not specified. One makes a much stronger case for initial funding, and for follow on funding, if desirable results can be shown.

Once objectives are clearly thought out, stated, and understood and agreed upon, you are ready to write activities. This section could be looked upon as the management section of the proposal, the objectives as the planning section, and the budget as the financial section. Therefore, management should be directly involved in the development of this section. It is management which will have to carry out the project.

Managers have five things to manage to achieve the goals of their organizations—people, money, things, time and space. Of these five, people are probably the most well managed, while space is probably the least well managed. Money falls close to people as a thing relatively well managed, while time falls close to space as a thing poorly managed. Things fall in the middle somewhere.

Space is one that is often forgotten or ignored altogether in proposals. Facilities, distances from one place to another, and the like are often not mentioned at all. When these things are important to the total proposal, leaving them out will raise questions in the minds of the readers, questions which will not be answered, because the communication involved in proposal writing is one-way, with little if any chance for feedback before final decisions are made.

Some of the other things that are good to include in proposals are timelines or timetables, evaluation plans or designs, fiscal methods and accounting of funds, coordination of the project internally and with other agencies in the community, the role of the board of directors in accountability and management, the qualifications of staff and directors, and the overall accountability structure of the organization. Mostly what these things involve is a simple description of how your agency operates already, if it is run well. If it is not run well, take advantage of the need for additional funds to update some of the things that need to be updated.

Budgets, which tend to be dull, dry things to most managers and planners, and exciting only to business managers and accountants, can literally make or break a proposal. The most common mistakes are estimating costs too high or too low. The next most common mistake is leaving out critical elements because of carelessness.

They should be carefully planned, just as objectives and plans of operation should be. Some tips to help you plan better budgets:

- Show matching funds if possible. These funds may be from any source at all, as long as they are honestly going to be used for the purposes of this project. The easiest way to show them may be through using not just one column for the budget line items, but multiple columns, one for each source of funds.

- Show salary ranges. It is fine to show the actual salary of the person who will be doing the job, if the person is already an employee, or is already identified. But in cases where a search will be made for new employees, showing ranges will not commit the agency to paying the top salary to a novice employee.

- Be detailed and exact. Do not go overboard, but do not try to condense too much.

- Be thorough. Did you include every item which will be necessary, with its cost?

- Be realistic. If objectives are realistic, budgets should be too.

- Match salaries to the local area. New York City takes a higher salary to live on than does Ames, Iowa. Don't compare your salary scales to either one if you live in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

- Show the details of fringe benefits, not just the overall amount or percentage. Show what benefits are being paid, and what the costs are for each class of employee. This makes the budget tighter, and therefore more credible.

- Get help with the budget, from bookkeepers, accountants, business managers, and others who know the details of budgets on a daily basis. They can help you spot errors in not only addition and multiplication, but by reading over the narrative section of the proposal, they can find places where the relationship among the parts of the magic triangle is not clear. Most proposal writers are good with words, and perhaps not so good with finances, whereas the business types are good with finances and perhaps not so good with words. Strive for excellence in both narrative and budget.

- Show per-item costs for multiple items. Instead of showing travel costs as one entry in the budget for $5,000, break the trips down by the number of people going on them, when they will be going, how long they will be staying, and the total cost for each person and each trip. This information is relatively easy to obtain, but is often left out of proposal budgets. Putting in a lump sum of over $500 or $1,000, without further explanation, is an invitation to most readers to question the overall soundness of the budget, and therefore of the proposal. Since you will have no other opportunity to communicate with them, make sure the first time is good enough. (The per-item breakdown applies not only to travel, but to equipment, supplies, salaries, telephone, mailing costs, etc.)

- Distinguish between equipment and supplies. In the private sector there is not a great deal of money to buy equipment, for whatever purposes. Most of the funds that are available are for program costs, such as personnel, communication, and the like. It is well to tread lightly in asking for equipment, except for those foundations which put this as a priority, and for the corporations which give equipment of various types to nonprofits. In general, consider things that are consumed in the course of the project as supplies, and things that are not consumed as equipment. Since equipment is not a big item in the private sector, it is a good idea to look for the funds for these needs elsewhere.

- Use consultants if necessary. There is a very easy way to tell if you need a consultant for a project: if your organization does not have someone on staff with the necessary skills and training to do a particular job. It is almost always better to go outside the organization to get the job done well than to rely on someone inside who cannot perform it adequately. The obvious exception is tasks that are not critical to the accomplishment of goals and objectives, which have no deadlines that are pressing, and which can be learned by someone on staff in due course. Some of the things that consultants are ordinarily used for are training, testing evaluations, development of materials, planning, some types of research, feasibility studies, and ventures that are new to the organization.

Show per-diem costs for consultants if they are to be used. Find out what their daily charge is, how many times they would have to visit your organization and the travel and per-diem costs for each visit, and the amount of time they will spend away from the site working for you. Have them to write a letter giving these details, and put the letter in the appendices.

Careful attention to the magic triangle will pay benefits in the long run which are well worth the trouble of being meticulous with this section. It is a good idea to review these sections and their relationships yourself, and to have someone with no interest in the project to do the same thing to cross check your work.

THE NEEDS MATRIX

For many Native organizations, including tribes, colleges, college programs, and community agencies, grant seeking from the private sector at the present can be a problem. For those foundations which state that they prefer to make grants to agencies which do not rely on government funds, it is a real problem for Native organizations, the great majority of which now depend largely on government grants of some kind, mainly federal.

But even those foundations which prefer non-governmentally-affiliated organizations can be approached, in some cases, on the basis of need. Most foundations are well aware that there are not enough dollars in the field of philanthropy to meet the needs; in fact, the needs in some areas of endeavor are grossly under-funded. (Some of these are minority access to higher education, minority economic development, community development in minority communities, and others.)

On the next page is a "needs matrix" of an actual Native tribe. The administration of this group was concerned that their success over the past decade in getting federal grants to meet their needs would hinder them in the private sector. They live in an isolated area, with only a few dozen miles of paved road for a large reservation area. Most of the people live in rural parts of the reservation, and raise cattle for their livelihood.

Together we developed a way to portray graphically their total needs, their total programs, and the needs that are not met now at all, and to put this all on one page. We decided to call this a "needs matrix."

The matrix shows that the tribe now has 20 funded programs in operation, and has identified another 19 important needs of the community which are not now being met at all. The matrix shows that all the needs in education that are top priority are being met, but that health and economic development are in great need of strengthening.

With some expansion of the matrix, or by presenting it in another form, it is possible to indicate the total amount of funds flowing through the tribal administration and the community each year.

Even if your organization is not now ready or planning to seek funds from the private sector, it may be a good idea to develop your own internal needs matrix. In many cases it will take some time to gain the necessary agreement on what the priorities are, what should be listed on the matrix, and what should be done to meet the various needs.

In one organization, the development of a full needs matrix took over a year to complete. It should not be developed in haste. But done properly, it can be a device for creating consensus about the goals and direction of the organization.

It is a tool for allowing a funding agency to gain an immediate picture of the overall status of your organization's programs. The agency can then see how their grant funds would complement the programs now funded. A short narrative explaining the programs and the needs is easily made a part of The Needs Matrix.

THE CHECKLIST FOR NEED STATEMENTS

One cannot develop a needs matrix without a framework for determining what needs exist in a community, and for making rational decisions among possible alternatives. These alternatives can be weighed against each other by the severity of the results of not addressing them, or by the results they are already causing by their absence.

For example, you may suspect that low levels of employment are related to low amounts of education. To determine this, it is fairly easy to determine, for a sample of members of a community, what the educational level (total years of education) of each person is, and what their employment status is. One would then expect to find that more of those with a third grade education were unemployed than were those with a high school education. This survey could also determine what percentage of the population had achieved what levels of education.

Here are some questions which will help in developing needs statements:

- Is the problem stated in precise terms? One way to test this is to have a person who is asked the question to explain it back to you. Is the meaning clear to all concerned? Is there agreement that the right question is being asked?

- What are the major causes of the problem? Are they economic? social? educational? governmental? cultural? linguistic? Are they related to the degree of isolation? Can the local community control the causes? How much does each cause contribute to the problem? Are the causes distributed equally among the population? Are the causes related to each other?

- What are the major consequences of the problem? Are people poor, in bad health, dispirited, despairing, powerless, ignorant, without hope? How are families affected? How are institutions (religious, educational, governmental, economic) affected? Can the leadership alleviate the problem? How is the problem related to other problems?

- Why was this particular problem chosen for this proposal? Why is it of interest to this particular foundation? What is the organization prepared to do about the problem? Why should it be addressed? How can it be solved by the partnership between the funding agency and your agency?

- What documentation of the need is presented? Can you prove it with indisputable figures, or other documents? Can the number of people affected be stated with accuracy? Can the degree to which each is affected be proven? Can the relationship between causes and the problem be "proven"? Can the relationship between the problem and the consequences be "proven"?

- What has already been done on the problem, in your community or in other communities? Have these other attempts worked? How costly were they in relation to benefits? How do the various solutions compare in costs?

- Why is the project needed at this time? Why was it not important last year, or ten years ago? Could it wait for another five years? What would happen if it were not addressed at this time? If you don't address it, will some other agency?

TIPS ON ACTIVITIES STATEMENTS

The activities (methods, work plan, approach-take your choice) section is the management part of the proposal. This section describes the work to be done; without adequate plans, your project is not likely to succeed, and you are not likely to receive funds in the first place.

- Write your objectives first. Planning your work without knowing what you are working toward is like putting the cart before the horse. Nevertheless, it is one of the most common mistakes proposal writers make.

- Outline before writing. This section will be the most complicated one, more than likely, and thus deserves some thinking and reflection.

- Be thorough. That is, without being verbose or wordy, cover all the bases. A car with a part missing will not run well, if it runs at all. Your plan of action will not work very well if parts are missing.

- Be specific-totally. There is little room for general statements anywhere in a proposal, and certainly not here. (The most logical place for them is in the introduction.) In the work plan, watch the words to make sure you are painting a word picture of the activities that will be done by the project. Do not equivocate here; tell the reader exactly, as precisely as you can, what will be going on-who will be doing what, how long each activity will last, who will be responsible for making sure it is done, when in the project sequence it will be done, where it will be done, etc. Think of the project as a building, and of the proposal as the blueprints for the building. The blueprint (plans) should be so clear and understandable that the builder (project staff) can build by following them.

- Spell out relationships and linkages, both internally and externally. This includes coordination, communication, outreach, fiscal management, personnel procedures, and other things that are necessary to accomplish the work of the project. It is not necessary to put all this in writing in the narrative; much of it can go in the attachments, if you have this all spelled out in policy manuals.

- Get help from others through brain-storming. Whether or not you actually formally do brain-storming, it is good to get lots of input. The main question is: Now that we have identified what we want to accomplish, how can we best get it done? Talk to everyone who will be concerned with the project.

- Include documentation, which here means proof of what you say. It is fine to say you have a 50% dropout rate of high school students, but much better to have a letter or other document which corroborates it. Most of the actual documents can go in the attachments section.

- Be realistic. This is not the place to dream, or daydream, or wish. Everything should make sense to the reader, whether this is you, another person on the project, or the reader at the funding agency.

- Perform job audits. This means correlating the job descriptions of staff with the work to be done, and auditing the duties and responsibilities of each position. If the staff members are already identified (the best alternative), then it is easy to match up their qualifications with the work to be done, to determine if they will need any further training. If training is needed, by all means make provisions to provide it, whether through this project or elsewhere. This is one place a lot of proposals fail; the writer assumes that adequate staff will either be on hand, or can be found, to do the work. Don't make this mistake. If staff members are not already identified, they will have to be hired if the project is funded. In this case, you will have to guess what their qualifications are likely to be; guess high on the training side, rather on the side of assuming they will be fully qualified.

- Spell out ALL major activities. This does not mean the minor things, but every task that is necessary to accomplish the objective should be included. Coordination, outreach, and communication are frequently necessary to accomplish objectives, but are not often left out of the narrative. If staff are not on board, they will have to be searched for, screened, trained, and oriented. Judgment is called for, but make sure all the necessary steps are spelled out.

- Describe the facilities. If any doubt exists at all about whether the reader will understand that the facilities are adequate, prove that they are. The easiest way is to put in a floor plan, even if hand made; even better, put in a picture of the building.

- Describe the role of consultants. If they will be involved at all, do not make the mistake many writers do of only mentioning them in the budget section. This will be a surprise to the reader, who will start looking for other "mistakes" as well. Tell, in brief, what they will do, when they will work, what the terms will be, etc. It is a good idea to put a list of prospective consultants in the attachments, and state that they will be asked to bid on the work to be done.

- Describe the method of fund accounting. If it is cash, accrual, modified, etc., describe it briefly, and put an excerpt from your fiscal policies manual in the attachments.

- Describe the basics of fiscal management. This will tell readers how their funds will be handled—the purchasing system you use, the payments system, the reimbursement procedures for employees, the contract payment system, etc. Again, there can be excerpts from policy manuals to go in attachments.

- Describe personnel management highlights. Again briefly, describe who hires employees, who supervises whom, who handles orientation of each position, the probation conditions for new employees, how fringe benefits are handled, your annual turnover rate (if you are brave), what types of training are provided to new employees and how much the organization contributes to it, what types of ongoing or refresher training are provided, how evaluation of employees is handled, and so on. Again, use attachments to insert the relevant sections of your personnel manual, and describe them briefly in the narrative.

ELEMENTS OF JOB DESCRIPTIONS

There is a good reason to write a job description for each position in a project—it assists in the overall planning and coordination of the project. That is, the fact of thinking through the various job descriptions and relating them thoroughly to the work to be done will produce a better proposal. A better proposal means it is more likely to be funded.

With the right planning, the job description can be converted into a job announcement. Simply adding the due date for applications and the procedure for applying will do the trick, and will save some work later.

Some of the elements which should be included:

- Supervision received and exercised. Each person reports to someone, and some have others reporting to them. Describe this in words.

- Minimum and desired qualifications. While the desired qualifications are not necessary, they are a good idea. Minimum qualifications are necessary to avoid hiring staff members who are not qualified. If no one with the minimum is found, by all means start the search again.

- Desired experience, both in types of work and in length of time in the work.

- Specific duties and percentages of time, if indicated this way, often reflect very careful planning for the position, and look good in attachments to a proposal. This is really the heart of the job description, and should be done well. The job description which is written for the first time on Monday morning, for a proposal which is due in the mail on Monday afternoon, will inevitably be obvious to the reader, even for the experienced proposal writer.

- Salary range is better to put on the job description than one salary figure. With ranges, the skills and experience of the person hired can be matched to the salary. If one salary is used, the person hired will expect to be paid that salary.

- Working hours and conditions, whether normal daylight hours or otherwise. If there are any unusual conditions (travel, late hours, shift work, etc.), these should be spelled out.

- Equal employment opportunity statement should be included.

- Specific job skills required. This is not the preparation for a job which a person received in a classroom, but the actual ability to do various things as demonstrated on the job. The list of the various types of skills which could be required is very long—typing, writing, editing, counseling, accounting, bookkeeping, welding, and on and on. Be very specific, and determine concretely what applicants can deliver.

- Necessary coordination and liaison. Leaving this out is sometimes an invitation to disaster, as the new person hired does not take this aspect of the job seriously, and does not try to maintain open lines of communication. These should be spelled out for both internal and external relationships.

LIST OF APPENDIXES

It is a good idea to place as much of the documentation and backup materials as possible in this section. This does two things: it lets the reader go all the way through the narrative without interruption, and it gives the reader the option of looking at these materials or not looking at them.

Not every reader reads every part of every proposal completely. This fact is not going to change. At the same time, the writer has to assume that all parts will be read, because they just might be. Since they are not always read, it makes the reading easier, and keeps the reader in a good state of mind regarding your proposal, with appendices separate.

The following list is of things that have been included in proposals in the past. Almost no proposal one could think of would require all of them, or even a majority of them. Insert the ones you need for a particular proposal in the appendixes for that proposal.

I. STRUCTURE AND GOVERNANCE

- Articles of incorporation
- By-laws
- Board of directors/governance policies
- Internal Revenue Service tax exemption letter-501(c)(5)
- State level tax exemption letter

II. MANAGEMENT

- Organization chart(s)
1. Allow enough lead time. From the beginning to the end, almost any proposal will take two to four weeks of work to complete. Many writers start on Friday evening to work on the proposal which is due in the mail on the following Monday morning. In a time of decreasing grant funds, and with competition for these funds on the increase, writers who do this consistently will lead a frustrated life.

2. List your priorities. Let the funding agency know that you and your organization have done some planning, and let them see what the level of priority of their project will be. If it is a low priority, funds should not be sought for in the first place. Concentrate on the top priorities of your community, and time will run out before these are met.

3. Begin evaluation activities early. All of us are biased in one way or another, and all of us tend to fall into habits very quickly. For these and other reasons, it is a good idea to have someone without any interest in a project to work with you all the way on it. The unjaundiced eye of the outsider will help you to keep a fresh eye on the problem.

4. Explain future and matching funds. Whether you do or not, and whether the foundation requests this information or not, this question will be on the mind of the reader. So answer it before it is asked.

5. Build in accountability. Chavers's Law, Part One: If no one is responsible, then no one is responsible. Chavers's Law, Part Two: If everyone is responsible, then no one is responsible. Make sure someone is responsible, and accountable ultimately to the directors of the organization for achievable results.

6. Develop a sound, well-developed coordination plan. Very seldom will your organization be the only one in your geographic area working on the problem addressed in the project. It makes good sense to work with these other organizations to gain the maximum benefits from the dollars that you all have together. Organizations which ignore the linkages in their communities-with hospitals, police, educational institutions, churches, religious orders, road builders, contractors, and dozens of others-are in danger of being totally ineffective in solving the problems which affect their constituents. The nature of the problem will determine which institutions are important to coordinate with, but it is important to find which ones will help you, and at the same time, which ones you can help. The returns in good will alone often make this coordination and linkage worthwhile.
7. Achieve the highest level of documentation possible. Don't settle for an educated guess when the facts are available; this is just cutting your own throat. Sometimes the facts are hard to find, and you may have to gather them yourselves, person by person, family by family. But if the choice is between getting and not getting a grant, it may well be worth the effort. If you don't know where to find the facts on the needs you will be addressing, someone in the community does; you can find this person by asking.

8. Make your budget absolutely realistic. There are those who say the funding agency is going to cut the budget, so we might as well beat them at their game; we will pad the budget. There are others who say let's beat them to the punch, and cut it before they do. Both are wrong: Either adding to the budget, or taking away from it, is likely to be detected by the experienced reader. Remember, they read hundreds of proposals a year, typically, and may know all the tricks. The best thing is to ask for all the money that is necessary for the work to be done, and no more. Not only is honesty the best policy; in this case, you are more likely to be funded.

9. Include letters of cooperation and agreement. There is a difference. Cooperation means another organization which will actively work with you on the project. Agreement means either an organization which has a mutual understanding or a contract to work with yours. The difference is in degree or level of commitment. A third type of letter, one supporting your efforts (basically, trying to sell your project through influence), is more likely to backfire than to help you get the grant. Use support letters cautiously, and only in those cases where the person writing the letter knows a key person at the funding agency, in which case the letter should not be in the proposal, but sent separately. Put the letters you receive in a section of the appendices.

10. Include a timetable, if there is no restriction against putting one in the proposal. (In cases where awards are made on the strength of a two-page letter, there is not enough room to put a timetable in.)

11. Include staff qualifications. The best alternative for staff is to have someone already employed, or in line to be employed, so you can put their resumes in the proposal. If the resume and the job requirements as spelled out in the narrative indicate that they are fully qualified, there should be no problem with staff qualifications. The next best alternative is to spell out the job requirements, and the job description, and relate the ways in which the search for new employees to do the work will be carried out. But while it is next best, it is really a poor second. Make sure resumes are well written and up to date.

12. If necessary, conduct a needs assessment. If the data and facts about the problem and the need are in hand, there is no need for a new assessment. But if they are not, it is a good idea to conduct an assessment. This does not mean conducting a telephone or house to house survey, necessarily. If the information is available somewhere, it may be only a matter of collecting it. But where you are approaching a new funding agency, it is a good idea to document fully your need statement.

13. Spell out the results expected. Every funding agency ever established wants results. They are all founded to solve certain problems, and so naturally want some progress made on the problems being alleviated. The way to think about results is: how much better off will the clients be at the end of the project? This is different from the level of effort your staff will expend on the project. It is the difference in client behaviors, their life styles, chances in life, their opportunities, and the like, which is important.

14. Follow guidelines precisely. Whether these apply to the length of the proposal, format of the proposal, what is to be included in it, what not to include, where to send it, how to type it, date to have it submitted, or some other things, they should be followed to the letter. There are good reasons for all of them to be spelled out, and in most cases the foundation staff will tell you. Some, if not followed, may keep you from being funded.

15. Brainstorm every project, if it is new to the organization, or different from current projects, especially. But it is better to start fresh several times a year, if you write many proposals each year. The old habits you quickly build up can be your worst enemy. The best way to keep this from happening-to keep yourself seeing the problem as it appears to others-is to seek their views on it. Another way to put it-there is so much going on in any community, no matter how small, that no one person can keep up with all of it. Therefore, any person's point of view reflects only part of the reality of the world. Only fools think they have discovered the ultimate truth.

16. Treat every proposal as competitive. It is true that there are some funds that are given out based on entitlement, in federal programs. There are almost none in foundation and corporate philanthropy. The competition is intense, and those who do not realize this, and act accordingly, are often disappointed. Each proposal should get your fresh and undivided attention.

17. Match your needs with the interests of the funding agency. This is a broad, general statement, but it is really the secret to private sector fund raising. This is why it is so important to learn all you can about the agency you are thinking about applying to. The more you know about them, the better off you are. They need, on their part, to know basically two things: (1) what the needs of your constituents are, and (2) what you plan to do about these needs. If they think you are capable, and the needs are something they are interested in, you stand an excellent chance of being funded. Although writing proposals has become more complicated in the past few decades, still all the questions boil down to these two. Don’t lose sight of the basics as you become involved in job descriptions, needs assessments, writing objectives, and the rest. All these things are either related to learning about what the needs are and describing them, or what your agency’s plans are to meet the needs.

18. Assume the reader is knowledgeable. This is not to say the reader is knowledgeable about your community or your organization; you will have to make the introductions here. But it is very safe to assume that the reader is a cosmopolitan, educated person, who has a fair amount of influence in the circles he or she moves in. A large percentage of the foundation readers will be people with business backgrounds, although there will be ministers, college professors and presidents, attorneys, doctors, and others among them. If you want to know how knowledgeable your particular readers are, look them up in Who’s Who, or ask the foundation staff for vitae on them.

19. Think holistically. Without a blueprint, a pile of bricks cannot be made into a house. Nevertheless, the architects of proposals sometimes think that they can put together job descriptions, work plans, background statements, and all the rest, and have it turn into a proposal. It is the guiding thought that makes the difference between a whole, sound proposal, and a series of scattered, unrelated, incoherent parts. Never lose sight of the major problem the project and a proposal are aimed at correcting.

20. Writing

Write for the reader. The proposal you are writing will not be funded by you, by your boss, by your board of directors, or by your best friend. It may be funded by the foundation to which you are applying. Therefore, write to the foundation, and no one else. Try to see the world from their frame of reference. After all, this is the frame of reference that will be making the decision about your proposal. Be polite and courteous to them. There is no need to insult anyone in a proposal, whether on purpose or not. Be helpful to them. Make it easy for them to find things in the proposal. Put labels on things. Provide a table of contents. Write an abstract.

21. Write realistic objectives. Contrary to what some writers think, readers are not impressed with too-ambitious objectives. And they are less than impressed with objectives which are too low. See what other organizations who have addressed the problem have been able to accomplish in the time frame you propose. Get the best thinking of the persons who will be working on the project about what will be realistic.

22. Coordinate objectives, activities, and budgets. An objective will require some tasks to achieve it, and the tasks will cost some money. The relationship should be logical, well thought out, and make good common sense. The number of objectives in any project should be few; the more there are, the more complicated the project becomes, and the more unmanageable it will be.

23. Never write in isolation. The product will be only your thoughts, which will not be as rich as the problem to be addressed, or as varied as the personalities in the community or your organization. This is not to say your door should never be closed, but if it always is, something is wrong.

24. Stick to the point. This calls for sticking to the central theme of the proposal all the way through. A proposal is like any other piece of writing—with a theme it hangs together, and without a theme it does not. You want it to make sense to the reader above all, so don’t waste the reader’s time with little side trips exploring things that have no bearing on the problem.

25. Double space unless instructed otherwise. Single spaced typing is harder to read than double spaced. If the proposal guidelines say not to write over ten pages, it will be cheating to write ten single spaced pages. And it will not force you to focus your thoughts and get to the matter at hand.

26. Be inclusive with government proposals. There are buildings full of people who have nothing to do but read and rank your proposals. Something left out usually hurts.

27. Be exclusive with foundation proposals. They do not have buildings full of readers; most do not have anyone on a full time basis. If there is a doubt about whether to put it in or leave it out, leave it out. They are besieged enough with proposals, phone calls, letters, and just the normal office work without extra baggage in proposals.

28. Use words consistently. Do not call your results goals in one place and objectives in another. Do not call your combined tasks methods in one place and approach in another. These terms are used interchangeably in this document to illustrate a point—there are numerous terms in use for the same thing. Try to discover the terms used by the foundation, and use them in your proposal.

29. Provide a full background to the problem and your organization, both, as much as space will allow. In nine out of ten cases, the reader of your proposal will never set foot in your community. The geography, the jobs available, the social life, the culture of the area—all are good if they contribute to an understanding of the problem. If they do not, leave them out, no matter how tempting it is to put them in.

30. Always include an abstract, unless instructed not to. The reason is simple—you want the reader to be pointed in a certain way, and the best way to start the pointing is through a short description of the whole proposal. Keep it under 250 words, double spaced, on one page.

31. Include a cover page. This is a blank page, or a page of your letterhead, with the title of the proposal, the amount of funds, and so on, for easy reference by the reader. A sample is included on page 47.

32. Describe the facilities. Of the five elements managers have to manipulate to be successful—people, money, things, time, and space—the element of space is probably the least well managed. There is good reason for this; it is invisible, and intangible. It is an abstraction, available only to the imagination. Think about it, and describe your housing space. You will remove any doubt about its adequacy if you do.

33. Rewrite until it is perfect. A deceased female writer who sold her books by the millions used six pens of different colors to separate her various drafts from each other. She did this even after she was enormously successful; she had learned in twenty years of perfecting her writing that no one writes well on the first draft. From Hemingway to Updike, writers have said the same thing in various ways. Do you really think you are better than Ernest?

34. Be as specific as possible. In your blueprint of a proposal, there is little room for platitudes, editorials, generalities, blowing smoke, trying to disguise the truth, or any of the other things that get in the way of a clear, well-written exposition. There is little room for literary devices, such as indirection, snide remarks, word plays, and the like. Be straightforward and direct.

35. Place backup materials in your appendices. Make it easy for the reader.

* * * *

Does it sound difficult? It is not any more difficult than learning to drive a car, or to swim, or to get along with your neighbor. Learning to get along with your neighbor may be more difficult than writing a proposal.

Some of the most common mistakes proposal writers make is starting too late, not getting enough information about the funding agency, not getting enough input and advice on the problem from their peers and colleagues, and not planning well enough. Granted, these few things cover a multitude of sins, especially poor planning. But the best planning in the world cannot replace good, clear thinking.

Frequently, writers get upset, especially novice writers, at the large percentage of the budgets in their proposals which are devoted to personnel costs. For comparison, realize that 80 to 85 percent of the total budgets of school districts are personnel costs. The other 15 percent has to cover transportation, food, equipment, supplies, travel, communication, maintenance, fuel, and other costs. Chances are your organization's budget compares to school districts in about the same proportions.

Another mistake writers make is not sharing their writing with others. This is caused by shame, shyness, fear of ridicule, and any number of other fears we think might embarrass us. Which is worse—the fear of embarrassment about your writing, or the embarrassment of being unemployed because your proposals were not funded? The choice is really yours.

CHAPTER TWO

THE FOUNDATION SECTOR

By Stacey Jenkins

Descriptions of foundations that make grants to Native Americans

Few of these foundations make grants to Native Americans because of their status as Native Americans. They do make grants to organizations that are doing work in their areas of interest. Grants listed are samples; no attempt was made to list all Native American grants made. Grants are generally only those made within the past five years. Grants are accurate as reported by the foundations.

NOTE: A high percentage of the foundations listed had moved in the three years prior to the collection of the information listed in this DIRECTORY. If your letter comes back, trace the foundation to its new address.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The Foundation is governed by the following principles:
- Build the Kingdom of God
- Strengthen the Family
- Safeguard and Succor Children
- Administer Relief to the Poor, Needy, Widowed and Fatherless
- Prevent Disease, Malnutrition and Hunger
- Eliminate Suffering
- Promote Education
- Benefit the Arts
- Cultivate an Appreciation for God's Creations
- Assist and Work with Other Foundations in Worthy Causes

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
The Foundation generally does not consider grants for individuals or individual families, group trips, organizations that do not have IRS tax exempt status, capital construction funds, debt reduction, or general fund raising campaigns.

Exceptions are reviewed within current foundation grantmaking policies and are made on a case-by-case basis. Organizations should not submit grant requests more often than every six months.

HOW TO APPLY:
There is no application form. Only one copy of a proposal is required, and it should contain the following information:

- A cover letter signed by the organization's executive director or board president which includes the exact name of the organization, the organization's purpose and how the group attempts to achieve its goals.
- A one page abstract of the proposal which includes the amount of funds requested from the foundation and when those funding amounts are needed.
- A detailed description of the proposed project or program, including:
  - Who or what will benefit from the proposed project or program.
  - The need or problem which the proposed activity is addressing. If statistics or opinions are included, the source or reference should be cited.
  - The project or program objectives and a summary of the activities to be funded.
  - An expense budget for the proposed activity and the revenue plan (sources of funds) for the total budget.
  - The method to be used to determine the project or program effectiveness.
  - Information about the agency staff, especially those responsible for the project or program.
- A copy of the IRS determination letter for the applicant demonstrating 501(c)(3) status.
- Current list of organization's board of directors. Other references familiar with the organization's work.
- Most recent financial statement, preferably audited. When appropriate the most recent IRS Form 990 may be substituted. The prior year profit and loss statement should be set forth in enough specificity so that total general and administrative expenses can be determined as a dollar amount and as a percentage of total revenues.
A statement detailing how much of your budget is used for true charitable purposes.

- List of funding sources.
- Name and telephone number of the person to contact for additional information or to arrange a site visit or interview.

All grant requests must be mailed and should be addressed to:

Ralph W. Rasmussen Jr.,
Ashton Family Foundation,
261 East 1200 South,
Orem, Utah 84058

Applicants may e-mail other types of inquiries to aff@beesmark.com.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The Beldon Fund seeks to build a societal consensus for the personal, economic and policy changes necessary to achieve and sustain a healthy planet. The Fund's mission is to make grants to nonprofit organizations to protect and sustain the environment, by:

- Creating a base of involved and informed people working to protect the environment;
- Strengthening the capacity of nonprofit groups to organize environmental activists;
- Fostering public policy that will achieve the Fund's environmental goals;
- Growing and nurturing leadership on environmental issues; and
- Changing the values, beliefs, and actions of individuals, communities, governments, and businesses.

To achieve its mission, the Beldon Fund is making all of its grant decisions based on a particular set of values. These include:
Commitment. Strengthening the public's commitment to environmental protection will not be accomplished overnight. Rather, it is by presenting a compelling case for environmental protection that we will motivate the public to protect the natural systems on which all life depends. Accordingly, the Beldon Fund's focus is on projects and organizations that demonstrate a long term commitment to environmental advocacy. In addition, the Fund is prepared to demonstrate its own commitment by providing multi-year grants for worthwhile projects and organizations.

Leadership. The environmental movement gains its power from its leaders. We count on their determination and willingness to lead to protect the environment. The Beldon Fund recognizes the importance of giving environmental leaders the tools they need to protect the natural world.

Flexibility. The Beldon Fund believes that environmental protection is achieved by well-executed projects and by strong, influential organizations. The Fund thus offers both project grants and general support grants, to give organizations the flexibility they need to execute specific tasks as well as to thrive as institutions.

Advocacy. The Beldon Fund believes that any effort to mobilize public support for environmental protection must be based on vigorous advocacy. In this context, the Fund views advocacy broadly to include organizing, public education, communication, public opinion research, coalition building, and public policy development.

Inclusion. The Beldon Fund has chosen to concentrate on organizations and projects that consider a diversity of people, that are directly affected by environmental policies and that include a broad spectrum of interests and concerns in their advocacy.

The Beldon Fund is committed to pay out its principal and earnings during the next ten years. The fund believes that our planet's environmental problems require urgent attention and hopes that concentrated use of its resources can help solve these problems.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
The Beldon Fund concentrates its funding in five program areas. Two of them, "key places" and "human and the environment," are particularly important to the Fund and receive emphasis in its grantmaking. Funding for the other three program areas—"global warming," "corporate accountability," and "religion and the environment"—will be more limited in scope. Because the Beldon Fund seeks synergy in its grants, it encourages funding requests that address two or more program areas, although requests in any one area are also welcome. Types of support: The five program areas include "Religion and the environment," "Corporate Power and the Environment," "Global Warming," "Human Health and the Environment," and "Key Places.

The Fund begins with six key states where they feel there is a compelling need to improve the public discussion of environmental issues: Florida, Michigan, Minnesota, New Mexico, North Carolina, and Wisconsin. The Fund believes that in these states cost-effective environmental advocacy can reach a large and diverse population, that the environmental stakes for natural resources and human health are high, that key constituencies can be expanded, and that the Fund's resources can make a difference in the next ten years. The Fund plans to add other states to its "key places" in the future.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
The Beldon Fund does not offer grants for:
- International efforts, unless the requested activity includes advocacy in the United States and addresses one or more of the Fund's program areas.
- Academic or university grants, unless they apply to programs directly linked to environmental advocacy.
- School or classroom-based environmental education.
- Acquisition of land.
- Endowments.
- Capital campaigns.
- Deficit reduction.
- Acquisitions for museums or collections.
- Service delivery programs.
- Capital projects.
- Research.
- Arts and/or culture.
- Grants to individual people.
- Fellowships.
- Scholarships.
- Historic preservation
- Government agencies
- Fellowship

HOW TO APPLY:
The Fund provides both general support and project-specific grants. The Fund also makes one-year and multi-year grants. Applicants should send a brief letter of inquiry before submitting additional information. We review letters of inquiry on a continuous basis, and they may be submitted at any time during the year. After initial screening, the Fund may ask some applicants to submit additional information. A request for additional information should not be interpreted as an indication of future support.

The Beldon Fund staff reviews funding requests and makes recommendations to the Fund's Board of Trustees. The Board makes funding decisions on a quarterly basis. Not all grant requests are considered in the quarter following their submission and may be carried over to a future quarter. The Beldon Fund staff will coordinate the timing of the review process with grant applicants. The tentative dates of upcoming Board meetings can be obtained on our Web site http://www.beldon.org or by calling us at the number below.

Letters of Inquiry should include a cover sheet and a brief narrative of two to three pages. Before preparing a letter of inquiry, please review the guidelines for the Beldon Fund and Beldon's "Dedicated Fund." Please indicate whether you are applying for funds from the Beldon Fund and/or the Dedicated Fund.

The Cover Sheet should include the following:
- Name and address of the organization;
- Name of executive director and contact person(s), telephone and fax numbers, and where available, e-mail and web addresses;
- One paragraph summarizing the organization's mission;
- One paragraph summarizing the purpose of the request;
- The relationship of the request to the organization's mission;
- Dollar total of organizational annual budget and fiscal year;
- Dollar total of project budget (if other than general support);
- Dollar amount being requested;
- Dollar total committed or requested from other funding sources and the names of those sources;
- Time frame for conducting this work and dates for which grant funds would be needed (beginning and ending dates);
- Evidence of tax exempt status as a public charity under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, and not a private foundation under section 509(a) of the Code.

The Narrative should discuss the following:
- The purpose of the request;
- The problem or need being addressed;
- The population or community served by your program or organization and how it is involved in the design and implementation of your work;
- How the problem or need will be addressed;
- The relationship of the funding request to the mission and guidelines of the Beldon Fund and/or Dedicated Fund.

Financial Information
- If available, provide a one-page budget showing all funding sources (received, requested and expected), and all expenses for the organization or project to be funded.

The Beldon Fund will also accept the Common Grant Application forms developed by the National Network of Grantmakers. Please note that examples of past work, articles, reports, videos or other material should not be submitted with a letter of inquiry.

Letters of inquiry should be addressed to:

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The F. R. Bigelow Foundation will consider grant applications from nonprofit corporations and public entities. Primary areas of interest are education, human services, humanities, the arts, and community development.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Adult education, literacy and basic skills; Child development, Economic development; Economically disadvantaged; early childhood education, reading, elementary school and education, higher education, secondary school and education; Health care and health organizations; Minorities. Types of support: Building and renovation, Capital campaigns, Consulting services, Curriculum development, Emergency funds, Equipment, Matching funds, Program development, Program-related investments and loans, Seed money.

The primary geographical grantmaking area of the Foundation is defined as "the greater Saint Paul metropolitan area," which includes Ramsey, Washington and Dakota counties. The Foundation has a primary interest in organizations located in and serving Saint Paul. The Foundation rarely will make grants to programs located in other parts of the metropolitan area that duplicate those in Saint Paul.

The Foundation will consider grant applications for:
- Capital projects, program expansion, or special projects of a time-limited nature.
- Start-up costs for promising new programs that demonstrate sound management and clear goals relevant to community needs.
- Support for established agencies which have temporary or transitional needs.
- Multi-year funding.
- Funds to match contributions received from other sources or to provide a challenge to help raise new contributions.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving primarily in the greater metropolitan St. Paul, Minnesota area.
The Foundation will not consider grant application for:
- Annual operating expenses.
- Sectarian religious programs.
- Grants to individuals.
- Medical research.
- Ongoing, open-ended needs.

HOW TO APPLY:
Applicants are encouraged to request the Foundation's Application Form, Narrative Guidelines, and Evaluation Plan Summary Form prior to submission by calling (651) 221-5463 or by e-mail at inbox@frbigelow.org. The applicant may wish to submit a letter of inquiry describing the proposal project prior to preparation of a full proposal, to see if the project fits the guidelines and interests of the Foundation. Such a letter should address the information included in the Narrative Guidelines; however, it should be only two or three pages in length and less detailed than a full proposal.

Letter of inquiry and full proposals must be in writing and should be addressed to:
Paul A. Verret, Secretary
F. R. Bigelow Foundation
600 Norwest Center
55 East Fifth Street
Saint Paul, Minnesota 55101-1797
Proposals will not be returned to the applicant. Please submit only one copy. Do not send applications in binders or folders, or include videotapes or audiotapes. Acceptance for review by the Foundation of either a letter of inquiry or a full proposal does not assure that a grant will be awarded.

The F. R. Bigelow Foundation's grantmaking meetings are in April, August and November. Generally, full proposals must be received approximately three and a half months prior to a meeting date. Applications that are not adequately reviewed in time for one grantmaking meeting are carried forward to the next one. Direct questions regarding grant applications to the Foundation at 651-224-5463, or e-mail inbox@frbigelow.org.

The information listed below must be provided in the proposal narrative:

- Description of Applicant Organization
  - Provide a brief history of the applicant organization, plus a description of the general purpose or mission of the organization, its objectives, and the scope of its operations, including primary programs or services, primary service populations, and location of service activities.

- Proposed Program Design and Evaluation Plan
  - Describe (1) the objectives or intended outcomes of the project; i.e., the changes in people or institutions that are expected to occur as a result of the activities, (2) the activities or set of actions that will be implemented to achieve these objectives or intended outcomes, the information that will be provided in the final report to demonstrate achievement of the outcomes and activities, and (4) the methods that will be used to gather the information. In addition to the narrative description, summarize this information on the enclosed Evaluation Plan Summary Form.

- Requests for capital or endowment purposes need to address only (1), (2) and (3) and need not complete an Evaluation Plan Summary Form.

- Staff Qualifications
  - Describe the qualifications and experiences of the principal staff members of the project in relation to its purposes and objectives, their probable availability for the duration of the project, and whether or not they can be replaced in the event they resign or are otherwise not available.

- Detailed Budget
  - Present a reasonably detailed project budget, including a summary of the project's projected revenue sources and, if applicable, plans for continued funding of the program or service at the expiration of the grant period. A project budget is required in addition to the financial information listed on the Application Form.

- Foundation Support
  - Provide a statement as to why Foundation support is requested, a description of what other efforts have been made to obtain the required funds, and a list of approved, pending, and denied request for contributions, plus the amount received to date for this purpose.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
- Robert L. Bullard, Chairman; Wendy H. Rubin, Vice-Chairperson; Paul A. Verret, Secretary; Jon A. Theobald, Treasurer; John G. Couchman, Asst. Secretary; Jack H. Pohl, Asst. Treasurer; Carolyn J. GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
Grants are given addressing the field of arts and culture, community education, health and medicine, children and youth, community development, and the environment. To be eligible for funding, an applicant must be:

- A nonprofit agency with tax-exempt status under Section 501 (C) (3) of the Internal Revenue code and not classified as a private foundation;
- Located within and primarily serving residents of Los Angeles County; and
- Operated and organized so that it does not discriminate in the hiring of staff or the provision of services on the basis of race, religion, gender, sexual orientation, age, national origin, or disability.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Aging; AIDS; Arts; Children and youth, services; Civil rights, race and inter-group relations; Community development; Crime and violence prevention, domestic violence; Disabled; Economically disadvantaged; Education; Gays and lesbians; Health care; Homeless; Housing and shelter, development; Immigrants and refugees; Native Americans; Public affairs; Women; Youth, services. Types of support: Emergency funds, Matching funds, Program development, Program-related investments and loans, Seed money, Technical assistance.
The California Community Foundation is a community of donors, with hundreds of funds designated to meet the needs of Southern Californians, while fulfilling the donors' charitable dreams. Our mission is to encourage private giving, strengthen service providers and improve the condition for the people of Los Angeles County. (Please note: The California Community Foundation makes grants only to non-profit organizations that serve the Greater Los Angeles Region)

The California Community Foundation is committed to:

- Achieving the highest degree of openness and accessibility in grantmaking and donor relations;
- Meeting the strongest ethical standards;
- Building a strong community that reflects Los Angeles County's rich ethnic, racial and cultural diversity.

Through its funding initiative "Nurturing Neighborhoods/Building Community," the California Community Foundation addresses the essential elements to maintaining healthy and independent lives for vulnerable and disadvantaged populations in Los Angeles, particularly those who face barriers and discrimination due to language, economics, culture, or sexual orientation. The community foundation recognizes that all aspects of a person's life are linked to their community-including personal health, economic stability, living conditions, and learning opportunities. Our intention is to fund programs that can make a permanent difference in the lives of the people they serve.

Crucial to meeting the community foundation's goals is the understanding that Los Angeles County is a diverse community comprised of many cultures. The California Community Foundation is committed to creating one harmonious community, and supporting programs which will not only strengthen individuals and neighborhoods, but the relationships between them.

The primary goals of the California Community Foundation are to build self-reliance among individuals and their communities through four main strategies listed below in the description of our program areas.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving limited to the greater Los Angeles County, CA, area. No support for sectarian purposes. No grants for building funds, annual campaigns, equipment, endowment funds, debt reduction, operating budgets, scholarships, fellowships, films, conferences, dinners, and special events.

In any program area, we generally will not consider grants for the following:

- Annual campaigns
- Sponsoring conferences or special events
- Endowments
- Existing obligations, or to replenish other resources used to pay for such expenses
- Equipment, unless it is an integral part of an eligible project
- Individuals (except through the Brody and Getty arts funds)
- Sectarian purposes (i.e., programs that promote or require a religious doctrine)
- Re-granting programs that would grant our dollars to others

HOW TO APPLY:
There are a few different means by which you can receive an application form. You can call our office and request that one be mailed to you. Your application can be submitted on the form provided, or you can recreate the form on a typewriter, computer or word processor using the same spacing. You can also download a form from our website, www.calfund.org, where you'll find software that will enable you to fill out your application on your computer and then print it out for submission to us. Please use readable type (at least 10 point), and do not fax or e-mail your application. Submit one copy of your complete application with all the requested attachments. (These are listed at the bottom of page one of the application form.)

Send your completed application and attachments to the attention of our Senior Program Secretary. We accept applications year-round, and acknowledge all applications. All eligible applications are reviewed by a program officer, and recommendations are made to the Board of Governors on a quarterly basis. Notifications about grant awards are made only after the Board of Governors has reviewed staff recommendations. Please allow plenty of time for your review before your project is due to start.

While we generally do not meet with agencies before receiving an application, you are encouraged to call us for clarification about our funding priorities or your proposed program's eligibility. However, because we receive more requests that we have dollars, it is impossible to let you know about the likelihood of funding until we have reviewed your written proposal along with others in progress. We also suggest that you send your request to several other prospective funding sources, increasing the possibilities for support.

To simplify the grant process, please:
- Don't fax your application: Faxed applications will not be accepted.
- Don't attach materials other than those requested.
- Don't exceed the amount of space provided for each question.
- Don't use binders or covers; they are always removed to ease the filing process.

GENERAL INFORMATION
GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The mission of The California Wellness Foundation is to improve the health of the people of California by making grants for health promotion, wellness education and disease prevention. Guided by our mission, we pursue the following goals through our grantmaking:

- To improve the quality and accessibility of health promotion and disease prevention programs and services for a culturally diverse cross section of California's children, youth and families.

- To encourage integration of health promotion and disease prevention activities into the delivery of health and human services.
- To increase the availability of work-related health promotion activities for California workers and their families.
- To encourage the development of public policies that support health promotion and disease prevention.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Community Health, Population Health Improvement, Teenage Pregnancy Prevention, Violence Prevention, and Work and Health. Types of support: Core operating support, conferences and seminars, and program development.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving is limited to California and national organizations that provide services in California. No support for religious or sectarian organizations. No grants to individuals, annual fund drives, building campaigns, major equipment, and biomedical research.

HOW TO APPLY:
To present The California Wellness Foundation with an idea for a general grant or special project, an organization should first write a one-to-two-page letter of interest, which summarizes the proposed project, its leadership, the organization(s) involved, the region and population(s) served, the project duration and the total funds requested. No application form is needed, and formal proposals are not accepted at this preliminary stage.

Foundation staff will review letters of interest on an on-going basis and notify prospective applicants of the results normally within three to four months. Those encouraged to submit a proposal will receive further guidance at that time.

LARGEST GRANT: $200,000

SMALLEST GRANT: $250

TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $4,439,682 (1999)

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The program priorities are decided by the board of directors, which may change. Currently the priorities include:
- Arts and Culture
- Human Rights
- Preservation of Wilderness Ecosystems and Biological Diversity
- Sustainable Urban Community Development
- Renewal Policy
- Types of Projects
- Foundation-Initiated Grants

The foundation uses a portion of its resources to fund fields of interest not currently emphasized in its guidelines. These grants may grow into formal parts of the foundation’s program in the future or they may be single, one-time grants. Because these grants are initiated by members of the board of directors or by staff, unsolicited proposals for programs outside of the foundation’s current guidelines are discouraged.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
- Agriculture; Civil liberties, advocacy; Civil liberties, right to die; Civil rights, race and inter-group relations; Community development; Environment; Media, film and video. Types of support: General and operating support, Program development, Publication, Research, Seed money.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving primarily in California with an emphasis on the San Francisco Bay Area. No support for private foundations, institutions supported by federated campaigns or heavily subsidized by government funds, or projects in medicine or religion. No grants to individuals, for scholarships, fellowships, ongoing programs, and operating budgets of established agencies.

HOW TO APPLY:
The foundation does not accept proposals sent by facsimile. Proposals submitted to the foundation should be two-sided and produced on recycled paper. The foundation considers proposals only from organizations certified by the Internal Revenue Service as public charities.

Applicants are encouraged to approach the foundation with a very specific proposal for a defined purpose. The duration of the project may be up to five years on a single application.

- Complete the application form included with these guidelines. Instructions for filling out this form are on the reverse of the form.
- Send a letter of inquiry with the application form.
  The letter of inquiry should be no longer than four pages and should include the following:
  - A description of the organization
  - The purpose for which funds are being requested
  - The funding amount requested
  - A project budget and list of other sources of support
  - The plan of action including a description of cooperating agencies if any
  - The intended results including measurable objectives if applicable.
- Submission of the application form and letter of inquiry are sufficient for meeting the application deadline. A full proposal will be requested if the foundation selects the application for further consideration.

If foundation staff request a full proposal, it must include the following items:
A proposal narrative:
- describing the need for the program or the problem to be addressed
- the plan of action including the theoretical base or rationale for this approach
- the impact and significance of the project, including its potential relevance beyond its immediate scope
- the qualifications of the organization and staff to implement the program successfully
- the relationship of this program to other similar programs or agencies
- how the program will be evaluated and plans for the future of the program including dissemination of results.

Please be specific regarding how the organization or project is addressing the issue or problem; the specific activities to be undertaken to achieve the goals; and the potential barriers to achieving the stated goals.

- Financial information including the following required items:
  - a line-item budget identifying the project's income and expenses for its fiscal year(s)
  - a statement of actual revenue and expenses for the last two years for the organization as a whole and for the project (include an audited statement if available)
  - a list of other contributions and sources of support for the project including any applications currently being considered.

- Organizational information, including the following:
  - a history of the organization, including a description of current activities and an annual report, if available
  - a roster of members of the board of directors, including their affiliations or occupations
  - a copy of the letter of tax exemption from the Internal Revenue Service
  - copies of relevant articles or other publicity about the program or organization.

All grantees must provide a report detailing the results of their project. These reports must address the goals and projected accomplishments included in the original proposal and an accounting of how grant funds were spent.

AVERAGE GRANT: $20,000 to $30,000
LARGEST GRANT: $400,000
TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $18,000,000
GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
Most support is for projects in New Jersey for elementary and secondary education, performing and visual arts and other cultural activities, projects in population, the environment, and energy. There is also an interest in national level projects that will have significant advances in elementary and secondary education, conservation, energy use, and environmental protection. Also supports projects in welfare of animals on a national and local level that explore the human and animal bond, promote humane education, and address issues of cruelty, pet overpopulation, the protection of wildlife, and animal exploitation in laboratories.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Animal welfare; Arts; Crime and violence prevention, domestic violence; Education, elementary school and education, secondary school and education; Environment, energy; natural resources; Humanities; Language and linguistics; Leadership development; Literature; Media and communications; Museums; Performing arts, dance, music, theater; Population studies; Reproductive health, family planning; Visual arts. Types of support: Conferences and seminars, Continuing support, Curriculum development, Employee matching gifts, General and operating support, Matching and challenge support, Program development, Publication, Research, Seed money.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
For effective focus of the Foundation's energies, it is necessary to exclude from consideration such major fields as higher education, health, and religion. Similarly, support for capital programs, equipment purchases, indirect costs, endowment funds, and deficit reduction are outside the guidelines.

Except through Foundation-based initiatives, we do not support scholarship funds or make direct awards to individuals. Also, we do not consider grants to conduit organizations. Because both Federal law and the Foundation's charter prohibit funding of any efforts to influence legislation, proposals should not request funding for lobbying efforts.

HOW TO APPLY:
A one-page letter of inquiry by the applicant is encouraged to determine if a project falls within our guidelines. We look for grant requests that are written clearly and concisely. Proposals should include a one-page summary, followed by a fuller description no longer than six pages. Please use 12-point type or larger. The proposal should describe the project and the need for it; the qualifications and past accomplishments of the sponsoring organization; how the project is to proceed and who is to carry it out; a time frame and budget; the benefit to be gained and for whom; and the plans for evaluating and funding the project in the future.

Grant proposals must be submitted on the letterhead of the sponsoring organization, which must be a 501(C )3 organization under the Internal Revenue code. We require: a recent audited financial statement (if feasible); the names and occupations of trustees of the organization; and a copy of the Internal Revenue Service determination letter confirming the organization's 501(C )3 status if applicable. We accept the New York Area Common Application form.

We ask that every consideration be given to presenting the proposal and supporting materials in an environmentally sensitive manner. Please use two-sided copying when possible, and do not use binders or plastic packaging. One copy of the proposal will suffice.

Proposals should be submitted to the Foundation's executive director and post-marked no later than the deadlines listed to allow time for staff review. We do not accept faxed or E-mailed proposals, and prefer that express mail carriers not be used. We also prefer that proposals not be hand delivered.

Please note: The Trustees and the staff have reviewed the Foundation's annual calendar and made changes to go into effect in the year 2000. The dates reflect the transition to the new schedule.

Proposal limited to 6 pages plus attachments specified (two-sided copying preferred). Binders not accepted; accepts the NYRAG Common Application Form.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving mainly in Colorado. No support for organizations that distribute funds to other grantees, or for camps or seasonal facilities. No grants to individuals, or for annual campaigns, travel, media projects, conferences, deficit financing, endowment funds, research, matching gifts, seed money, or publications.

The Foundation does not make grants under the following conditions:
- Grants to another foundation or organization which distributes money to recipients of its own selection.
- Grants to organizations that practice discrimination of any kind.
- Grants to cover deficits, debt elimination or for endowment.
- Grants for the making of films or other media projects.
- Grants for primary or secondary education (K-12). El Pomar will consider, on a limited basis, capital requests from non-publicly funded secondary schools.
- Grants for research or studies.
- Grants to organizations which do not have fiscal responsibility for the proposed project.
- Grants to nonprofit organizations which do not have an active 501(c)(3) nonprofit determination letter from the Internal Revenue Service.
- Grants to individuals.
- Grants for travel, conferences, conventions, group meetings or seminars.
- Grants for camps, camp programs or other seasonal activities.
- Grants to religious organizations for support of religious programs.
- Grants intended to influence legislation or support candidates for political office.

HOW TO APPLY:
A new application should not request re-instatement of a prior request. A new application from an organization which has had a grant request declined will not be considered for 12 months following the grant denial letter. A new application from an organization which has had a grant request funded will not be considered for 36 months from the date of the grant award letter or one year from the date of the last payment on the grant, whichever is later.

The Foundation has no formal grant application forms. Please submit one original of the grant application including the following information:

- Name and address of tax exempt organization.
- A brief history of the organization, its mission, principal programs and accomplishments.
- A concise statement of the purpose of the request and the amount requested. Outline the need for the project, the specific solutions to be reached, the expected contributions to the population served and the criteria for measuring the success of the projects.
- An organizational budget for the current year, and a documental budget of the project for the proposed term of the grant. Please include the total amount to be raised and a list of expected sources of funds. If the request is for a program, indicate how the organization plans to fund the program once El Pomar Foundation funding ceases.
- A statement of whether aid has been sought during the preceding three years from other foundations and, if so, the names of the foundations and the amount received from each, if any.

Applicants should furnish:
- Relationship and capacity of person signing application.
- A list of members of the governing body.
- A statement that notes the grant purpose has been approved by the applicant's governing body.
- Endorsement of outside authorities, and copies of approvals of regulatory agencies, if required.
- A photocopy of current IRS determination letter showing tax exempt status under Section 501 (C)
The National Indian Grant Directory

(3) and public charity status under Section 509(a) of the Internal Revenue Code.

- The organization's three most recent years of audited financial statements, and latest IRS Form 990.

- Applicants also should furnish up to three pictures (photographs, architectural renderings, images from an existing publication, etc.) that portray the specific project or general operations of the organization. Pictures will be used in the presentation to the Board of Trustees. Applicants should not incur any costs related to this request. El Pomar Foundation will retain the photographs unless otherwise requested by the organization.

- The Foundation requires the organization to report expended grant funds and to return to the Foundation any excess not used for the grant. A report of the expenditure of funds must be made annually until the entire grant has been used.

- If a grant is made, do not use plaques or memorials relating to El Pomar Foundation without the Foundation's approval. We request that you not use the names of Foundation Officers and Trustees in any public statements.

- Proposals may be submitted at any time. Applications are acted upon within 90 days of receipt.

Types of support: Capital campaigns, Continuing support, Program development, Seed money.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
The Fund does not accept applications for research, grants or scholarships to individuals, conferences, documentary films, fundraisers, deficit budgets or endowment campaigns. The Fund does not accept unsolicited proposals for support of arts organizations or institutions of primary, secondary or higher education. The Fund does not accept applications for the Goldman Environmental Prize.

The Fund is primarily interested in organizations and projects that have an impact on the City of San Francisco and local Bay Area communities. Other interests include domestic organizations providing support to Israel and national and international projects that address environmental and population issues.

HOW TO APPLY:
Please review the Funds' current priorities, limitations and application guidelines carefully. To apply for a grant, first submit a letter of inquiry. Because of the large volume of requests for support the Goldman Fund receives, we can only invite a small number of organizations to submit full grant proposals. Applications for support are accepted on an ongoing basis; there are no deadlines for submission. We prefer that submissions be double sided and/or printed on recycled paper. Please do not use plastic folders or other unnecessary presentation materials. Each organization may submit only one application per year for consideration. We do not accept faxed or electronically transferred submissions.

Letters of Inquiry
- A one-paragraph executive summary describing the project for which the organization is seeking funding, including a short descriptive project title and the total project budget. Submissions will not be accepted without this executive summary paragraph.
- A brief description of the project.
- The name, title, address and telephone number of the primary contact person.
- Total amount requested from the Goldman Fund.

Please also attach the following:
- A list of other sources of secured and potential funding for the project, including in-kind support.
- A one-page itemized project budget.

If the Fund is interested in receiving a full proposal, you will be contacted and asked to submit the following additional information:

- A detailed description of the project including the needs it addresses, its objectives, relevance, strategies and timelines, collaboration with other agencies, evaluation criteria, geographic scope, duration and any other relevant information.
- The organization's current annual budget, including revenues and expenses.
- Names and qualifications of project staff.
- A list of recent grants the organization has received, indicating foundation name and amount granted.
- A list of the organization's board of directors, including each member's primary organizational affiliations.
- Names and telephone numbers of three references who are familiar with the organization's work.
- A brief description and history of the organization, including its recent accomplishments and qualifications to undertake the proposed project.
- Any other supporting materials, such as letters of support, news clippings or brochures, that would be helpful in evaluating the proposal.
- A copy of the organization's IRS tax-exemption letter.

In researching your proposal, staff might make telephone inquiries and arrange meetings or site visits to better understand the nature of the request. Meetings of the Board of Directors, at which staff recommendations are reviewed, take place four times per year.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:

Overview of our program goals: Within the Foundation's mission of improving the health and health care of all Americans, the vast majority of our grant-making is for projects that fit into our three goal areas. These goals are:

- to assure that all Americans have access to basic health care at reasonable cost;
- to improve care and support for people with chronic health conditions; and
- to promote health and prevent disease by reducing the harm caused by substance abuses-alcohol, and illicit drugs.

Our grantmaking strategies: Within our three goals, we find projects of many types, including:

- Demonstrations
- Gathering and monitoring health-related statistics
- Training and fellowship programs
- Policy analysis
- Health services research
- Technical assistance
- Public education
- Communications
- Evaluation

Grants: RWJF awards grants in two ways:

- For our competitive national programs, we issue a call for proposals or other invitational announcement. The calls for proposals describe the problem to be addressed, what proposals should include, who is eligible to apply, how the selection process will work, and how to apply.
- We also fund unsolicited projects—good ideas that come to us from the field. Grants for these projects are made throughout the year. There are no specific application forms or deadlines (see "How to apply" section).

In general, the Foundation gives preference to applicants that are public agencies or are tax-exempt under Section 501 (C)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Grantmaking Priorities

Health:

Tobacco: reducing the use of tobacco, in particular in fostering prevention of tobacco use initiation by youth and cessation of the use of tobacco by those who are addicted.

Alcohol and Illegal Drugs: preventing and treating substance abuse with a special emphasis on preventing youth initiation.

Health and Behavior: increasing the prevalence of physical activity and other health promoting behaviors and reducing the prevalence of health damaging behaviors.

Community Health: understanding, characterizing, and addressing the determinants of health that arise from personal and community social circumstances.

Population-Based Health Sciences: developing and refining tools such as epidemiology, risk assessment, cost effectiveness analysis, social marketing, public health informatics and surveillance systems, and public health assessment for application in population-wide programs to improve health.

Health Care:
Insurance coverage: understanding the causes and consequences of being uninsured and addressing coverage issues and options, including coverage for children, the working uninsured, and individuals with low income.

Safety net: understanding how the safety net works in different communities and testing new approaches, with a special focus on the uninsured.

Information/tracking: understanding and communicating the impact of health system change on individuals and communities.

Clinical care management: improving clinical care management for individuals with chronic illness.

Supportive services: increasing capacity to deliver supportive services for people with chronic disabling conditions.

End-of-life care: increasing the number of people who receive high-quality palliative care at the end of life.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Aging; Child development; Children and youth, services; Dental care; Disabled; Family services; Health care and Health organizations; Homeless; Hospitals (general); Medical school and education; Mental health and crisis services; Minorities; Native Americans; Nursing care; Substance abuse, services; Youth, services. Types of support: Matching funds, Program development, Program-related investments and loans, Research, Seed money.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Types of projects we do not fund: Ongoing general operating expenses or existing deficits; Endowment or capital costs; Basic biomedical research; Research on drug therapies or devices; International programs and institutions; Direct support of individuals; Lobbying of any kind.

In addition, we rarely make grants for: 1) conferences or symposia unless they are clearly related to the Foundation's goals or: 2) publications or media projects, except those that grow out of one of our grant programs.

HOW TO APPLY:
If you want to apply for funding from The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation the first step is to determine whether your proposal would fit under one of our current competitive national programs. Also, strategic objectives within each of our goals areas are refined and changed from time to time. Our Web site is the most up-to-date information source on these and other aspects of our grantmaking; it includes answers to frequently asked questions (FAQs) about applying for a grant. To find out if there are new programs in your area of interest, visit our Web site and consult our quarterly newsletter, Advances, and our annual report.

To apply to one of our competitive national programs, consult the Foundation's call for proposals (CFP) for that program. Details of the application process, eligibility and selection criteria, and timelines are different for each program and are detailed in the CFP. CFP are first available on the Foundation's Web site.

If your project does not fit under one of our competitive programs, rest assured that we welcome unsolicited proposals that address our goals and priorities. To apply, we ask that you submit a preliminary letter of inquiry, not a fully developed proposal. Once received, your letter will be examined to determine whether the proposed project falls sufficiently within our program guidelines and current priorities that it can be considered. If not, you will be notified promptly.

First-stage Review: Letter of Inquiry
Please follow these instructions carefully. The letter of inquiry should be on your institution's letterhead, should not exceed five typed pages, and should be organized as follows:

Executive summary
Background-a brief description of the problem you propose to address, including evidence of its importance
Project description
- state the project's principal objectives and expected outcomes
- describe the components of the proposed intervention or-for research projects-the methodology provide a timetable
- describe how the project's results will be disseminated
- discuss the project's risks and limitations
- estimate the project's costs, or attach a budget as an appendix
- discuss the qualifications of the institution and the principal personnel to implement the project
- other important issues not covered above

Second-stage Review: Application

If your letter of inquiry is accepted, you will be invited to submit a complete application. A packet of forms and instructions will be sent to you to help you in this process. You will be asked for additional proposal information, a detailed budget and budget narrative, and supporting documentation. The program officer assigned to your proposal will become thoroughly familiar with your proposal and conduct a preliminary review of your completed application, often with the help of other members of the program staff and sometimes with outside consultants. Typically, we have several hundred proposals under review at any one time, so this process of information gathering and preliminary review generally lasts three to four months, but if we need additional information, it may take longer. Feel free to contact your program officer at any point to check on your project's status. During the preliminary review process if a decision is made not to fund your proposal, you will be promptly notified.

Third-stage Review: Decision Process

Once your proposal has been reviewed by your program officer, it will be considered by one or more internal decision making groups. These groups help assure that our total portfolio of grants is both high-quality and strategic with respect to our goals. This phase of the process may take several weeks, depending on the complexity of any questions that are raised. Finally, major projects will be reviewed by our Trustees at one of their quarterly meetings. Again, if we decide at any of these steps that the Foundation cannot support your project, you will be notified. If your proposal is approved, you will receive a formal written notification.

Each year the Foundation funds about one in 20 of the unsolicited proposals submitted to us. Even within our goal areas, many excellent projects are not funded simply because of the volume of applications. For this same reason, we do not provide individual critiques of proposals we turn down. Please understand that the rejection of a particular proposal is not a rejection of your, the proposed. Indeed, many current grantees have had earlier proposals turned down.

Our review of the proposal will start with these key questions:
- Does this proposal address one (or more) of our goals?
- Does it fit our current grantmaking priorities?
- It is new or innovative?
- Would other institutions, public or private, be more appropriate sources of support?
- How would this project make a difference?

The projects funded are the ones that best answer these questions.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
"The Joyce Foundation supports efforts to protect the natural environment of the Great Lakes region and to reduce poverty and violence in the region, and to ensure that its people have access to good schools, decent jobs, and a diverse and thriving culture. We are especially interested in improving public policies, because public systems such as education and welfare directly affect the lives of so many people, and because public policies help shape private sector jobs, the environment, and the health of our communities. To ensure that public policies truly reflect public rather than private interests, we support efforts to reform the system of financing election campaigns."

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The foundation has four major programs: Community Initiatives, Journalism, Education, and Arts and Culture. The Community Initiatives Program funds literacy, community development, homelessness, citizenship, and children/social welfare. The Journalism Program gives nationally and focuses on defense of First Amendment rights and supports a free press worldwide. The Education and Arts and Culture programs award grants nationally and locally. Local grants in education and arts and culture are restricted to the 26 communities of Knight Foundation interest.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Foundation purpose: Makes national grants in journalism, education and arts and culture. Its fourth program, community initiatives, is concentrated in 26 communities where the Knight brothers published newspapers, but the Foundation is wholly separate from and independent of those newspapers.

Type: Private Non-Operating Foundation

PURPOSE OF GRANTS:
Community development; Crime and violence prevention; delinquency prevention; Economically disadvantaged; adult education and literacy, reading, elementary school and education, higher education; Family services; Historic preservation and historical societies; Homeless, human services; Media, Museums of: art, children's, history, natural history, science and technology; Performing arts, ballet, dance, opera, orchestra (symphony); Public affairs, citizen participation; Youth, services. Types of support: General, disaster, multiyear and continuing support, project grants, endowment, challenge grants, capital and building, seed or startup.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Knight Foundation trustees prefer not to fund ongoing requests for general operating support; annual fund-raising campaigns or fund-raising dinners; operating deficits; charities operated by service clubs; organizations that in turn make grants to others (with the exception of community foundations); activities that are normally the responsibility of government; (The Foundation will, in selective cases, join with units of government in supporting special projects); medical research; organizations or projects whose mission is to prevent, eradicate and/or alleviate the effects of a specific disease; requests from hospitals (unless they are for community wide capital campaigns with a stated goal and beginning and ending dates); activities to propagate a religious faith or restricted to one religion or denomination; support of political candidates; memorials; production costs of films, videos or television programs; purchase of commercial television or radio time; the writing or publication of books; international programs and organizations, except U.S.-based organizations supporting a free press around the world; a second request for a capital campaign for which the Foundation previously approved a grant; conferences; group travel; honoraria for distinguished guests.

HOW TO APPLY:
Guidelines are available upon request. Only one request from an organization is considered during a twelve month period. Prefers not to consider applications from any institution or organization receiving a multi-year grant until all payments of that grant have been made; all proposals must have endorsement of president of organization or institution requesting grant. A proposal cover sheet must be completed and submitted with proposal. Grants for the national Education Program are primarily initiated by the foundation. Application form required.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY FOR GRANTMAKING:
MCF's dual mission to enhance community vitality and endowed philanthropy. We are committed to using the resources entrusted to us for funding the highest quality projects throughout Montana. We also aim to be a catalyst, providing a needed injection of funds to help nonprofit organizations explore or undertake new work or do more effectively what they are already doing.

MCF seeks projects that have both a tangible impact on a community and strengthen its capacity to address the future.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:

(a) General Grants: Economic Development; Arts and Culture; Basic Human Needs; Education, Natural Resources and Conservation. Applications from focus areas other than the primary focus area per cycle will be accepted, provided the applicant provide information as to why it needs consideration at that time.

(b) Leadership Development Grants: These grants are awarded to 501 (c) (3) organizations, to support the development of current or emerging leaders in organizations with limited resources for professional training and development. Grants will be offered on a matching basis, with funds from MCF used to pay for no more than one-third of the development opportunity.

(c) Fund for Tolerance Grants: These grants support community efforts to raise awareness and promote understanding and respect for people who face discrimination because of factors including race, color, creed, sex, religion, age, disability, sexual orientation, marital status, class or national origin, and to heal the damage caused by this discrimination. MCF invites projects that engage people in dialogue, discussion, relationship-building and interaction with one another and will support education projects, mediation and conflict resolution efforts, celebrations and Intervention efforts to address hate crimes, diffuse volatile situations and respond to specific incidents.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Gives in Montana. No support for religious purposes. Generally no grants for annual or capital campaigns, endowment funds, debt retirement, and lobbying.

HOW TO APPLY:
Contact foundation by phone, mail or the Internet, to get the complete Grant Application guidelines, as there is information contained in them for how to apply for grants, who would be eligible and would not be, what kind of projects are funded, and so on. The foundation has very specific grant application procedures that must be followed for any application to be considered for review.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
"The primary goal is to empower those individuals whose basic rights to justice and opportunity are systematically ignored or denied. Community organizing has been identified as a highly effective process through which such people may learn to take control of their lives and change those conditions which adversely affect them. The fund looks for grassroots, community-based organizations whose members are committed to maintaining the energy of the group; whose leadership is developed from within; which are capable of determining solutions to the major problems facing their community; and, finally, which can formulate and implement effective strategic plans. The fund recognizes that the problem faced will vary from group to group and that the process of defining and implementing solutions is community controlled and truly empowering to each member of the group."

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The Nord Family Foundation is a successor to a charitable trust established in 1952 by the entrepreneur and industrialist W.G. Nord. Mr. Nord and his family believed that it was both responsible and prudent for a business to invest in the community it served and formed a private foundation to be consistent in that investment even as the business reflected the cyclical nature of its capital-goods output. The U.S. Automatic (and later Norson) Foundation contributed more than $19 million to a wide variety of charitable causes between 1953 and 1988, primarily in Lorain County, Ohio. Walter Nord's widow left the bulk of her estate to the Foundation, which con-

LARGEST GRANT: $50,000

TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $21,000,000

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
Proposals to the Oregon Community Foundation are prioritized for funding based on their fit with a set of basic guiding principles and four specific funding objectives.

Guiding Principles:
· The Oregon Community Foundation's Discretionary Grant Program is an expression of the Foundation's commitment to enhance the livability of the state of Oregon.
· We want to safeguard the future by giving highest priority to investments that attempt to resolve problems at their source rather than addressing them as they develop good.
· We want to build an inclusive spirit of community encompassing all of Oregon's population groups and promote a sense of individual responsibility for the common good.

We believe that the most creative solutions arise from gatherings of private citizens who come together to work in partnership addressing their common needs and aspirations.

We believe Oregon is a very special place and, with care and nurturing, will continue to be so for many generations to come.

OCF has four primary objectives it aims to attain through the Discretionary Grant Program.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
To strengthen families and foster the self-sufficiency of Oregonians (This objective receives 40 to 50% of grants). Of particular interest:
- educating and supporting parents and others who care for children and the elderly
- providing youth with experiences that build character and judgment through recreation and mentoring
- involving communities in assisting people in crisis
- helping individuals and families achieve long-term self-sufficiency

To enhance the educational experience of Oregonians (This objective receives 15 to 20% of grants.) Of particular interest:
- helping young children enter school ready to learn
- involving parents and communities with schools in the educational process
- linking learning and community service activities for students

To increase cultural opportunities for Oregonians (This objective receives 10 to 20% of grants.) Of particular interest: reaching under-served audiences
- strengthening arts organizations to achieve self-sufficiency
- showcasing Oregon's history and culture

To preserve and improve Oregon's livability through citizen involvement (This objective receives 10 to 15% of grants) Of particular interest:
- building community spirit and consensus about key issues facing Oregonians
- training and involving volunteers and leaders to solve problems
- helping residents improve their local communities and the state

Proposals for projects to meet these objectives will have an increased chance of success if they:
- involve a broad cross-section of community members in planning and supporting the project
- link several organizations in creative partnerships
- support one or more of the Oregon Benchmarks (available through the Oregon Progress Board, 775 Summer Street NE, Salem, OR 97310)
- stimulate new sources of support from the private funding sources and volunteers
- demonstrate a timely impact on an organization's development and the community it serves
- help an organization to address both current and future needs
- originate outside the government sector and do not require OCF to be the sole funder
- develop our sense of Oregon as a special place

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
The following activities are not funded except upon the advice of donors and when the board of directors determines that an important community purpose will be served:
- sponsorship of one-time events or performances
- ongoing operating support
- proposals for projects in individual schools
- subsides to allow individuals to participate in conferences, classes, training or travel
- capital projects that will not noticeably change or enhance the community or services offered
- replacement of government funding
- influencing legislation
- religious activities

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The mission of the Jay and Rose Phillips Family Foundation is to honor the legacy of its founders, Jay and Rose Phillips, by continuing the family tradition of sharing resources for the public good, while exercising leadership and flexibility in responding to emerging community needs. Consistent with the legacy of grantmaking created by Jay and Rose Phillips, the Foundation makes grants selectively in the following areas:
- Human Services
- Health
- Education
- Programs for people with disabilities
- Programs to combat discrimination

During times of severe economic hardship and financial distress, the Foundation's primary concern is in providing support for projects that address unmet human and social needs.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Within its general areas of interest, the Foundation gives special attention to proposals that reflect the following values espoused by Jay and Rose Phillips.
- Self-sufficiency should be the goal of all efforts to assist people;
- Families should be strengthened as nurturing and financially stable environments for children;
- The quality of health care should be continually improved for the benefit of all people;
- Quality education as the key to individual success should be promoted;
- People with disabilities and the elderly should be able to live as independently as possible;
- Good relations among people of all races and religions should be fostered and discrimination should be actively opposed;
- The arts should be supported primarily as a vehicle to address social issues.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Gives mainly in the metropolitan Twin Cities area of Minnesota. No application from an organization previously funded by the Foundation will be reviewed until a full report on the previous grant has been received. The Foundation does not make grants:
- In support of individuals
- Endowment campaigns
- Religious organizations
- For political campaigns
- For lobbying efforts to influence legislation

HOW TO APPLY:
- Introduction
  - Purpose and amount of request.
  - Type of request (special program or project, capital, technical assistance, general operating support, etc.)
- Request
  - Brief description of your organization, including the date founded, history, mission, and current and planned program(s).
  - Description of the objectives and activities for which funds are requested.
  - Evidence of need for your organization or project.
  - Explanation of how your request addresses the Foundation’s guidelines and special concerns.
  - Description of the population served including: geographical area(s) served; number of persons served (by individual program if available); ages, income level(s), and special needs of individuals served.
  - Evidence of your capacity to manage the program or project for which funds are requested, including the qualifications and experience of the administrative staff responsible for management of your organization and project, if applicable.
- Evaluation
  - Description of the expected outcomes of your program or project, in terms of real changes in the lives of your constituents.
  - Description of how you will know that you have achieved these outcomes, i.e. the outcome indicators you have identified and the methods you will use to measure your progress.
- Fundraising
  - Description of your short and longer-range fundraising strategies.
  - Statement of the percentage of your annual operating budget (and project budget, if applicable) which is expended on direct fundraising costs.
  - Statement of the percentage of your annual operating budget which is expended on lobbying activities, if applicable.
- Signatures
  - Your application must be signed by your executive director and your board chair or his/her designee before it can be considered.
- List of Appendices (to be submitted with ALL applications)
  - Current Internal Revenue Service letter which states that your organization is tax-exempt under Section 501(c)(3). If your original letter was issued before 1969, include a recent confirmation letter from the IRS.
  - A copy of your most recent Annual Report.
  - A copy of your most recent Form 990 Income Tax Return including Schedule A (if applicable).
  - A copy of your most recent audited financial statement. If you do not have an audit, submit a board-approved unaudited year-end financial statement for the most recent year, showing expenditures and sources of revenue received, and your current year-to-date financial statement.
  - Current annual operating budget for your organization.
  - List of current donors and list of proposals pending with other funding sources.
  - If you are requesting funding for a special or capital project, submit the following:
    - Board-approved project budget, including project ed income and expenses;
- Total amount and sources of funds received or committed;
- List of proposals pending with other funding sources.
- Organizational chart and number of full-time equivalent staff positions.
- List of current Board members and officers.
- Final report on last grant, if applicable.

SAMPLE NATIVE AMERICAN GRANTS:
$19,726 to Narragansett Indian Tribe, to purchase kitchen equipment for new Community Center, 1995

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
Grantmaking is made from three areas: (1) international science-based development, focusing on the developing world and global environment, (2) the arts and humanities, and (3) equal opportunity/school reform. Also supports agriculture, health and population sciences, and limited support for special African programs. The foundation also supports the Bellagio Study and Conference Center in northern Italy for conferences of international scope and for residencies for artists and scholars.

Currently the Foundation is retooling its program strategies and guidelines around four general programmatic themes—food, work, health, and creativity—with a cross-cutting global perspective. Detailed information on the Foundation’s new programs with clear guidance for applicants will be available in Fall 1999. Potential applicants may contact us again at that time for these updated guidelines.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Types of support: Conferences and seminars, Continuing support, Curriculum development, Employee matching gifts, Fellowships, Grants to individuals, Program development, Program-related investments and loans, Publication, Research, Seed money, Technical assistance.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:

In November 1998, the Foundation approved a new strategic plan for grantmaking which directs the Foundation to pay special attention to helping achieve the following outcomes over the next decade:

- An anti-racist community.
- Economic development for all segments of the East Metro area.
- Strong families that provide healthy beginnings for children and youth.
- Quality education for all.

Proposals which address one or more of these outcomes are strongly encouraged. Proposals which address other community needs will also be considered.

The Foundation will consider grant applications for:

- Start-up costs for promising new programs that demonstrate sound management and clear goals relevant to community needs.
- Support for established agencies which have temporary or transitional needs.
- Multi-year funding.
- Funds to match contributions received from other sources or to provide a challenge to help raise new contributions.
- Capital projects program expansion or special projects of a time-limited nature.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:

Arts; Children and youth, services; Community development, neighborhood development; Education, reading, adult education and literacy; Health care; Health organizations; Human services; Humanities; Minorities; Youth, services. Types of support: Building and renovation, Capital campaigns, Consulting services, Curriculum development, Emergency funds, Equipment, Grants to individuals, Matching funds, Program development, Research, Seed money, Technical assistance.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:

Giving limited to Ramsey, Washington, and Dakota counties in the metropolitan St. Paul, Minnesota area. No support for land acquisition, generally no continuing support; no student loans.

The Foundation will not consider grant applications for:

- Annual operating expenses.
- Sectarian religious programs.
- Agency endowment funds.
- Grants to individuals.
- Capital projects located outside the East Metro area.
- Programs not serving the residents of the East Metro area.

HOW TO APPLY:

Few grants are made to individuals; rather, many are given to 501(c)(3) or educational organizations on behalf of individuals from funds designated for specific purposes. No general scholarships available.

Applicants are encouraged to request the Foundation’s Application Form, Narrative Guidelines, and Evaluation Plan Summary Form prior to submission by calling: (651) 224-5463 or by e-mail at in box@tspf.org.

This information is also available as a downloadable file from the Foundation’s website at tspf.org. The applicant may wish to submit a letter of inquiry describing the proposed project before preparing a full proposal, to see if the project fits the guidelines and interests of the Foundation. Such a letter should address the information included in the Narrative Guidelines; however, it should be only two to three pages in length and less detailed than a full proposal.

Letter of inquiry and full proposals must be in writing and should be addressed to:

Paul A. Verret, President
The Saint Paul Foundation
55 East Fifth Street
600 Norwest Center
Saint Paul, MN 55101-1797

Proposals will not be returned to the applicant. Please submit only one copy. Do not send applications in binders or folders, or include videotapes or audiotapes. Acceptance for review by the Foundation of either a letter of inquiry or a full proposal does not assure that a grant will be awarded.

The Saint Paul Foundation’s grantmaking meetings are in April, August and November. Generally, full proposals must be received approximately three and one-half months prior to a meeting date. Applications that are not adequately reviewed in time for one grantmaking meeting are carried forward to the next one.

Applications for capital projects are only considered by the Board of Directors once a year, at the November grantmaking meeting. Please contact the Foundation at (651) 224-5463 or by e-mail at inbox@tspf.org with questions about grant applications.

The information listed below must be provided in the proposal narrative:

- Description of Applicant Organization
  Provide a brief history of the applicant organization, plus a description of the general purpose of mission of the organization, its objectives, and the scope of its operations, including primary programs or services, primary service populations, and locations of service activities.

- Statement of Purpose
  Explain the general purpose of the project or program for which the grant is requested, the issue it addresses, the significance of the issue, and an estimate of the number and geographic location of those who will benefit.

- Proposed Program Design and Evaluation Plan
  Describe (1) the objectives or intended outcomes of the project; i.e., the changes in people or institutions that are expected to occur as a result of the activities, (2) the activities or set of actions that will be implemented to achieve these objectives or intended outcomes, (3) the information that will be provided in the final report to demonstrate achievement of the outcomes and activities, and (4) the methods that will be used to gather the information. In addition to the narrative description, summarize this information on the enclosed Evaluation Plan Summary Form. Requests for capital or endowment purposes need to address only (1), (2) and (3) and need not complete an Evaluation Plan Summary Form.

- Staff Qualifications
  Describe the qualifications and experiences of the principal staff members of the project in relation to its purposes and objectives, their probable availability for the duration of the project, and whether or not they can be replaced in the event they resign or are otherwise not available.

- Detailed Budget
  Present a reasonably detailed project budget, including a summary of the project's projected revenue sources and, if applicable, plans for continued funding of the program or service at the expiration of the grant period. A project budget is required in addition to the financial information listed on the Application Form.

- Foundation Support
  Provide a statement as to why Foundation support is requested, a description of what other efforts have been made to obtain the required funds, and a list of approved, pending, and denied requests for contributions, plus the amount received to date for this purpose.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The San Diego Foundation is the only broad-purpose, permanent endowment built by hundreds of citizens and organizations committed to improving the quality of life in all of our communities. San Diego's largest foundation assists donors in building and preserving assets for charitable purposes in the greater San Diego region. It also monitors and assesses the changing needs of the region, and, to the extent possible, meets those needs through financial awards and organizational support. The Foundation's goal is to improve the quality of life within all of our communities by promoting and increasing responsible and effective philanthropy.

The foundation supports nonprofit organizations' efforts to improve their efficiency and effectiveness, and to avoid duplication of services in any given field. Toward that end, a small number of grants will be available to assist organizations that are contemplating strategic restructuring. Funds may be applied to support consultants, surveys, legal fees or other expenses related to:

- Strategic planning;
- Feasibility studies;
- Cost-benefit analyses of existing or projected programs; and
- Restructuring, mergers, joint ventures or new collaboratives.

Interest Areas:
- Arts and Culture
- Civil Society
- Economic and Employment Development
- Education
- The Environment
- Health and Human Services

Collaborations:
Joins other nonprofit organizations, community leaders and government officials in San Diego to address needs of the community. Examples include: The San Diego Children's Initiative, San Diego Grantmakers AIDS Collaboration, The Community Development Program, The HIV Care Coalition, San Diego Millennium Project, Southern California Citizenship Fund, and Intergroup Relations Project.

TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $2,250,505 (1998)

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The Sonoma County Community Foundation is a tax-exempt charitable organization whose mission is to match philanthropic interests with community needs. Our grantmaking is one step in a cycle of philanthropy which exists to assist and complement the work of nonprofit organizations in Sonoma County.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Aging; Agriculture; AIDS; Arts; Business school and education; Child development, education, services; Children and youth, services; Civil rights, race and inter-group relations; Community development; Crime and violence prevention; Disabled; Economically disadvantaged; Education, adult education, higher education, medical school; Environment; Family services; Food services; Health care; Historic preservation and historical societies; Homeless; Human services; Humanities; International affairs; Latinos; Leadership development; Media, journalism and publishing; Mental health and crisis services; Minorities; Museums; Native Americans; Performing arts, dance, music, theater; Public affairs, citizen participation; Rural development; Substance abuse, services; Visual arts; Voluntarism promotion; Women; Youth development, citizenship; Youth development, services. Types of support: Building and renovation, Equipment, General and operating support, Matching funds, Program development, Program-related investments and loans, Publication, Scholarship funds, Scholarships to individuals, Seed money, Technical assistance.

Focused Grants are awarded in each of the Community Foundation's four fields of interest, as follows:

Arts and Humanities: The Community Foundation wishes to support arts (and cultural) organizations in developing their ability to achieve their artistic/cultural goals. Priority will be given to proposed initiatives from the organization's artistic/programs director which stretch the organization's current performance level, moving it closer to its vision or raison d'etre as an arts (or cultural) organization. From one to three grants totaling $29,000 will be awarded in the field of Arts and Humanities. The letter of intent for arts and humanities proposals must include a vision statement from the organization's artistic/programs director which explains how the project will support their vision.

Education: Focused Grants in the field of Education may be awarded to nonprofit organizations providing services in school settings involving the areas of arts/humanities; the environment; and health and human services. Schools are not eligible to apply. The specific requirements in each area are as follows:

- Arts Education: New, hands-on programs of education in the arts, delivered by arts organizations, for primary and/or secondary school students.

- Environmental Education: Hands-on education programs, delivered in coordination with school science curriculum, to students either in class or in the field by environmental organizations, focusing on creating an understanding of the importance of habitat connectivity.

- Health and Human Services Education: Experiential education activities delivered by a community-based nonprofit organization and designed to engage school students to better understand and deal with issues of diversity.

From one to three grants totaling $15,000 will be awarded in the field of Education.

Environment: Priority will be given to proposals which involve the restoration of natural habitats and/or which address habitat connectivity. From one to three grants totaling $32,000 will be awarded in the field of the Environment.

Health and Human Services: Two separate types of health and human services grants will be awarded in 1999, Prevention Grants and Basic Human Needs Grants.

- Prevention Grants: The community Foundation invites proposals covering the broad range of health and human service issues in our community. Priority will be given to proposals which focus on preventative approaches. From one to three Prevention Grants totaling $20,000 will be awarded.

- Basic Human Needs Grants: Grants of up to $5,000 will be awarded for projects that provide food, clothing or shelter to low income people in crisis. Preference will be given to proposals for non-staff expenses and to organizations whose mission and services have historically involved the provision of food, shelter or clothing to low income people.

Organizations may apply for more than one category of Focus Grant. Focused Grant awards will be announced in July and funds will be available to organizations in September. The grant period is October through September.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:

Giving only in California, specifically Sonoma County. The Community Foundation will generally not fund competitive grant applications involving the kind of proposals and groups identified below:

- Annual fund campaigns, fundraising events or debt retirement.
- Religious purposes (or programs requiring religious participation) or political purposes.
- Capital campaigns or projects.
- Grants (or loans) to individuals, except academic scholarships.
Grants to primary and secondary schools or to academic foundations serving primary or secondary schools.

Projects submitted by departments of local government or which are normally within the domain of municipal government responsibility.

High administrative costs.

Conferences or one-time events.

HOW TO APPLY:
The grantmaking programs occur through a competitive process in which applications are judged according to criteria established for each grantmaking program. All applications are reviewed by staff to ensure that they are complete and are submitted by eligible organizations. A committee made up of community volunteers and members of the Community Foundation's board of directors evaluates each application and makes a recommendation to the foundation's full board, which makes all funding decisions.

Applicant organizations must use the Community Foundation's grant application forms. The Foundation has joined with other Sonoma County funders to develop a core set of narrative questions which are common to all funders, in an effort to reduce the work involved in applying for local funds. In addition, local funders also have adopted a common set of budget forms which are required of all applicants. Specific directions for letters of intent and grant proposals are included with the application forms. Forms may be obtained at our Web site, (www.sonomas.org), or by calling the Foundation at 579-4073.

CHAPTER THREE

THE CORPORATION SECTOR

By Stacey Jenkins

Descriptions of corporations that make grants to Native Americans.

Few of these corporations make grants to Native Americans because of their status as Native Americans. They do make grants to organizations that are doing work in their areas of interest.

Grants listed are samples. No attempt was made to list all Native American grants made. Grants are generally only those made within the past five years. Grants are accurate as reported by the foundations.

NOTE: A high percentage of the corporations listed had moved in three years prior to the collection of the information listed in this DIRECTORY. If your letter comes back, trace the corporation to its new address.

AVERAGE GRANT: $5,000 to $25,000

SMALLEST GRANT: $500

TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $6,810,749

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The Allstate Foundation will issue grants that identify and fund programs to non-profit organizations that are related to automobile and highway safety, homes and neighborhoods, and personal safety and security. Funding preference is given to proposals within the current focus areas. The Foundation has developed focus areas to target contributions to align with the Allstate Corporation's business goals. All Foundation funding requirements apply.

- Automobile and Highway Safety
  Programs should encourage or emphasize seat belt usage, infant and child car seat awareness, advocate anti-drinking and driving, provide educational awareness to the first time driver, car theft prevention and traffic court monitoring.

- Homes and Neighborhoods
  Programs should provide home fire prevention tips, encourage usage of smoke detectors, security information against burglary, accident prevention within and around the home and small business safety awareness.

- Personal Safety and Security
  Programs should provide resources toward making the community a safer place to live. Programs will try to raise awareness of poverty, child abuse, drugs and violence prevention. Organizations should offer safeguards against gangs, guns, sexual harassment and domestic violence.

The Allstate Foundation prefers to support programs within our focus areas, rather than making grants for "general operating support." One-day or single event programs are not eligible for funding.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Housing and shelter, development; safety, automotive safety; safety and disasters; youth, services; urban and community development; community development; government and public administration; public affairs.

OTHER FOUNDATION PROGRAMS:
United Way: We support the United Way/Crusade of Mercy in metropolitan Chicago and the fundraising campaigns of targeted United Way organizations across the country. This support permits The Allstate Foundation to recognize a number of outstanding human service organizations.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
No support for fraternal or religious organizations or for bands and choirs. No grants to individuals (except for employee-related scholarships), or for annual campaigns, deficit financing, building funds, capital campaigns, endowment funds, athletic events or teams, memorial grants, or medical research.

To further clarify the review process the following limitations prohibit support to:

- fundraising events, sponsorships
- individuals
- capital and endowment campaigns
- athletic events of all types
- memorial grants
- athletic teams, bands and choirs (including equipment and uniforms)
- scouting groups
- medical research
- private secondary schools
- volunteer fire departments
- grant requests for production of audio, film or video
- multi-year pledge requests
- non-domestic causes
- requests to support travel.

Since The Allstate Foundation receives funding requests far in excess of its budget, worthy causes must often be declined, even when the request falls into one of the current focus areas. This does not in any way reflect on the value of the organization involved or on its programs, but rather is a result of limited resources.

HOW TO APPLY:
The Allstate Foundation receives many more requests than it is able to support. Therefore, we have established certain requirements that must be met to qualify for funding. Organizations should first consult the list of general exclusions, to make certain the request fits within the guidelines. Each proposal must contain a summary (two-page maximum) of an organization's project or program need. The amount requested must be stated. A grant given by the Foundation in any one year does not necessarily ensure future funding. If renewed funding is desired, organizations should submit an additional, formal request each year. Proposals should contain the following information:

- organization name, street address (not post office box), phone number and the name of a contact person familiar with the details of the proposal
- timetable for project implementation
- brief description of how the proposed program or project relates to the current focus areas of The Allstate Foundation
- brief statement of the history, purpose and goals of the organization, as well as information about the number of members it has, the constituents it serves, its geographic service area, use of volunteers and general accomplishments to date
- copy of the organization's operating budget for the past year, indicating percentages used for program, administrative, fundraising and general expenses
- budget for the project for which support is requested, including sources of financial support and grants committed or ending
- audited financial statement from the previous year
- copy of the organization's most recent annual report
- copy of the organization's non-profit status exemption letter from the Internal Revenue Service as a 501(c)(3) designation
- list of the organization's officers and board members, and their affiliations
- background statement on the executive director and key staff to be involved in the proposed project
- a list of other donors, including support from the United Way or similar federated funds, corporations, foundations and government sources.

The Foundation has no annual deadlines for submission. Proposals may be submitted throughout the year. The Foundation's fiscal year is the same as the calendar year. Site visits or interviews will be scheduled only if the Foundation staff requires additional information about a proposal it has received for consideration.

The Foundation does not send written notification of receipt of proposals. Organizations wishing such notification should enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Written notification of preliminary turn down will normally be sent within 30 days of receipt of the proposal.

Guidelines available from the foundation by mail or via the web at www.allstate.com/foundation/.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
We believe that concentrating our contributions on specific community needs is the most effective use of Foundation resources. As a result, the Foundation has two focus areas: Education and Youth Development and Culture and Civic Programs, and occasionally makes emergency product donations.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Education and Youth Development: The Foundation supports programs that prepare young people to successfully participate in our increasingly global society and to contribute to the betterment of the communities in which they live. We target youth and support programs that are designed to achieve the following goals; 1) improve the academic performance of children, especially through strategies which foster systemic change within the public schools; 2) prepare youth for the world of work and for community leadership; and 3) promote positive relationships among youth from diverse cultural and ethnic groups. Areas of funding include: academic development, job readiness and career development, and mentoring.

Culture and Civic Programs: The Foundation supports programs and projects that improve and enhance the quality of cultural life in Oakland, Calif. The Foundation may shift funding priorities from year to year. The Arts Mini-Grants Initiative was created to provide small grants to assist the Oakland nonprofit cultural community. Grants of $1,000 will be awarded annually in a competitive process beginning March 10. The Arts Mini-Grants Initiative is a special project of the Foundation and a separate application must be submitted when requesting funds.

Type of support: General operating support; program development; scholarship funds; employee matching gifts and employee-related scholarships.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving primarily in Oakland, California, and other areas of company operation. No support for sectarian religious purposes, or for veterans, fraternal, or labor organizations. No grants to individuals, or for goodwill advertising, raffles, benefits, conferences, athletic events or leagues, media production, fundraising, or travel.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
"The foundation manages the Minneapolis St. Paul-based giving of the Dayton Hudson Corporate and a small national grants program. All three operating companies, Target Stores, Mervyn's and the Department Store Division of Dayton Hudson Corporation, have corporate giving programs in communities where they operate stores. Giving is concentrated on programs that are committed to achieving results and demonstrating leadership. The foundation's priorities are social action programs that result in the economic and social progress of individuals, and arts programs that result in artistic excellence, community leadership in the arts, and increased access to, and use of, the arts as a means of community expression. Each operating company has focus areas for their funding."

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
We favor grants that relate to the conduct of U.S. business in general and the conduct of the petroleum and chemical industries in particular. As a corporate citizen and as an employer, we are also very concerned about social and economic conditions in the areas where we live and work. We therefore look for ways to enhance the quality of life in communities where we have a significant presence. Our philanthropic giving is also concentrated in certain program areas.

Environment. Grants go primarily to organizations that are national in scope. Priorities are studying and conserving endangered species and habitats, fostering scientific research on important environmental issues, and encouraging informed public discussion of sound environmental policy alternatives. At the local level, our contributions are limited to geographic areas where we have significant facilities or large concentrations of employees. Grants at the local level include nature preservation and environmental education activities.

Health. Health grants fall into several categories: support of medical centers/hospitals, health education and health-care delivery, health and the environment, disabilities and mental illness, and substance abuse. Grants are made at both the national and local levels, with the latter limited to communities where Exxon has large facilities and/or large concentrations of employees. Disease-specific contributions requests receive low priority.

United Appeals and Civic and Community-Service Organizations. Exxon joins with its employees and retirees in supporting United Way and other federated drives in communities where Exxon employees and their families live and work. We also provide direct support to civic and community-service organizations in these communities. Although adapted to local needs, support emphasizes youth development, neighborhood assistance programs, and volunteer involvement.

Minority and Women Oriented Service Organizations. Concern for the needs of minorities and women are reflected in a number of our program areas. We also have a separate funding categories for programs and activities specifically aimed at women and minority groups. Funds go both to national organizations and to local programs in communities where Exxon operates. At the national level, grants support organizations that shape public policy and develop educational enhancement programs for women and minorities. At the local level, grants support organizations working on a wide range of social, educational, and economic issues impacting women and minorities.

Education. Exxon’s financial support of the Exxon Education Foundation comprises the major part of its educational philanthropy. In addition, Exxon Corporation makes a number of direct grants for educational activities, usually for purposes related to our business interests. We make a set of general-support grants to university science and engineering departments that provide us with large numbers of minority and female science and engineering students whom we would like to have as employees. Other grants help to support national professional associations of minority scientists and engineers. Some grants are also made for local educational programs—often minority-or science-oriented—in communities where Exxon has significant facilities or large numbers of employees.

Public Policy and Public Research. The emphasis in this area is on supporting organizations that research significant domestic and foreign policy issues and promote informed public discussion of such issues. Major themes include economics, the environment, business, and law and justice. Recipients of these grants are primarily national in their activities.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Arts; Community development; Education, higher education; Environment; Federated giving programs; Health care; Historic preservation and historical societies; Human services; Minorities; Museums; Public affairs; Women. Types of support: Annual campaigns, Employee matching gifts, Employee volunteer services, General and operating support, Matching funds, Program development, Research.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
We make grants only to tax-exempt organizations, never to individuals. We do not support local organizations or activities unless they are geographically located in an area where Exxon has significant facilities or numbers of employees. (See our list of major communities.) We do not provide funds for political or religious causes. We do not generally contribute to endowments or provide operating support to agencies funded by the United Way. We provide only a few scholarships and these are tied to our efforts to attract selected students—usually outstanding women and minority-group members majoring in science or engineering—to employment with the company. Scholarship recipients are identified by Exxon recruiters. Many of the national organizations supported are based in New York or Washington, DC.

HOW TO APPLY:
We have no formal application procedures. To be considered for a grant, you should send us the following information:
• a brief history of your organization, a description of its current work, and an explanation of the significance of that work
• a copy of your organization’s current general operating budget
• a copy of your organization’s most recent audited financial statement
• background information on the individuals responsible for administering and developing your organization’s programs.
• a list of the current members of your Board of Directors

FINANCIAL INFORMATION
NUMBER OF GRANTS MADE ANNUALLY: 170 (1996)
LARGEST GRANT: $560,000
SMALLEST GRANT: $1,500
TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $6,215,282

GENERAL INFORMATION
GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
We favor grants that relate to the conduct of U.S. business in general and the conduct of the petroleum and chemical industries in particular. As a corporate citizen and as an employer, we are also very concerned about social and economic conditions in the areas where we live and work. We therefore look for ways to enhance the quality of life in communities where we have a significant presence. Our philanthropic giving is also concentrated in certain program areas.

Environment. Grants go primarily to organizations that are national in scope. Priorities are studying and conserving endangered species and habitats, fostering scientific research on important environmental issues, and encouraging informed public discussion of sound environmental policy alternatives. At the local level, our contributions are limited to geographic areas where we have significant facilities or large concentrations of employees. Grants at the local level include nature preservation and environmental education activities.

Health. Health grants fall into several categories: support of medical centers/hospitals, health education and health-care delivery, health and the environment, disabilities and mental illness, and substance abuse. Grants are made at both the national and local levels, with the latter limited to communities where Exxon has large facilities and/or large concentrations of employees. Disease-specific contributions requests receive low priority.

United Appeals and Civic and Community-Service Organizations. Exxon joins with its employees and retirees in supporting United Way and other federated drives in communities where Exxon employees and their families live and work. We also provide direct support to civic and community-service organizations in these communities. Although adapted to local needs, support emphasizes youth development, neighborhood assistance programs, and volunteer involvement.

Minority and Women-Oriented Service Organizations. Concern for the needs of minorities and women is reflected in a number of our program areas. We also have a separate funding category for programs and activities specifically aimed at women and minority groups. Funds go both to national organizations and to local programs in communities where Exxon operates. At the national level, grants support organizations that shape public policy and develop educational enhancement programs for women and minorities. At the local level, grants support organizations working on a wide range of social, educational, and economic issues impacting women and minorities.

Education. Exxon's financial support of the Exxon Education Foundation comprises the major part of its educational philanthropy. In addition, Exxon Corporation makes a number of direct grants for educational activities, usually for purposes related to our business interests. We make a set of general-support grants to university science and engineering departments that provide us with large numbers of minority and female science and engineering students whom we would like to have as employees. Other grants help to support national professional associations of minority scientists and engineers. Some grants are also made for local educational programs—often minority or science-oriented—in communities where Exxon has significant facilities or large numbers of employees.

Public Policy and Public Research. The emphasis in this area is on supporting organizations that research significant domestic and foreign policy issues and promote informed public discussion of such issues. Major themes include economics, the environment, business, and law and justice. Recipients of these grants are primarily national in their activities.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
- Education: elementary school and education, higher education, secondary school and education; Engineering: school and education, technology; Mathematics; Minorities; Science. Types of support: Employee matching gifts, Program development, Seed money.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
We make grants only to tax-exempt organizations, never to individuals. We do not support local organizations or activities unless they are geographically located in an area where Exxon has significant facilities or numbers of employees. (See our list of major communities) We do not provide funds for political or religious causes. We do not generally contribute to endowments or provide operating support to agencies funded by the United Way. We provide only a few scholarships and these are tied to our efforts to attract selected students—usually outstanding women and minority-group members majoring in science or engineering—to employment with the company. Scholarship recipients are identified by Exxon recruiters. Many of the national organizations supported are based in New York or Washington, DC.

HOW TO APPLY:
We have no formal application procedures. To be considered for a grant, you should send us the following information:
- a brief history of your organization, a description of its current work, and an explanation of the significance of that work
- a copy of your organization's current general operating budget
- a copy of your organization's most recent audited financial statement
- background information on the individuals responsible for administering and developing your organization's programs.
- a list of the current members of your Board of Directors
- a list of current public and private contributors, including their levels of support
- a copy of your organization's 501(c)(3) tax-exemption letter

If support is requested for a specific project, please also provide the following:
- a description of the project and an explanation of its significance
- background information on the individuals who will be carrying out the project
- the total budget for the project
- the amount requested from Exxon
- if appropriate, a list of others who are or will be providing funds for the project

NUMBER OF GRANTS MADE ANNUALLY: 345 (1998)

AVERAGE GRANT: $1,000 to $25,000

LARGEST GRANT: $100,000

SMALLEST GRANT: $1,000

TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $5,005,836 (1998)

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
Supports projects in education, specifically higher and secondary education and minority education. Also funds cultural programs, urban affairs, journalism, and environmental concerns. The Foundation also supports an employee matching gift program.

Of the 345 grants totaling $5,005,836 awarded during the year to projects in the five areas that we support (education, the arts, community service, journalism and the environment), a total of $520,500 was allotted to 63 organizations in the 16 regions where The New York Times Company owns affiliate businesses. In most of these communities, as well as in New York itself, the majority of awards continued to go to educational and cultural projects, conforming to the general policy of most corporations surveyed by the Conference Board. Our grants in these two areas, in addition to the grants for environmental concerns, were enhanced by our matching-gifts program, in which donations by employees, retirees and board members are matched $1.50 for every $1 contributed up to a ceiling of $3,000 a year. For the year ended March 15, 1998, the annual matching-gift total reached the $1,000,000 level for the third time. The steady growth is due, we believe, to our keeping employees alerted to the existence of the program, which will be placed on a calendar-year basis starting in January 2000.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Arts; Community development; Education, higher education, secondary school and education; Environment; Human services; Media, journalism and publishing; Minorities; Museums; Performing arts; Public affairs. Types of support: Continuing support, Emergency funds, Employee matching gifts, Fellowships, General and operating support, Internships, Research, Scholarship funds.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
The major areas in which The New York Times Company Foundation entertains applications for grants are cultural affairs, education, community services, journalism and environmental concerns. No grants are made to individuals, to sectarian religious institutions and causes, or for health, drug or alcohol therapy purposes. Although urban affairs rank high among the Foundation's interests, grants are not usually made on the neighborhood level. Some national and international activities receive contributions, but the majority of grants are concentrated in the New York area and in localities served by affiliates of The New York Times Company.

HOW TO APPLY:
Appeals for grants should be addressed to the President. In order not to tax grant seekers' resources unnecessarily, the Foundation discourages investment of excessive time and money in the preparation of requests and proposals. A letter describing the purpose for which funds are requested and how the funds will be appropriated for the specific venture is sufficient. A list of other potential sources of support as well as a financial report of the organization must also be included.

Submission of a copy of determination by the Internal Revenue Service that the applicant enjoys tax-exempt status under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code is required. If a grant is awarded, an accounting of the expenditures must be submitted at the end of the award year as a one-page summary of the progress of the activity for which the funds were used. The volume of appeals makes routine personal interviews with grant seekers impossible. Such meetings are arranged only when essential to the determination of a response.

The Board of Directors meets at least twice annually, within the first and third quarter of each calendar year, to review the President's recommendations and authorize grants to be disbursed. In extraordinary instances of urgent appeals, decisions may be made outside that schedule.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The Polaroid Foundation helps disadvantaged children and adults develop measurable skills. These skills enable them to overcome obstacles or challenges and significantly improve their lives. The Foundation also promotes active community involvement by all Polaroid employees.

Geographic Focus:
- The Polaroid Foundation's financial grants support nonprofit organizations whose work benefit Greater Boston and Greater New Bedford, Massachusetts.
- The Foundation gives priority to communities where Polaroid has a major presence: Boston, Cambridge, New Bedford and Waltham.

Grant Making:
Polaroid employee volunteers help evaluate grant requests. During the regular workday, employees review proposals, visit agencies and make funding recommendations, under the direction of the Foundation's professional staff. For more information on the Foundation's programs, please call 781-386-9400.
PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Grants are made to nonprofit organizations working on a variety of issues. All grants support the development of skills for disadvantaged people. Types of support: While we anticipate that most requests will be for program support, we fully expect that these requests include some funds earmarked for general operations.

Examples of grants that meet our guidelines have included:
- a program that helps young mothers develop vocational, academic and life skills necessary to achieve economic self-sufficiency;
- a program to motivate, encourage and provide opportunity for talented inner-city youth to pursue music education at the college level;
- an early intervention program for new parents and children at risk;
- and an occupational skills-training program for unemployed or underemployed people.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving principally in Massachusetts, especially the greater Boston, Cambridge, greater New Bedford, and Waltham areas. Programs that do not qualify:
- advertisements, tables or tickets at diners or other functions;
- one-time or short-term events;
- endowment funds;
- research, renovations, or capital campaigns;
- grants to individuals; and
- political or sectarian religious activities.

HOW TO APPLY:
We welcome brief letters of inquiry and concept papers at all times. Requests for funding should focus specifically on the program for which you are requesting funds and that develop skills for disadvantaged people. The proposal should include:
- Cover Letter Summary
  - Submitted on organization's letterhead in narrative form.
- Program Overview
  - Narrative of the specific program, including goals, constituents, community needs to be met and desired outcomes;
  - Method of implementation and evaluation;
  - Identification of specific, measurable skills to be gained by participants;
- Examples of measurable improvements in participants' lives as a result of the newly acquired skills; or, anecdotes about how specific participants benefit from the program and the changes that occur; and
- IRS tax determination letter indicating 501(c)(3) status.
- Financial Information
  - Income and expense budget for the specific program;
  - Most recent year-end financial statements or audit; and
  - Sources and amounts of funding required, solicited and received to date.
- Grant Application
  - In addition to the above, include a grant application completed in full, available from the Polaroid Foundation. Words 'See Attached' are not accepted. Please be concise. You may embellish within the proposal narrative.

Because of the specific focus of our work, the Polaroid Foundation does not accept the Associated Grantmakers of Massachusetts (AGM) Common Proposal Format.

GENERAL INFORMATION

OUR MISSION AND INVESTMENT FOCUS:
Prudential’s Social Investment Program makes socially responsible investments in the areas of affordable housing, economic development, minority entrepreneurship, community services, and education. The program will only consider proposals that do not qualify under mainstream lending guidelines. With a willingness to take informed risks, we target investments that provide the greater social impact for individuals and communities in those locations where Prudential has its most significant business presence.

The Social Investment Program originates investments for The Prudential Insurance Company of America and The Prudential Foundation. The program is authorized to originate annually an average of $25 million of new social investments for Prudential. In addition, each year the program originates approximately $5 million of below-market-rate social purpose investments, called program-related investments, for The Prudential Foundation. By year-end 1998, more than $721 million in equity and debt investments had been provided to nonprofit and for-profit ventures. Currently outstanding investments benefit individuals in 350 cities in 44 states.

First and foremost, our investments must have a clear social purpose. Innovative projects are favored—especially if they build replicable models for solving social problems. Secondly, our investments must have the potential to provide a return.

The Social Investment Program currently focuses on the following investment categories, addressing the needs of society in three issue areas: Ready to Work, Ready to Learn and Ready to Live.

Ready to Work:
Affordable Housing:
· Provide safe, affordable rental housing for low-income populations.
· Provide home ownership opportunities for low-income individuals and families.
· Emphasize resident responsibility, community involvement, nonprofit support and long-term affordability.

Economic Development:
· Promote economic viability and enhance quality of life by creating long-term sustainable communities that offer employment opportunities, affordable housing, and quality services for their residents.

Minority Entrepreneurship:
- Encourage and support business ownership and operation by minorities.
- Promote wealth and job creation that will increase the economic stability of communities.
- Encourage corporate social responsibility among minority entrepreneurs.
- Provide gap financing when minority entrepreneurs have been unable to access mainstream lending providers.

Ready to Learn:
Education:
- Encourage the development of educational programs that improve the quality of education for children.
- Support school-and non-school-based projects that increase the human potential and self-sufficiency of disadvantaged children.

Ready to Live:
Community Services:
- Support significant and appropriate social service programs as a component of safe, affordable rental housing.
- Provide support for community-based human service delivery for economically disadvantaged populations.
- Promote professional, secure childcare initiatives.

Geographic Focus
The Social Investment Program focuses on urban communities where Prudential has its most significant business presence. A special emphasis is placed on our home state of New Jersey, particularly the city of Newark. The other target cities are:
- Atlanta
- Chicago
- Houston
- Los Angeles
- Philadelphia
- Boston
- Denver
- Jacksonville, Fla.
- Minneapolis
- Phoenix

Investments with a national scope will be considered if a significant portion of the funds will be directed to Prudential's target cities.

INVESTMENT GUIDELINES
The program has flexibility regarding risk and terms; however, we intend to recover our investments and earn a fair rate of return on our portfolio. Investment underwriting and structure for prospective deals resembles mainstream investment requirements. Our investment criteria include:

Deal Structure:
The program is a lead or co-lead investor.

Amount:
Minimum:
$1 million for Prudential investments; $500,00 for Prudential Foundation-funded program-related investments.

Maximum
$15 million

Borrowers:
Both nonprofit and for-profit organizations.

Credit Quality:
The program focuses on standard credit issues such as debt ratio, debt and fixed charge coverage, loan-to-value ratio, management experience and expertise, borrower and developer track record and business and industry trends.

Use of Funds:
Debt
Fixed or floating rate, secured or unsecured

Equity
Preferred stock, non-voting common stock; voting common stock (not to exceed 10 percent of outstanding voting shares); limited partnership interests, including low-income housing tax credit partnerships.

No construction loans, letters of credit, guarantees or other credit enhancements.

Terms
Debt
Target average life-five to seven years.
Target Maturity-15 years

Equity
Target cash-out period-five to seven years
Repayment
Amortization is required on debt. Maximum interest-only period is five years.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
The Prudential Foundation provides support to innovative direct-service programs that address the needs of society in three issue areas: Ready to Learn, Ready to Work and Ready to Live. In order to make a significant impact with finite resources, our funding is allocated according to the following guidelines, which will be in effect until the end of the 1999 calendar year.

Ready To Learn:
Education reform efforts that strengthen early childhood education initiatives; support professional development for pre K-3 teachers; build strong school leadership, with a particular emphasis on parental involvement; provide school-based health and human services that reduce the barriers to learning or create safe school environments through conflict resolution programs.

Within this framework, we will emphasize the creation of model schools, arts education and literacy.

Ready To Work:
Job entry skills that are acquired through initiatives that focus on school-to-work transition, work force development and welfare-to-work.

Job creation strategies that include access to capital, nonprofit for-profit ventures, adult and youth entrepreneurship, financial training, business attraction/development/retention.

Decent, affordable housing that is created through programs that focus on either housing strategies or neighborhood-based activities. Housing strategies include investment and grant partnerships with Prudential's Social Investment Program, community development financial institutions, or technical assistance to Community Housing Development Organizations. Neighborhood-based activities include community organizing, neighborhood strategic planning, leadership development and community security.

Ready To Live:
Community well being, which includes community-based culture/arts programs in New Jersey; initiatives that build healthy families; community-based human services for economically disadvantaged populations; high-impact national projects that address major human services issues affecting children and families.

Youth development programs that foster leadership skills.

The Greater Newark AIDS Initiative, which funds HIV/AIDS projects that serve Newark, N.J., and the surrounding communities of Elizabeth, Orange, East Orange, West Orange, South Orange, Irvington and Jersey City. Programs must focus on either the needs of children who are infected with HIV/AIDS or who have lost parents to AIDS, patient education, or prevention education for adolescents/young adults aged 14 to 24. A Request for Proposals will be issued during the beginning of the second quarter of the year and grants will be announced by the end of that quarter.

OTHER GRANTMAKING PRIORITIES
The Foundation emphasizes direct-service, rather than policy-oriented grants. The Foundation also has geographic priorities. In order of emphasis, we fund:
- Programs that serve our headquarters city of Newark and surrounding New Jersey urban centers.
- Programs in cities where Prudential has a significant presence. These cities include Atlanta; Boston; Chicago; Denver; Houston; Jacksonville, Fla.; Los Angeles; Minneapolis; Philadelphia and Phoenix.

In Jacksonville, Los Angeles, Minneapolis and Philadelphia, the Foundation will focus its funding in designated neighborhoods. We will also provide some neighborhood-focused funding in Newark. The neighborhoods-and local Community Resources staff to contact for more information-are as follows:

Jacksonville
Pine Forest/Larsen neighborhood:
Pat Brzozowski (904) 313-4494

Los Angeles
Pacoima neighborhood:
Carolyn Brooks (818) 712-5778

Minneapolis
Near North neighborhood:
Carolyn Brooks (818) 712-5778

Newark
Central Ward neighborhood:
Mary Puryear (973) 802-9083

Philadelphia
Lower Eastern North Philadelphia:
Maureen Schmidt (215) 784-2674
- National programs that further our objectives (and can be implemented or replicated in cities where Prudential has a substantial presence).

In addition, when we consider a proposal, we evaluate an organization's ability to:
- Direct the project.
- Identify specific and measurable short and long term objectives.
- Demonstrate that the proposed approach is the most effective way to meet these objectives.
- Develop an itemized, complete and realistic budget.
- Continue the program after our funding ceases.
- Evaluate the outcome of the program.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving principally in areas where the company operates. We generally do not fund capital campaigns, annual fund drives or endowment. We do not consider requests for:
- Organizations that are not tax-exempt under paragraph 501(c)(3) of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code.
- Veterans, labor, religious, athletic or fraternal groups—except when these groups provide needed services to the community at large.
- Direct grants or scholarships to individuals.
- General operating funds for single-disease health groups.
- Goodwill advertising.
- Fund-raising events (such as dinners and walk-a-thons).

HOW TO APPLY:
Complete the application form. (The Foundation also accepts the New York Area Common Application Form. You may also submit with your application a concept paper of three pages or less. Please do not fax applications or submit videotapes.

If we feel that there is potential for a grant, we will notify you. Please be prepared to provide the following information:
- Copies of your latest audited financial statement.
- A complete itemized project budget.
- A list of your funding sources, including the amount received from each source.
- The names and qualifications of those conducting the project.

We receive and review proposals throughout the year. Grants that exceed $200,000 must be approved by our Board of Trustees, which meets in April, September and December. We will make every attempt to respond to your application within 60 days. Because of the large number of proposals received, we would appreciate it if you would not contact us to inquire about the status of your request until after that time. GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
The Foundation gives grants for education and limited grants for capital fund drives for social service agencies, hospitals, and health and human service agencies in major State Farm employment centers and to key colleges. Also supports an employee matching gift program to colleges and universities.

The American Indian Scholarship program is designed to recognize and support outstanding American Indian college students who distinguish themselves in academic and leadership activities. Students who win the State-Farm Companies Foundation American Indian Scholarship receive a one-time award of up to $1,000 for educational expenses. Winners must attend one of the U.S. tribal colleges affiliated with the College Fund.

State Farm Companies Foundation sponsors 30 awards annually through a grant to the American Indian College Fund. The application and selection process is completed through the individual tribal colleges. For a complete list of participating tribal colleges, please refer to the American Indian College Fund’s website: www.collegefund.org

About the Foundation:
The Foundation’s philosophy reflects State Farm’s Good Neighbor focus, "Like a good neighbor, State Farm is there." We fund efforts to build stronger communities and to enhance educational opportunities for our neighbors. Our activities complement State Farm’s efforts to be a good corporate citizen and to be a good neighbor in the communities where we live and do business. Our funding and programs support those communities through scholarship programs, grants to colleges and universities, annual contributions to the United Way, and funding for selected local and national nonprofit organizations.

This information is subject to the terms, conditions, and definitions of the State Farm Companies Foundation. The Foundation reserves the right to discontinue or change these programs at any time.
PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Business school and education; Federated giving programs; Higher education; Hospitals (general); Human services. Types of support: Building and renovation, Capital campaigns, Employee matching gifts, Employee-related scholarships, Fellowships, Scholarship funds.

The Foundation also supports the following scholarship programs:
- American Indian Scholarship Award Program
- Doctoral Dissertation Award Program
- Exceptional Student Fellowship Program
- Foundation Scholarship Program
- Hispanic Scholarship Award Program

Each year, The State Farm Companies Foundation provides awards for doctoral candidates whose dissertation topics relate to insurance and risk management or business. The award is designed to stimulate research and develop knowledge of business and the insurance industry.

Annually, up to three wards may be presented in each category. Each winner receives a $10,000 grant and the winner's school receives a $5,000 grant.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Giving in U.S. regional office sites and Bloomington, Illinois. No support for fraternal organizations, or religious groups. No grants to individuals (except for scholarships, doctoral award and fellowship programs), for dinners, special events or goodwill advertising, conferences, or seminars.

HOW TO APPLY:
Doctoral candidates who have completed a major portion of their doctoral program and are at the dissertation stage will be considered for this award. Applicants must be nominated by their supervising professor or faculty advisor and must be U.S. citizens.

To be eligible, dissertation topics must fall into one of the following categories:
- Insurance and Risk Management - Dissertation topics that directly relate to or benefit the insurance industry.
- Business - Dissertation topics that relate to general business principles and issues.

Applications are sent to deans or directors of doctoral programs at select colleges and universities in December. Applications may also be requested directly from the Foundation.

Completed applications, nomination forms and required attachments must be received in the Foundation by March 31.

Fax copies will not be accepted. Winners are announced in May.

Criteria for selection include scholastic achievement, quality of the dissertation proposal and recommendations from the dissertation advisor and faculty members. An independent committee of educators select the winners.

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
We will support services in communities in which we do business that help promote sound mental and physical health, provide shelter, enhance education and job readiness, and build community ties.

- Education: Support will go to programs that benefit children of preschool age through college, which provide scholarship or vocational education for the disadvantaged; strengthen leadership in the public schools; teach people to speak, read and write English; and encourage collaboration between community agencies and the schools.

- Social Services: Families and children will be the chief beneficiaries of our social service contributions. We will give to programs that strengthen the family unit; help single-parent families; deal with the problems associated with domestic violence; and help the physically impaired.

- Health: Support will go to organizations that provide health care to underserved populations. We will seek programs that provide early and comprehensive prenatal services, immunizations and health screening for children who lack them as well as preventative care and alternatives to hospitalization.

- Civic and Community: Emphasis will be on programs that promote improved race relations, community development and housing.

- Art and Culture: While not the main focus of our funding, we will favor proposals which bring art or artists to new audiences, and support initiatives that encourage people, especially the handicapped, young or disadvantaged, to express themselves through art.

Our charitable contributions will be directed toward those priority or targeted markets in which The TJX Companies, Inc stores, home office and distribution centers are located. Since that Company Headquarters is in the greater Boston area, a larger proportion of the Company's contributions will focus on organizations that favor the Greater Boston and MetroWest communities.

In-kind support is provided in the following fashion:

- Computer equipment donations, if available, to schools, and certain non-profit organizations. Merchandise donations in the form of samples and non-salable apparel to children and women's groups.
- Speakers of various disciplines within our retail environment or as Masters of Ceremonies and keynote speakers.
- Classroom presentations on "Dressing For Success."
- Fashion shows in the form of sponsorship support or technical assistance and training in fashion show execution.

Populations Served:
- Children
- Teen
- Women
- Families
- Elderly
- Persons with disabilities (mental/physical)
- Persons with AIDS/IV positive
- Disadvantaged
- Underprivileged
- Low income
- Racially and ethnically diverse

The TJX Foundation will not fund: Political Organizations; Public policy research and advocacy; Renovations and Building Expansions; Conferences and seminars; Cash Reserves; Endowment; Education Loans; Fellowships; and Conventions. Populations declined: Offenders and Ex-offenders.

HOW TO APPLY:
Grant proposals and corporate contribution requests must be submitted in writing and sent to me in care of the TJX Foundation, to the TJX Companies, Inc., 770 Cochituate Road, Route 1E, Framingham, MA 01701. In an effort to prevent a delay in the processing of grant proposals, all packages must include the materials listed. If the required Federal IRS 501-c-3 letter is not included, it may result in the disqualification of the request as The Foundation will only make contributions or grants to qualified tax exempt 501-(C) (3) organizations.

GENERAL APPLICATION INFORMATION:
The primary focus of our contributions is toward programs that help needy families and children. We support organizations in communities where one or more of our divisions operate a store and whose programs help to: Enhance education and job readiness; Promote sound mental and physical health; Provide shelter; and Build community ties.

The Allocation Committee will need to know the following information concerning your organizations (please limit items 1 through 5 to three pages in total or less):

- Description of organization, year organization was founded, and its purpose (if you have more than one program, please be specific about the one program for which you are seeking funding).
- Objective of grant and description of the program's target group (please include the age of the target group, the number of people served, different ethnic backgrounds, etc.).
- Evidence of program need and organization's past history in dealing with a similar problem.
- Method of evaluation.

AVERAGE GRANT: $1,000 to $25,000
LARGEST GRANT: $2.5 million
SMALLEST GRANT: $500
TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS ANNUALLY: $7.2 million (1998)

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
Support is focused on higher education, health and human services (including the United Way), arts and culture and scientific affairs. The Corporation also supports an employee matching gift program for education institutions.

Eighty-six percent of the 1998 Health and Human Services program was awarded to United Way organizations. Grants totaling $1,538,500 were distributed to 22 United Ways in USX's primary operating areas, including $700,000 to the United Way, Griffith, Indiana; $129,000 to the United Way of the Texas Gulf Coast, Houston, Texas; and $120,000 to the United Way of Central Alabama, Birmingham, Alabama. USX Corporation and certain of its subsidiaries are sole donors to the Foundation. During 1998, the donors contributed $8.5 million to the Foundation.

USX Foundation provides support to qualified organizations on behalf of USX Corporation and its Marathon and U.S. Steel units. Grants are awarded to nonprofit organizations whose programs operate within the United States, primarily in the major employing locations of USX and its units. Grants are awarded in three programs: Education; Health and Human Services; and Public, Cultural and Scientific Affairs.

Education. The Education program focuses primarily on higher education through direct grants to colleges and universities for operating, capital and scholarship needs. Preference is given to institutions that have strong programs in engineering, science and business. The Education program also includes scholarship programs for sons and daughters of USX employees and matching gifts programs for colleges and universities. Grants generally are not awarded for preschool through Grade 12 programs unless USX employees are directly involved in the programs.

Health and Human Services. The Health and Human Services program includes support of United Ways and a limited number of direct capital and operating grants to health and human service providers in USX's operating areas. Operating support is not granted to organizations that receive operating funds from the United Way; however, requests for capital grants will be considered.

Public, Cultural and Scientific Affairs. Public Affairs includes support for public policy, legal business, and community organizations. Support generally is directed to organizations that focus on issues relating to the business interests of USX. Cultural Affairs includes capital and operating support for major performing arts organizations and cultural institutions which enhance the quality of life in USX communities. Scientific Affairs includes support for science and environmental organizations whose programs relate to the business interests of USX.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Arts; Children and youth, services; Computer science; Crime and violence and delinquency prevention; Disabled; Economically disadvantaged; Economics; Education, higher education, business school and education, law school; Engineering; Environment; Federated giving programs; Health care; Historic preservation, Historical societies; Human services; Public Libraries; Mental health and services; Minorities; Museums; Native Americans; Performing arts; Public affairs; Public policy; research; Safety and disasters; Science; Substance abuse, services; Youth services. Types of support: Building and renovation, Capital campaigns, Employee matching gifts, Employee-related scholarships, Equipment, general and operating support, Scholarship funds.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
The Foundation does not award grants to:
- individuals for personal needs or scholarships
- religious organizations for religious purposes
- organizations whose programs operate outside the United States
- organizations that have not been certified as tax-exempt under Section 501 (c) 3) of the Internal Revenue Code
- hospitals
- nursing homes
- other grantmaking foundations

The Foundation does not award grants for:
- preschool-Grade 12 education
- individual research projects
- economic development
- conferences, seminars or symposia
- travel
- sponsorship of special events
- sponsorship of fund-raising events
HOW TO APPLY:
Applicants should submit a concise letter or executive summary stating the organization's mission and need. Applicants also may use the Common Grant Application Format available through Grantmakers of Western Pennsylvania at their Web site: http://www.lm.com/~gwp. All proposals, however, must include the following supporting documents:
- A copy of the organization's Internal Revenue Service certification of tax-exempt status under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.
- A brief history or profile of the organization.
- A full description of the organization's need and projected outcomes.
- For capital needs, the campaign goal or total cost of the specific capital need.
- For operating needs, the operating budget for the period for which funding is requested.
- A statement of sources of committed funds and the amount of support from each contributor.
- A statement of sources of anticipated support, i.e., prospective contributors have been (or will be) solicited and the amounts requested.
- A copy of the organization's most recent audited financial statements.
- A list of the organization's chief executives and members of the Board of Directors/Trustees and their affiliations.
- The signature of an authorized executive of the tax-exempt organization.
- A signed statement of approval by the chief executive of the parent organization if the request originates in a subdivision of such entity.
- A signed statement of approval by the corporate relations or development officer of a college or university if the request originates in a department or subdivision.

About USX Corporation...
USX is composed of the Marathon Group, which includes Marathon Oil Company, a major worldwide producer of oil and natural gas and a significant factor in the domestic refining, marketing and transportation of crude oil and petroleum products, and the U.S. Steel Group, which includes U.S. Steel, one of the nation's leading producers of steel products. Marathon Oil Company was founded in 1887 as The Ohio Oil Company and U.S. Steel Corporation was founded in 1901. Marathon Oil Company was acquired by U.S. Steel in 1982 and, in 1986, the corporation was restructured to form USX Corporation. For more information about USX, visit our Web site at www.usx.com.

About USX Foundation...
USX Foundation, a nonprofit membership corporation, was founded in Delaware in 1953 as the United States Steel Foundation to provide support in a planned and balanced manner for educational, scientific, charitable, civic, cultural and health needs on behalf of United States Steel Corporation. The Foundation was renamed USX Foundation in 1987 following the corporate restructuring. Since 1953, the Foundation has made grants totaling more than $260 million.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION
TOTAL AMOUNT OF FOUNDATION SPENDING ANNUALLY: $15 Million (1998)

GENERAL INFORMATION

GENERAL STATEMENT OF POLICY:
Supports higher education to prepare people for careers in business, government and education, advance knowledge in science and technology especially for minorities and the disadvantaged. Also supports social, civic, and cultural organizations (including United Way), and organizations that foster debate on national public policy issues, for leadership efforts around social problems, employability and student exchange. Also operates an employee matching gift program.

The Xerox Foundation contributed $15 million in 1998 in five broad areas:
- Education and Work Force Preparedness
- Science and Technology
- Employee and Community Affairs
- Cultural
- National Affairs

The management of Xerox has in the past and continues to be committed to a policy of charitable contributions. This policy seeks to position the corporation as an active participant in society. We believe that a corporation today has institutional responsibilities that go beyond its primary economic role. These responsibilities include a concern for the communities around the country in which Xerox conducts business.

Therefore, we will continue to assist a variety of social, civic and cultural organizations that provide broad-based programs and services in cities where our employees work live. We also remain committed to a program of grants to colleges and universities to prepare qualified men and women for careers in business, government and education; to further advance knowledge in science and technology; and to enhance learning opportunities for minorities and disadvantage.

We also invest contribution dollars in a number of organizations that contribute to the debate on major national public policy issues. Worldwide, Xerox philanthropy tries to engage national leadership in addressing major social problems and to support programs in education, employability and cultural affairs. Other areas of particular focus include programs responsive to the national concern for quality and increased productivity, the application of information management technology and general education.

PURPOSES OF GRANTS:
Broad commitment in support of higher education to prepare qualified men and women for careers in business, government and education; advance knowledge in science and technology; enhance learning opportunities for minorities and the disadvantaged. Also operates employee Matching Gifts Program. Supports social, civic and cultural organizations; including United Way, Social Service Leave Program and Xerox Community Involvement Program, which provides broad-based programs and services in cities where Xerox employees live and work; organizations that foster debate on major national public policy issues; and worldwide, for national leadership efforts around major social problems, education, employability, and student exchange. Types of interest: Education; Science and Technology; Minorities; Employment; Arts and Culture; Civics; Children, General; Social Development; Performing Arts; Theatre; Literacy; Public Affairs; Social Issues; AIDS, Poverty Relief; Family Services; Women; Youth.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
The Foundation does not give grants for organizations supported by the United Way, religious organizations, political organizations of candidates, or government agencies. No grants for capital or endowment funds (except for special circumstances and approved by Board of Trustees) and no grants for individuals.

HOW TO APPLY:
No specific application form is used. Applications for grants must be submitted in letter form, preferably no longer than two or three pages. This letter should contain the legal name of the organization, the official contact person, its tax-exempt status, a brief description of its activities and programs, the purpose for which the grant is being requested, the benefits expected, the plans for evaluation, the projected budget, and the expected sources and amount of needed funds. Any additional factual material related to the organization or the request that may be useful for evaluation, plus a copy of the latest annual financial statement, also should be included.

Grants are made only to organizations that have been granted exemption from Federal Income Tax under Section 501 (c)(3) and ruled to be publicly supported under Section 509 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code. Grant reviews take place monthly and the Board of Trustees meet several times a year.

Internal policy decisions, a limited annual budget and/or application of Federal law require the Foundation to decline requests to support:
- Individuals
- Capital grants (new construction or renovation)
- Endowments or Endowed Chairs
- Organizations supported by United Way, unless permission has been granted by United Way to a member agency to conduct a capital fund drive or a special benefit
- Political organizations or candidates
- Religious or sectarian groups
- Municipal, County, State, Federal or quasi-government agencies

The Foundation usually does not make grants for continuing support without a follow-up request. Grants may be approved for one to three years, but in order to limit "annual" grants, all requests from organizations that have previously received support from the Foundation will be evaluated for continued support.

Application Procedure: Program policy statement and application guidelines are available. Initial approach made by brief proposal or letter. Submit one copy of proposal. The Foundation can reached at (203) 968-3333.

GENERAL INFORMATION
DESCRIPTION AND PURPOSE OF PROGRAM:
The Campaign for Human Development (CHD) is sponsored by the Catholic Bishops of the United States. The basic concerns are to address the root causes of poverty and to empower the poor. The funding priorities are:
- Institutional connection; applicant organizations are connected to community-based organizations or intermediaries such as spin-off corporations from community-based organizations;
- High Quality Jobs and Wages (produced by the project);
- Community Control (or low-income ownership is required);
- Equity Grants Tied to Loan Program (grant making may be used in conjunction with a loan).

When the Catholic Bishops of the United States established the Campaign for Human Development (CCHD) in 1970, they mandated the Campaign to fund "such projects as voter registration, community organizations, community-run schools, minority-owned cooperatives and credit unions, capital for industrial development and job training programs, and setting up of rural cooperatives."

Today the Catholic Campaign for Human Development (CCHD) can point to numerous CCHD-funded organizations which have grown and now extend great influence in their communities. In the light of the Catholic Church's moral and social teachings and tradition, CCHD asks organizations requesting funding to understand and adhere to some basic principles which are central to the Catholic mission. CCHD asks those responsible for seeking and managing funds from CCHD to carefully consider the following statements:

- Central to all Catholic moral teaching is the sanctity of human life from conception to natural death. which demonstrate respect for the dignity of the human person. CCHD will not consider projects or organizations which promote or support abortion, euthanasia, the death penalty, or any other affront to human life and dignity.

"Poor and vulnerable people have a special place in Catholic social teaching. A basic moral test of a society is how its most vulnerable members are faring...Our tradition calls us to put the needs of the poor and vulnerable first.

"Flowing from our God-given dignity, each person has basic rights and responsibilities. These include the rights to freedom of conscience and religious liberty, to raise a family, to immigrate, to live free from unfair discrimination, and to have a share of earthly goods sufficient for oneself and one's family. People have a fundamental right to life and to those things that make life truly human: food, clothing, housing, health care, education, security, social services, and employment. Corresponding to these rights are duties and responsibilities to one another, to our families, and to the larger society, to respect the rights of others and to work for the common good."

The common good is "the sum of those conditions of social life which allow social groups, and their individual members, relatively thorough and ready access to their own fulfillment."

Peace is not simply the absence of conflict; it must include efforts which build and promote "a civilization of love". "The goal of peace, so desired by everyone will certainly be achieved...through the practice of virtues which favor togetherness, and which teach us to live in unity, so as to build in unity, by giving and receiving a new society and a better world"

CCHD will not consider projects or programs which promote or support violence, racism, sexism, or other prejudices, in any form. We realize that conflict is inevitable and often an element of social change. However, conflict must take place in an atmosphere of non-violence and respect for human persons. Signatures of authorized project officials on the Grant Agreement indicate adherence to these principles in the administration of any CCHD-funded project.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Community development; Community organizing; Economic development; Empowerment; Housing; Institutional change; Poverty; Self-development. The Campaign funds organizing activity and community development.

APPLICATION INFORMATION
The pre-application is the REQUIRED FIRST STEP for projects not currently funded applying to CCHD for a grant. Only organizations submitting pre-applications postmarked by November 1, will receive the CCHD Funding Booklet, which is required for the full application and proposal. Organizations receiving CCHD funds in 1999 are not required to submit a pre-application unless they are submitting a proposal for a new project. The purpose of the pre-application is to assist CCHD in determining the funding eligibility of a potential proposal. Each year CCHD receives numerous proposals that do not meet the basic eligibility requirements for CCHD funding. The pre-application is also intended to assist potential applicants in determining whether or not to complete the more thorough CCHD application. Read the attached instruction carefully. If you have any questions about any of the information requested, please discuss them with the Diocesan Director(s), or National Staff.

Prepare responses to all the questions on the pre-application form using no more than the space provided plus one additional typewritten page, if necessary.

Mail one pre-application to the appropriate CCHD Diocesan Director(s) and one to the CCHD National Office. Please contact your local Diocesan Director(s) for the appropriate address. The pre-application must be POSTMARKED no later than November 1.

Since the deadline for the full application is January 31 consideration will be given during this pre-application process to projects currently in the preparatory stages of development. However, at the time of making a full application, the proposed project should simultaneously fulfill all of the requirements. After reviewing the pre-application CCHD will advise on whether or not it is advisable to submit a full application. If you do not receive any information by December 13, please contact our Diocesan Director(s) or National Staff. CCHD will notify all pre-applicants of their status by December 13, 1999. Organizations who are successful in meeting CCHD criteria through the pre-application process will receive a complete Funding Booklet containing the required application form and instructions for the project proposal.
CCHD Pre-Application Timeline
September 1999: Pre-Applications available.
September 1999: Funding Booklet mailed to currently funded projects.
November 1, 1999: Pre-applications POSTMARKED. Remember to mail one copy to the Diocesan Director(s) and one copy to the National Office.
November 8-30, 1999: "Pre-app Dialogues" occur between national staff and Diocesan Directors.
December 1-13, 1999: Pre-applicants notified. Full application and Funding Booklet sent to Organizations being encouraged to apply. Those who are discouraged may request full Funding Booklet and apply if they so choose.
November 12, 1999: Time available for consultation and technical.
January 24, 2000: assistance to applicants.
January 31, 2000: Postmark deadline for full applications.

Currently funded organizations considering submitting an application for a new project must do the pre-application for the new project.

REQUIREMENTS:
Funding is for projects that are defined as having a distinct constituency (neighborhoods, Native Americans, minorities, women, etc.) and distinct issues(s) (tribal sovereignty, housing, community development, etc.). Applicants must exhibit the following: Governing Board, low income people have a dominant voice in developing the business and make up one-half of the board.

RESTRICTIONS:
Only supports projects which are consistent with the moral teaching of the Roman Catholic Church.
The following general classifications do not meet CCHD criteria and/or guidelines:

- Direct service project (e.g., day-care center, recreation programs, community centers, scholarships, subsidies, counseling programs, referral services, cultural enrichment programs, direct clinical services, emergency shelters and other services, refugee resettlement programs, etc.)
- Projects controlled by government (federal, state, local), educational or ecclesiastical bodies.
- Research projects, surveys, planning and feasibility studies, etc.
- Projects which have been operating for several years on funds from other funding agencies.
- Individually owned, for-profit businesses.
- Projects engaged in partisan political activities, or projects sponsored by organizations whose major focus is in partisan political activity.
- No CCHD funds will be granted to organizations that would use CCHD money to fund other organizations.

HOW TO APPLY:
To be eligible for CCHD funds, a project must satisfy all of the following criteria and guidelines simultaneously. However, due to limited financial resources, eligibility does not guarantee funding. Please read these as well as the explanations and clarifications that follow.

Criteria
- The project must benefit a poverty group. At least fifty percent (50%) of those benefiting from the project must be from the low-income community.
- Members of the poverty group must have the dominant voice in the project. At least 50% of those who plan, implement and make policy (e.g., the Board of Directors, etc.) should be persons who are involuntarily poor (Clergy, VISTA volunteers, students, etc., are considered by CCHD to be voluntarily poor.) For projects which do not presently meet this criterion, applicants must document the following in the proposal narrative. (Failure to do so will negatively affect the evaluation of the proposal):
  a. Why members of the poverty group do not have the dominant role in planning, implementing and policy-making at the time of application.
  b. How members of the poverty group were involved in determining their need for the project.
  c. What time schedule is planned for the poverty group to assume leadership and control of this Project.
- Funding will not be considered for projects which can be funded by monies available from the private or public sector, unless applicants demonstrate that they are unable to obtain funds from these sources. Proposals applying for "seed money" or "matching money" will be considered. In requesting "seed money" or "matching money" from CCHD, applicants should present positive documentation that other public and/or private sources will commit their funds to this project.
  a. CCHD funds will not be granted to organizations that would utilize CCHD money to fund other organizations.
  b. The project activity for which funding is requested must conform to the moral teachings of the Catholic Church.
Guidelines

Proposed projects must be innovative and demonstrate a change from traditional approaches to poverty by attacking the basic causes of poverty and by effecting institutional change. CCHD defines institutional change as:

a) Modification of existing laws and/or policies;
b) Establishment of alternative structures and/or redistribution of decision-making powers;

Projects Not Meeting CCHD Criteria and/or Guidelines

The following general classifications do not meet CCHD criteria and/or guidelines

- Direct service projects (e.g., day-care center, recreation programs, community centers, scholarships, subsidies, counseling programs, referral services, cultural enrichment programs, direct clinical services, emergency shelters and other services, refugee resettlement programs, etc.)
- Projects controlled by government (federal, state, local), educational or ecclesiastical bodies.
- Research projects, surveys, planning and feasibility studies, etc.
- Projects which have been operating for several years on funds from other funding agencies.
- Individually owned, for-profit businesses.
- Projects engaged in partisan political activities, or projects sponsored by organizations whose major focus is in partisan political activity.
- No CCHD funds will be granted to organizations that would use CCHD money to fund other organizations.

Contact Person: Director

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
To enable federally recognized Indian tribes and tribal corporations to acquire land within tribal reservations and Alaskan communities.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Loan funds may be used to acquire land for the use of the tribe or its members for purposes such as rounding out farming and ranching units or elimination of fractional heirships. Funds may also be used for incidental costs connected with land purchase such as appraisals, title clearance, legal services, land surveys, and loan closing. Types of support: Direct Loans.

ELIGIBILITY:
Limited to any Indian tribe recognized by the Secretary of the Interior or tribal corporation established pursuant to the Indian Reorganization Act or community in Alaska incorporated by the Secretary of Interior which does not have adequate uncommitted funds to acquire lands within the tribe's reservation or in a community in Alaska.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Loan funds cannot be used for any improvement or development purposes, acquisition or repair of buildings or personal property, payment of operating costs, refinancing of debts, payment of finder's fees, or similar costs.

OTHER:
The tribe must be unable to obtain sufficient credit elsewhere at reasonable rates and terms and must be able to show reasonable prospects of repaying the loan as determined by an acceptable repayment plan and a satisfactory management plan for the land being acquired.

HOW TO APPLY

APPLICATION FORM USED: The standard application forms as furnished by the Federal agency and required by OMB Circular No A-102.

DEADLINE: None

OTHER:
Response time: From thirty to ninety days. After application has been recommended by the county committee, the State Director has final approval authority on loans up to $500,000.

Web address: www.usda.gov/rus/water/

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
The Rural Utilities Service's Water Programs Division has four programs, which provide financial and technical assistance for development and operation of safe and affordable water supply systems and sewage and other forms of waste disposal facilities: (1) Water and Waste Disposal Loans and Grants, (2) Emergency Community Water Assistance Grants, (3) Technical Assistance and Training Grants, (4) Solid Waste Management Grants.
AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Provides loans, guaranteed loans, and grants for water, sewer, storm water, and solid waste disposal facilities in rural areas and towns of up to 10,000 people. Loan and grant funds may be used to: (1) construct, repair, modify, expand, or otherwise improve water supply and distribution systems and waste collection and treatment systems, including storm drainage and solid waste disposal facilities. (2) acquire needed land, water sources, and water rights, and (3) pay costs such as legal and engineering fees when necessary to develop the facilities.

ELIGIBILITY:
Applicants must be public entities. These can include municipalities, counties, special purpose districts, Indian tribes, and corporations not operated for profit, including cooperatives. (A new entity may be formed to provide the needed service if an appropriate one does not already exist.)

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Applicants must: (1) Be unable to obtain needed funds from commercial sources at reasonable rates and terms. (2) Have the legal capacity to borrow and to repay loans, to pledge security for loans, and to operate and maintain the facilities. (3) Propose facilities that are consistent with any development plans of the State, multi-jurisdictional area, counties, or municipalities where the project is to be located.

OTHER:
Grants may be provided when necessary to reduce user costs to a reasonable level. They can cover up to 75 percent of eligible facility development costs. Loan guarantees are ordinarily for 80 percent of any loss incurred by the lender; however, a 90 percent guarantee may be issued in unusual circumstances. Lenders pay a one percent guarantee fee, which may be passed on to the loan recipient.

HOW TO APPLY
APPLICATION FORM USED: Yes
GUIDELINES AVAILABLE: Yes
OTHER:
Applications may be filed with the USDA Rural Development office serving the applicant's area. Detailed information and applications are available through the USDA Rural Development State, Local, and Area Offices. State Office locations and telephone numbers may be obtained from the office of the Assistant Administrator, Water and Waste, at (202) 720-9583 or on the internet.

Emergency Community Water Assistance Grants

GENERAL INFORMATION
PURPOSE:
Grants are available to rural communities when disaster strikes. Congress may appropriate funds for the program after a flood, earthquake, or other disaster if Federal assistance is warranted.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Grants may be used to: (1) Extend, repair, or perform significant maintenance on existing water systems; construct new water lines, wells or other sources of water, reservoirs, and treatment plants; replace equipment; and pay costs associated with connection or tap fees. (2) Pay related expenses such as legal and engineering fees and environmental impact analyses, or acquire rights associated with developing sources of, treating, storing, or distributing water. (3) Achieve compliance with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act or with the Safe Drinking Water Act, when noncompliance is directly related to a recent decline in quality of potable water.

ELIGIBILITY:
Public bodies and nonprofit corporations serving rural areas, including cities or towns whose population does not exceed 10,000 people may be eligible. Public bodies include Indian Tribes on Federal and State reservations and other Federally recognized Indian Tribal groups. Applicants must demonstrate that a significant decline in quantity or quality of water occurred within two years of the date the application was filed with RUS.

HOW TO APPLY
Applications are filed with any USDA Rural Development State or District Office.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION

LARGEST GRANT: $500,000
(Grants for repairs, partial replacement, or significant maintenance on an established system cannot exceed $75,000)

Technical Assistance and Training Grants

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
Grants are to provide technical assistance and/or training to associations located in rural areas and to cities and towns with a population of 10,000 or less.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Assistance may be provided to identify and evaluate solutions to water and waste disposal problems, to improve the operation and maintenance of existing water and waste disposal facilities, and to assist associations in preparing applications for water and waste disposal facilities.

ELIGIBILITY:
Private nonprofit organizations may receive grants. (They must have tax exempt status granted by the Internal Revenue Service) Applicants must have the proven ability, background, experience, legal authority, and actual capacity to provide technical assistance and/or training to associations.

DEADLINE: File applications between October 1 and December 31 of each fiscal year.

OTHER:
Solid Waste Management Grants are made available from an amount that is usually stipulated by Congress when it appropriates funds for Water Programs Grants. Grants may be made for up to 100 percent of eligible project costs.

Email address: PSingerm@doc.gov

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
The Program helps states and local areas design and implement strategies for facilitating adjustment to changes in their economic situation that are causing or threaten to cause serious structural damage to the underlying economic base. Such changes may occur suddenly (Sudden & Severe Economic Dislocation) or over time (Long-Term Economic Deterioration), and result from industrial or corporate restructuring, new Federal laws or requirements, reduction in defense expenditures, depletion of natural resources or natural disasters.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Strategy grants provide the recipient with the resources to organize and carry out a planning process resulting in an adjustment strategy tailored to the particular economic problems and opportunities of the impacted area(s). Implementation grants may be used to support one or more activities identified in an adjustment strategy approved though not necessarily funded by EDA. Types of support include, but are not limited to: the creation or expansion of strategically targeted business development and financing programs, including grants for revolving loan funds, infrastructure improvements, organizational development, and market or industry research and analysis.

ELIGIBILITY:
State, city or other political subdivision of a state, or a consortium of such subdivisions, an Indian Tribe, a designated Redevelopment Area (RA), a community development corporation (CDC), or a nonprofit organization determined by EDA to be representative of an RA.

OTHER:
Key selection factors include the severity of the adjustment problem, the quality and potential effectiveness of the adjustment strategy (for implementation investments), and the extent to which the proposed activities will contribute to improving the private sector investment in the types of enterprises and industry sectors that will strengthen the economic base of the area.

HOW TO APPLY
Prospective applicants should contact the Economic Development Representative or regional official for the area to ascertain eligibility and guidance for preparing an investment proposal. Normally no deadline for the submission of proposals exists. After evaluating a proposal, the EDA may invite the submission of a formal application.

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
The Economic Development Administration (EDA) was established under the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 5121), as amended by the Economic Development Administration Reform Act of 1998, to generate jobs, help retain existing jobs, and stimulate industrial and commercial growth in economically-distressed areas of the United States. EDA assistance is available to rural and urban areas of the Nation experiencing high unemployment, low income, or other severe economic distress.

In fulfilling its mission, EDA is guided by the basic principle that distressed communities must be empowered to develop and implement their own economic development and revitalization strategies. Based on these locally- and regionally-developed priorities, EDA works in partnership with state and local governments, regional economic development districts, public and private nonprofit organizations, and Indian tribes. EDA helps distressed communities address problems associated with long-term economic distress, as well as sudden and severe economic dislocations including recovering from the economic impacts of natural disasters, the closure of military installations and other Federal facilities, changing trade patterns, and the depletion of natural resources.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
The agency supports projects that help develop or expand industrial/commercial areas and help create private-sector jobs for unemployed and underemployed residents. Priority of support goes to projects that support the priorities of the U.S. Department of Commerce including: construction and rehabilitation of essential public works infrastructure and economic development facilities; export promotion; commercialization and deployment of technology; sustainable development which will provide long-term economic development benefits, including responses to economic dislocation caused by national environmental policies; eco-industrial parks; entrepreneurial development, especially local capacity building; economic adjustment, infrastructure and development facilities located in federally-authorized and designated rural and urban Enterprise Communities.

ELIGIBILITY:
Eligible applicants are states, local governments, Indian tribes, and nonprofit organizations.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
EDA is not authorized to award grants to for-profit business organizations or private individuals, except under its Research and Evaluation Program. No award of Federal funds will be made to an applicant who has an outstanding delinquent Federal debt until either the account is paid, or other arrangements are made.

OTHER:
EDA will focus its scarce financial resources on communities most in distress. Distress may exist in a variety of forms, including high levels of unemployment, low income levels, large concentrations of low income families, significant decline in per capita income, substantial loss of population because of the lack of employment opportunities, large numbers (or high rates) of business failures, sudden major layoffs or plant closures, and/or reduced tax bases.

HOW TO APPLY
APPLICATION FORM USED: Must submit a completed ED-900A.
DEADLINE: None
OTHER:
Interested applicants should contact the EDA office in their area.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION
AVERAGE GRANT: $42,000
TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS: $2,731,000

PROGRAMS GOALS
Grants under this program support the formulation and implementation of economic development programs designed to create or retain full-time permanent jobs and increase income for the unemployed and underemployed in areas of economic distress.

PROJECT TYPES AND ELIGIBLE APPLICANTS
Planning grants for administrative expenses are awarded to establish and implement effective economic development programs at local and multi-jurisdictional levels. Eligible activities under this program include the preparation and continuation of a Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy (CED Strategy) and planning, and implementation and technical assistance services to communities and local governments within the organization's jurisdiction. Assistance is normally provided for a period of 12 months, not to exceed 50 percent of the total project cost. For economic development districts,
EDA may waive part of the 50 percent local share provided that the non-Federal share is at least 25 percent of the total project cost. For Indian grants, EDA may waive the 50 percent non-Federal share.

Eligible applicants are Economic Development Districts, Redevelopment Areas, Indian tribes, organizations representing Redevelopment Areas or multiple Indian tribes, and commonwealths and territories.

SELECTION CRITERIA
Among the factors EDA considers in evaluating proposals are economic distress of the area, performance of previously funded grantees, and involvement of the local leadership in economic development activities. Priority consideration goes to funded grantees that are performing well.

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
Grants are designed to assist in solving specific economic development problems, respond to development opportunities, and build and expand local organizational capacity in distressed areas.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
The majority of local technical assistance projects focus on technical or market feasibility studies of economic development projects or programs.

ELIGIBILITY:
Public or private nonprofit national, state, area, district, or local organizations; public and private colleges and universities; Indian tribes, local governments; and state agencies.

OTHER:
Selection Criteria focus on proposals that:
- benefit areas of severe economic distress;
- lead to near-term (one to five years) generation or retention of private sector jobs;
- are consistent with the EDA-approved Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy (CEDS);
- document strong local support in terms of financial commitment, public and private leadership involvement (applicants are expected to provide 50 percent of the total project cost); and
- support the Agency's special initiatives identified in the annual "Notice of Funds Authority" published in the Federal Register.

HOW TO APPLY
Potential applicants should contact the Economic Development Representative or regional official with a copy to the appropriate EDA regional office.
Development Representative (EDR) or regional official for the area who will explain the program and guide the applicant in submitting the proposal. EDA will review proposals and decide whether to invite a formal project application.

GENERAL INFORMATION
PURPOSE:
Grants are provided to help distressed communities attract new industry, encourage business expansion, diversify local economies, and generate long-term, private sector jobs.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Types of projects funded are water and sewer facilities primarily serving industry and commerce; access roads to industrial parks or sites; port improvements; and business incubator facilities; technology projects; sustainable development activities; export programs; Brownfields redevelopment and other infrastructure projects. The program is primarily intended to benefit low and moderate-income populations, unemployed and underemployed residents and to help stop out-migration as well as to assist areas experiencing long-term economic distress due to industrial restructuring and business relocation.

ELIGIBILITY:
State, Political subdivision of a state, Indian tribes, special-purpose unit of state and local government, or a public or private nonprofit organization or association acting in cooperation with officials of a political subdivision of a state.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Priority consideration will be given to projects that:
• improve opportunities for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial facilities;
• assist in creating or retaining private sector jobs in the near term, as well as providing additional long-term employment opportunities, provided the jobs are not transferred from other labor market areas;
• benefit the long-term unemployment and members of low-income families residing in the area served by the project;
• fulfill a pressing need of the area and can be started and completed in a timely manner;
• demonstrate adequate local funding, with evidence that such support is committed;
• be supported by significant private sector investment.

OTHER:
Proposed projects must be located within an EDA-designated Redevelopment Area (RA) or Economic Development Center. Projects in other areas of an EDA-designated Economic Development District are also eligible if they will directly benefit a RA within the District. Projects must be consistent with an approved Overall Economic Development Program (OEDP).

HOW TO APPLY
Eligible applicants should contact the Economic Development Representative (EDR) or other appropriate EDA regional office in the area. The EDA regional office official or EDR will describe the program and provide guidance on preparing a proposal for EDA's consideration. EDA evaluates proposals before deciding whether to invite formal applications.

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
The goal of the Health Careers Opportunity Program (HCOP) is to assist individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds to undertake education to enter a health profession. The HCOP program works to build diversity in the health fields by providing students from disadvantaged backgrounds an opportunity to develop the skills needed to successfully compete, enter, and graduate from health professions schools.

PROGRAM SUMMARY:
The legislative purposes from which HCOP funds may be awarded are:
- Identifying, recruiting, and selecting individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds for education and training in a health profession;
- Facilitating the entry of such individuals into such a school;
- Providing counseling, mentoring, or other services designed to assist such individuals to complete successfully their education at such a school;
- Providing, for a period prior to the entry of such individuals into the regular course of education or complete successfully such regular course of education at such a school, or referring such individuals to institutions providing such preliminary education;
- Publicizing existing sources of financial aid available to students in the education program of such a school or who are undertaking training necessary to qualify them to enroll in such a program;
- Paying scholarships, as the Secretary may determine, for such individuals for any period of health professions education at a health professions school;
- Paying such stipends for such individuals for any period of education in student-enhancement programs (other than regular courses), except that such a stipend may not be provided to an individual for more than 12 months;
- Carrying out programs under which such individuals gain experience regarding a career in a field of primary health care through working at facilities of public or private nonprofit community-based providers of primary health services; and
- Conducting activities to develop a larger and more competitive applicant pool through partnerships with institutions of higher education, school districts, and other community-based entities.

ELIGIBILITY:
Eligible applicants include schools of medicine, osteopathic medicine, public health, dentistry, veterinary medicine, optometry, pharmacy, allied health, chiropractic, podiatric medicine, public or nonprofit private schools that offer graduate programs in behavioral and mental health, programs for the training of physician assistants, and other public or private nonprofit health or educational entities.

$50,000 to United Tribes of Kansas and Southeast Nebraska, Inc. The program will provide energy conservation measures, energy efficiency education, and energy related repairs, giving special consideration to the elderly, the handicapped and household with children, 1998.

$175,000 to Central Council Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes, including $25,000 for energy efficiency education. The Central Council will identify those families in most critical need of energy assistance and provide them energy education prior to the heating season, budget planning and counseling, and link them with other Central Council social service, family preservation, weatherization, and housing Programs.

$70,738 to Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians. This project will increase and enhance intervention and education services given to previous eligible REACH recipients during office visits while they complete applications and/or seek referrals for additional assistance with paying heating expenses. The tribe will continue to coordinate a statewide information dissemination system on energy education to all tribes within the state of Michigan, using resources and professional guidance that was secured through prior REACH grants.

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
The goal of this program is to assist eligible schools in supporting programs of excellence in health professions education for under-represented minority individuals.

Program summary:
The grantee is required to use the funds awarded:
- to develop a large competitive applicant pool through linkages with institutions of higher education, local school districts, and other community-based entities and establish an education pipeline for health professions careers;
- to establish, strengthen, or expand programs to enhance the academic performance of under-represented minority students attending the school;
- to improve the capacity of such school to train, recruit, and retain under-represented minority faculty including the payment of stipends and fellowships;
- to carry out activities to improve the information...
resources, clinical education, curricula and cultural competence of the graduates of the schools, as it relates to minority health issues;
- to facilitate faculty and student research on health issues particularly affecting under-represented minority groups, including research on issues relating to the delivery of health care;
- to carry out a program to train students of the school in providing health services to a significant number of under-represented minority individuals through training provided to such students at community-based health facilities that provide such health services and are located at a site remote from the main site of the teaching facilities of the school; and
- to provide stipends.

The $500,000 minimum award per year is no longer required.

ELIGIBILITY:
Accredited schools of medicine, osteopathic medicine, dentistry, and pharmacy, as well as certain Historically Black Colleges and Universities. GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
To assist minority institutions to develop and strengthen their biomedical research training capabilities. As a result, these schools are able to motivate and interest students in, as well as prepare them for, pursuing doctoral study and biomedical research careers.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
National Research Service Awards are made directly to individuals for research training in specified biomedical areas. In addition, grants may be made to institutions to enable them to make National Research Service Awards to individuals selected by them; these individuals must be honors undergraduate students in their junior or senior years who intend to pursue a Ph.D., M.D., or other combined professional-Ph.D. degree in the biomedical sciences.

Types of support: Project grants

ELIGIBILITY:
Any nonfederal public or private nonprofit four-year university or college with substantial enrollment of underrepresented minority students may apply. Individual National Research Service awardees must be nominated and sponsored by a public or nonprofit private institution having staff and facilities appropriate to the proposed research training program. Predoctoral awardees must have completed the baccalaureate degree and must have been accepted into a Ph.D., or combined professional degree-Ph.D., training program in the biomedical or behavioral sciences. Predoctoral faculty fellows must have been full-time faculty in the biomedical sciences for at least three years before the date of application. Senior faculty fellows must have received the Ph.D., or equivalent degree at least seven years before the date of application.

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
To address the lack of representation of minorities in biomedical research, MBRS awards grants to institutions with substantial minority enrollments to support research projects by faculty members and to provide opportunities for students to work as part of a research team. This support has the added benefit of strengthening the institution’s biomedical research capabilities.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
MBRS grants support biomedical research projects. They may also provide salary funds for students, who are selected by the grantee institutions, to participate in developmental activities. Funds may be used for developmental activities for faculty, students, and the institution.

ELIGIBILITY:
Four-year colleges, universities, and health professional schools with 50 percent or more minority enrollment; two-year and four-year institutions with significant, but not necessarily over 50 percent, minority enrollment, provided they have a history of encouragement and assistance to minorities; two-year colleges with 50 percent minority enrollment; Indian tribes that have a recognized governing body and perform substantial governmental functions and; Alaskan Regional Corporations, as defined in the Alaska Native Claims Settlement.

Contact Person: Contact your local municipal or county officials.

Web address: www.hud.gov/cpd/statefct.html

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
The primary statutory objective of the CDBG program is to develop viable communities by providing decent housing and a suitable living environment and by expanding economic opportunities, principally for persons of low and moderate income.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Communities receiving CDBG funds from the State may use the funds for many kinds of community development activities including, but not limited to: acquisition of property for public purposes; construction or reconstruction of streets, water and sewer facilities, neighborhood centers, recreation facilities, and other public works; demolition; rehabilitation of public and private buildings; public services; planning activities; assistance to nonprofit entities for community development activities; and assistance to private for-profit entities to carry out economic development activities (including assistance to micro-enterprises).

OTHER:
HUD distributes funds to each State based on a formula which takes into account population, poverty, incidence of overcrowded housing, and age of housing. The State must ensure that at least 70 percent of its CDBG grant funds are used for activities that benefit low and moderate income persons over a one, two, or three year time period selected by the State. Under unique circumstances, States may also use their funds to meet urgent community development needs. A need is considered urgent if it poses a serious and immediate threat to the health or welfare of the community.

HOW TO APPLY
If you are an interested citizen, contact your local municipal or county officials for more information. The local government may have received or may have applied for a grant from the State. If you are a local official, you should contact the agency that administers the program for your State. If your local government or State officials cannot answer your questions, contact the HUD Field Office that serves your area. Note that the State administers the program and determines which local projects receive funding.

Indian Housing Block Grants

Headquarters Address and Telephone:
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Native American Programs
451 7th Street SW, Room 4126
Washington, DC 20410

Contact Person: Local HUD Office

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
To provide Federal assistance for Indian tribes with housing activities in a manner that recognizes the right of tribal self-governance, and for other purposes.

On October 26, 1996, President Clinton signed into law the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996 (NAHASDA). This Act recognized the right of tribal self-governance and the unique relationship between the Federal Government and the governments of Indian tribes. NAHASDA reorganizes and simplifies the Department's system of housing assistance to Native Americans by eliminating several separate HUD programs of assistance and replacing them with a single block grant program made directly to the tribes or tribally designated housing entities (TDHEs).

NAHASDA significantly changes the HUD provided housing funds to Indian communities. Annual grants are made in the form of an Indian Housing Block Grant (IHBG) that offers maximum flexibility to tribes or TDHEs to design, implement and administer their own unique housing programs. However, the purpose of the IHBG remains, as it was with previous HUD programs, housing assistance for the benefit of low-income families that is appropriate for local circumstances. The amount of a recipient's IHBG is based upon a formula comprised of two components, the statutory requirement and practical necessity to maintain a tribe's current existing housing stock built under the United States Housing Act of 1937 (USHA) and the need for additional low-income housing in the tribe's service area.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
The objective of the ICDBG program is to assist eligible recipients to develop viable communities, including decent housing, a suitable living environment, and economic opportunities, principally for persons of low and moderate income. The program can provide funding for recipients in the following categories:

- Housing - Includes housing rehabilitation, land acquisition to support new housing construction, and under limited circumstances, new housing construction.
- Community Facilities - Includes infrastructure construction, e.g., roads, water and sewer facilities, and single or multi-purpose community buildings.
- Economic Development - Includes a wide variety of commercial, industrial, or agricultural projects which may be recipient owned and operated or which may be owned and/or operated by a third party.

ELIGIBILITY:
An Indian tribe, or its TDHE, submits an Indian Housing Plan (IHP) to the Office of Native American Programs for review and a determination of its compliance with NAHASDA. It is not an "application" process seeking "approval" of an activity. The IHP consists of a Five-year Plan intended to be an overview of the direction that a recipient takes to meet its housing needs, and a plan detailing the resources the recipient has available, immediate need for housing and its specific plan to utilize those resources in meeting its low-income housing needs.

Eligible applicants for assistance include any Indian tribe, band, group, or nation, (including Alaska Indians, Aleuts, and Eskimos), or Alaska Native village which has established a relationship to the Federal government as defined in the program Regulations. In certain instances, tribal organizations may be eligible to apply.

HOW TO APPLY
Inquiries should be addressed to the Administrator, Office of Native American Programs at the appropriate area office.

The purpose of this program is to provide short-term technical assistance to Tribes/TDHEs and resident organizations (RO) that are combating drug-related crime and abuse of controlled substances in Indian housing communities. These funds are used to reimburse consultants who provide expert advice (maximum 30 days of work) and work with tribal communities or RO to assist them in gaining skills and training to eliminate drug abuse and related problems for their communities. DETAP funds can be used to assess drug problems in Indian housing communities; design and identify appropriate anti-crime and anti-drug related practices and programs such as law enforcement strategies; youth initiatives; resident patrols; security and physical design; community organization and leadership development.

Youth Leadership and Development Training sessions are held annually. These sessions bring together Native American and Alaskan Native youth in a university setting to improve team building and conflict resolution skills; offer diversity awareness and sensitivity training; develop a community action plan and introduce youth to entrepreneurship opportunities. The ONAP is also coordinating a series of regional workshops for adults that include sessions on fundraising and the successful development of mentoring and entrepreneurship programs for youth.

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
To provide assistance to Federally Recognized Indian Tribal Governments, Native American Organizations, and individual American Indians in obtaining financing from private sources to promote business development initiatives on or near Federally Recognized Indian Reservations. The program was established by the Indian Financing Act of 1914 to stimulate and increase Indian entrepreneurship and employment through establishment, acquisition or expansion of Indian-owned economic enterprises.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
Loans may be used to finance Indian owned commercial, industrial, agricultural, and business activities.
organized for profit. Types of support Guaranteed and Insured Loans.

ELIGIBILITY:
Federaally recognized Indian Tribal Governments, Native American Organizations authorized by Indian tribal governments, and individual American Indians.

1. Any lender regularly engaged in making loans, possessing the capacity to accept, process, and service loans, and satisfactory to the Bureau of Indian Affairs, may obtain a guaranty.
2. The borrower must be a federally recognized tribe or Alaska Native group, member of such tribe or group or an Indian-owned organization.
3. A minimum of 20 percent equity, in either cash and/or unencumbered assets, to be used in the business being financed, is required.
4. The business must be located on or near a reservation or recognized service area and contribute to the economy of the reservation.
5. The borrower may not be delinquent on any federal financial obligation. The borrower may not obtain a loan if there is any outstanding unresolved federal debt.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Loan guarantees to private lenders will only be provided if funds otherwise would be unavailable to the borrower. Funds may not be used for speculation. The financial assistance must be used on or near an Indian Reservation.

1. $500,000 is the maximum loan that can be guaranteed for individuals, partnerships and corporations.
2. $5.5 million is the maximum loan that can be guaranteed for Tribes.
3. The percentage of a loan that is guaranteed is the minimum necessary to obtain financing, but may not exceed 90 percent of the unpaid principal and interest on a loan.
4. A one-time premium payment of two percent of the guaranteed portion of a loan is charged to the bank. The lender may charge the premium to the borrower.
5. The maturity of the loan is determined by the lender based upon the use of the loan proceeds and the repayment capacity of the borrower; except 30 years is the maximum maturity term.
6. Interest rates for a 90 percent guaranty may not exceed New York prime rate plus 1 1/9 percent. Interest rates for loans guaranteed at a lesser percentage rate may not exceed prime rate plus 2 3/4 percent.
7. An interest subsidy may be provided, based on borrower need, but may not exceed five years.
8. Lenders will require borrowers to give security, if available, up to an amount adequate to protect the loan without consideration of the guaranty.

HOW TO APPLY

DEADLINE: None. Borrowers will work directly with lenders for guaranteed loans. Upon a lender's approval of an application for a guaranteed loan, the lender will request a loan guaranty from the Bureau of Indian Affairs office where the business is located.

The application for a loan guaranty must include the following:

1. The name and address of the borrower with the tax identification number if the borrower is an organization or the social security number if an individual;
2. The loan amount, interest rate, term, repayment schedule, and the percentage of guaranty requested, if applicable;
3. Sources and uses of funds, with specific reference to the total project cost, the borrower's equity or personal investment, and any interest subsidy required;
4. An itemized description of loan collateral offered to secure the loan, the value and the method used to value the collateral, the date of such valuation, who performed the valuation, details concerning any existing liens;
5. A business plan for the economic enterprise, including proposed management, a marketing strategy, and financial need;
6. Financial statements of the borrower and any principals of the borrower for the current and the past three years, to the extent available;
7. The borrower's income tax returns, balance sheets, and operating statements for the three preceding years, to the extent available;
8. The borrower's pro forma balance sheets, operating statements and cash flow statements for at least three years, including a detailed description of key revenue and expense assumptions;
9. How title will be taken to any property purchased with loan proceeds;
10. Types and amounts of insurance to be carried;
11. The lender's evaluation of the economic feasibility of the enterprise and its internal loan analysis;
12. A Statement signed by the borrower stating whether the borrower is delinquent with any Federal tax or other obligations, or has ever defaulted on a federal direct or guaranteed loan; and 13. A current credit bureau report on the borrower.

OTHER:
Response time: Fifteen to thirty days depending upon completeness of loan package. Applications for loan guarantees should be submitted by the lender at the local Bureau of Indian Affairs Agency or Tribal Loan Administration Office. Lenders should contact the local office for information and documentation needed to complete an application.

Web address: http://arts.endow.gov

GENERAL INFORMATION

PURPOSE:
The National Endowment for the Arts is the Federal grantmaking agency that Congress created to support the visual, literary, design, and performing arts, to benefit all Americans. The Arts Endowment's mission is twofold: to foster the excellence, diversity, and vitality of the arts in the United States, and to broaden public access to the arts.

AREAS OF INTEREST AND/OR TYPES OF SUPPORT:
The endowment welcomes projects that: Assist and involve individual artists and have national, regional, or field-wide impact or availability, or that provide an unusual or especially valuable contribution because of geographic location. This includes small projects that can have a significant impact within their community or field.

ELIGIBILITY:
The Arts Endowment offers assistance for a full range of arts disciplines and types and sizes of organizations that are involved in the arts. In order to apply, an organization must: be nonprofit, tax-exempt, have a four-year history of programming, except for applicants for folk and traditional arts projects, and have professional staff who can devote the required time and effort to the project.

RESTRICTIONS ON GRANTS:
Assistance is not available for elementary or secondary schools directly; a vocational or student groups; new organizations; or for the construction, purchase, or renovation of facilities. The Endowment does not provide seasonal or general operating support.

OTHER:
Grants are awarded only for specific projects. A project may consist of one or more specific events or activities. All phases of a project, from planning through implementation, are eligible. A project does not have to be new; existing projects are competitive.

HOW TO APPLY

APPLICATION FORM USED: Yes

GUIDELINES AVAILABLE: Yes—see "Other"

DEADLINE: See specific project deadlines.

OTHER:
If you are interested in applying, you must obtain the current "Grants to Organizations Guidelines" that are available from the Endowment or its World Wide Web site. The Guidelines contain detailed application information and the forms that applicants must use to apply.

Applications are reviewed on the basis of: Artistic excellence and artistic merit; the potential impact of the project; and the applicant's ability to carry out the project.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION

RANGE OF GRANTS: $5,000 to $200,000

TOTAL AMOUNT OF GRANT FUNDS: $99,494,000 (FY 1997)

Programs for organizations:

Creativity
Purpose: To assist the creation of new artistic work and encourage the public presentation, exhibition, performance, and publication of artistic works of all cultures and periods.
Deadline: March 27

Stability
Purpose: To enable organizations to assess their strengths, weaknesses, and financial health, and to develop strategies for improvement. To help organizations implement projects or achieve financial goals that will strengthen their institutional capacity.
Deadline: March 27

Preservation
Purpose: To assist, preserve, document, and present those artists and forms of artistic expression that reflect our nation's diverse cultural traditions. To conserve important works of art.
Deadline: August 14
Education and Access

Purpose: To support, within the broad context of lifelong learning in the arts, pre-K through 12 curriculum-based projects and other types of educational projects for learners of all ages that may be undertaken by arts and other organizations. To help organizations provide the public with access to excellence in the arts, often focusing on those whose opportunities to participate may have been limited by geographic, ethnic, or economic constraints.

Deadline: August 14 (Note: Education and Access are separate categories)

Literature Fellowships

Purpose: To advance the goal of expanding the opportunities for artists to interpret, explore, and create work by providing fellowships to published creative writers and translators of exceptional talent in the areas of prose and poetry. This program operates on a two-year cycle with fellowships in prose available one year and fellowships in poetry available the next.

Fellowships for Creative Writers

Purpose: Fellowships are available to published creative writers of exceptional talent. Fellowships enable recipients to set aside time for writing, research, travel, and general career advancement.

Deadline Poetry (FY 2001): March 14

Translation Projects

Purpose: Grants are available to published translators of literature for projects that involve the specific translation of prose (fiction, creative nonfiction, and drama) or poetry (including verse drama) from other languages into English. NEA encourages translations of writers and of work which are insufficiently represented in English translation. All proposed projects must be for creative translations of published literary material into English. The work to be translated should be of interest for its literary excellence and value.
