Community college students are often described as less motivated, or "turned-off," compared to other college students. This stereotype has prevented many writing instructors from trying new ways of reaching these students at a Midwest community college, the majority of whom have access to the Internet either at home or in the local library. Using an instructor's home page to assist students' writing has become increasingly important to the students. Two projects have been conducted in the author's writing classes by using the Instructor's Home Page, one on The Three Gorges Dam in China and one on sample essay evaluation. Projects like this, which have been incorporated into China-Year celebrations, greatly stimulate the students' interests in other cultures. A checklist for building a student-friendly home page is also attached. (Author/RS)
Conference on College Composition and Communication, March 14-17, 2001, Denver, Colorado

E.23. Home away from Home: Creating and Evaluation Instructional Web Sites

Presenter: Will Zhang, Des Moines Area Community College (http://www.dmacc.org/instructors/wwzhang

Topic: Making a "Web" for Students: From the Classroom to Their Homes and to the Instructor's Home Page.

Abstract: Community college students are often described as less motivated, or "turned-off" ones. The stereotype of these college students has prevented many writing instructors from trying new ways of reaching these students who desperately need help. Based on a survey among students at a Mid-west community college, the majority of them have access to the Internet either at home or in the local library. Using instructors' Home Page to assist students' writing has become increasingly important to the students. Two Projects have been conducted in my writing classes by using the Instructor's Home Page, one on Three Gorges Dam in China, and one on sample essay evaluation. Projects like this which has been incorporated into China-Year celebrations, greatly stimulate the students' interests in other cultures. A checklist for building a student-friendly Home page is also attached.
Making a "Web" for Students: From the Classroom to Their Homes and to the Instructor's Home Page

1. Community College Students and the World Wide Web: A Survey

Community college students are often described as less motivated, or "turned-off" ones by local communities. The stereotype of these college students has prevented many writing instructors from trying new ways to reach these students who desperately need help. However, in the late 90s, two changes among community college students are very noticeable that they are getting busier and busier and that more of them surf on the Internet regularly.

According to a survey on 95 students at a community college in the Mid-west, 89% have one or two jobs, working 20-45 hours a week. Classrooms are often their only time for study. Frequently, they try to complete the assignments the night before due dates. Therefore, it is hard for them to get any professional help at this time. On the other hand, 62% have access to the Internet either at home or in the local library.

Using instructors' Home page to assist students' writing has become increasingly important to the students. But there are two major problems with the instructors' Home pages. First, the Home pages are developed and maintained by computer professionals who usually update the Home pages once a semester. Some have even been left not updated for years. Actually, they are not functioning ones. Second, though functioning, they lack major functions such as the most needed assistance. More commonly used technology in English classes includes distant learning and web-assisted classes such as Daedalus. However, a very useful way of using technology has not been widely discussed, which is using instructors' home pages to compensate for the limited classroom teaching.

2. Making the Instructor's Home Page an Educational Site: Two Projects

The students in my writing classes have worked on two projects with the help of the Instructor's Home Page. One is on Three Gorges Dam in China for Composition II, and the other one on sample essays evaluation for Basic Writing and Introduction to Writing Skills.
As the college focuses on China as a country for cultural awareness in the academic year 2000-2001, the first project aims to let the students work on a specific project of Three Gorges Dam in China while arguing about environmentalism in a broader sense. My Home page reserved a special space for the background information on the Three Gorges Dam. On the Home page, my students can see pictures of the Dam, read relevant articles on the history and current situation of the Dam, and download articles concerning about major arguments on the Dam. The students are able to argue their points in their Web-assisted class. At the same time, some good, relevant sites and good academic search engines are also introduced to the students. Projects like this, which has been incorporated into China-Year celebrations, greatly stimulate the students' interests in other cultures. Without an instructor’s Home page, this project would have been difficult, if not possible, to implement.

Many sample essays posted on my Home page are written by native speakers of English as well as well ESL students. However, all the students can benefit from each other's writings. Both my students in ESL classes and those in my mainstream writing classes need to evaluate each other's essays. ESL students can learn the authentic way (world choice and grammar, for example) to express ideas from the sample essays written by native speakers. Students in my mainstream classes can learn grammar and different cultures by proofreading essays written by ESL students.

All students would receive worksheets before they started. They may choose whichever essay they like to read. Though the posted essays written by native speakers are limited, hundreds of essays written by ESL students are posted on the Web. They were required to read minimum 1,500 words, and submitted the worksheets to me for credits.

The findings show that the ESL students can learn vocabulary and the American culture from the essays written by native speakers, while the American students can learn other cultures from the ESL students. They can also learn to fix mechanics by proofreading and editing the essays written by ESL students. This has been proven to be a very effective way of polishing their own grammar and their own writing.
A Checklist of an Instructor's Student-Friendly Home Page

1. The front page layout
   (A students-friendly layout needs to be clear, concise, and provides students' the most important information)

   ✓ Bulletin board(s)
   ✓ A menu
   ✓ Instructor's email address and major phone numbers
     (including toll free number)
   ✓ Instructors' photo (preferably at the top)
   ✓ The college logo and link
   ✓ Dates created and updated

2. The menu

   ✓ The college
   ✓ The instructor
   ✓ Syllabi
   ✓ Handouts & assignments
   ✓ Sample essays
   ✓ Writing resources
   ✓ Cool links
   ✓ Campus shots

3. About the instructor

   ✓ Office, office hours, office phone number, fax number
     (Could also in the syllabus)
   ✓ Instructor's educational background (preferably not on the front page)
   ✓ Instructor's research
   ✓ Samples of students' comments (be more objective)

4. Handouts and assignments

   ✓ Major class handouts
   ✓ All essay assignments
   ✓ Some worksheets (excluding peer response sheets)

5. Sample essays

   ✓ Essays in different writing classes (*different categories)
   ✓ Instructor's comments
   ✓ Instructor's announcement on posting students' essays
6. About the writing resources

✓ Major academic search engines
✓ Major academic links
✓ Major documentation styles (APA/MLA)

7. Cool links

✓ Assignment-related info links
✓ Other instructors' home pages
✓ College links on international/cultural week/year events

8. Campus shots

✓ Class activities (writing workshop, class debate, group work, etc.)
✓ Student activities (buying books, learning center, commencement, etc.)
✓ College cultural events
✓ Campus scenery

Do’s and Don’ts on an Instructor’s Home Page

☐ Do learn to maintain your home page by yourself.
☐ Do update it at least once a week (keep the home page alive).
☐ Do have the date of home page last updated.
☐ Do have a menu appear at the top part of the front page.
☐ Do make the home page academic.
☐ Do highlight the menu.
☐ Do have all front-page items in proportion (photo, phone number, menu, etc.).
☐ Don’t post family photos on the front page.

➢ Don’t post the description of the instructor’s background on the front page.
➢ Don’t make the home page too fancy (cartoons are preferred on some occasions).
➢ Don’t highlight items other than classroom teaching.
➢ Don’t lay out everything without a menu.
➢ Don’t have an unprofessional instructor’s photo.
➢ Don’t make the background color either too dull or too busy.
I. DOCUMENT IDENTIFICATION:

Title: Making a 'Web' for Students: From the Classroom to Their Homes and to the Instructor's Home Page,

Author(s): William Zhang

Corporate Source: Des Moines Area Community College, Ankeny, Iowa

Publication Date: March 15, 2001

II. REPRODUCTION RELEASE:

In order to disseminate as widely as possible timely and significant materials of interest to the educational community, documents announced in the monthly abstract journal of the ERIC system, Resources in Education (RIE), are usually made available to users in microfiche, reproduced paper copy, and electronic media, and sold through the ERIC Document Reproduction Service (EDRS). Credit is given to the source of each document, and, if reproduction release is granted, one of the following notices is affixed to the document.

If permission is granted to reproduce and disseminate the identified document, please CHECK ONE of the following options and sign in the indicated space following.

The sample sticker shown below will be affixed to all Level 1 documents

PERMISSION TO REPRODUCE AND DISSEminate THIS MATERIAL IN MICROFiche AND IN ELECTRONIC MEDIA FOR ERIC COLLECTION SUBSCRIBERS ONLY, HAS BEEN GRANTED BY

TO THE EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)

Level 1

X

Check here for Level 1 release, permitting reproduction and dissemination in microfiche or other ERIC archival media (e.g. electronic) and paper copy.

The sample sticker shown below will be affixed to all Level 2A documents

PERMISSION TO REPRODUCE AND DISSEminate THIS MATERIAL IN MICROFiche ONLY HAS BEEN GRANTED BY

TO THE EDUCATIONAL RESOURCES INFORMATION CENTER (ERIC)

Level 2A

Check here for Level 2A release, permitting reproduction and dissemination in microfiche only.
THE DOCUMENT AVAILABILITY INFORMATION (FROM NON-ERIC SOURCE):

If permission to reproduce is not granted to ERIC, or, if you wish ERIC to cite the availability of the document from another source, please provide the following information regarding the availability of the document. (ERIC will not announce a document unless it is publicly available, and a dependable source can be specified. Contributors should also be aware that ERIC selection criteria are significantly more stringent for documents that cannot be made available through EDRS.)

Publisher/Distributor: N/A
Address:
Price:

IV. REFERRAL OF ERIC TO COPYRIGHT/REPRODUCTION RIGHTS HOLDER:

If the right to grant this reproduction release is held by someone other than the address, please provide the appropriate name and address:

Name: N/A
Address:

V. WHERE TO SEND THIS FORM:

Send this form to: ERIC Clearinghouse on Reading, English, and Communication (ERIC/REC).

ERIC/REC Clearinghouse
2803 E 10th St Suite 140
Bloomington, IN 47408-2698
Telephone: 812-859-5947
Toll Free: 800-759-4723
FAX: 812-856-5512