ABSTRACT

There are many issues concerning women of all ages and substance abuse. Women who abuse alcohol or other drugs are particularly at risk for sexual assault; unprotected sex; unwanted pregnancies; and sexually transmitted diseases. Females between the ages of 12 and 17 surpass males in their use of cigarettes; cocaine; crack; inhalants; and prescription drugs, according to the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention. The use of alcohol, tobacco, or other drugs during pregnancy continues to be a leading preventable cause of mental, physical, and psychological impairments and problems in infants and children. This paper provides tips and resources geared specifically towards women to help communities undertake the needed measures to reduce substance use and abuse. A list is included of national organizations, publications, and names of community leaders who work in the field of substance abuse. (JDM)

Description of the Issue

There are a number of issues related to women and substance abuse. Issues related to the use and abuse of alcohol, tobacco or other drugs for young women, violence and abuse, issues of health for women as well as pregnant and post-partum women and the effects of substances on the fetus are some examples. Alcohol, tobacco, and other drug abuse can have devastating consequences on women's health. Lung cancer rates among females, for example, have increased sixfold in the past 40 years. Lung cancer now has passed breast cancer as the leading fatal cancer for women. Women who abuse alcohol and/or drugs are at particular risk for: sexual assault, unprotected sex, unwanted pregnancies and sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV/AIDS according to the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention. The incidence of AIDS is increasing more rapidly among women than men, with heterosexual contact rather than intravenous drug use fast becoming the primary method of transmission to women.

According to the Center for Substance Abuse, among 12- to 17-year-olds, females surpass males in the use of cigarettes, cocaine, crack, inhalants, and prescription drugs (such as stimulants, sedatives, and tranquilizers) for nonmedical reasons. Alcohol use by preteen girls can delay the onset of puberty, interfering with adolescent maturation.

Lastly, the use of alcohol, tobacco, and/or other drugs (ATOD) during pregnancy continues to be a leading preventable cause of mental, physical, and psychological impairments and problems in infants and children. According to a recent National Institute on Drug Abuse study on estimated use of selected substances during pregnancy, 5.5 percent of the women surveyed reported using illicit drugs while they were pregnant. Additionally, 18.8 percent reported using alcohol, and 20.4 percent reported using tobacco.

What follows is a list of national organizations, publications, community leaders with an expertise in women and substance abuse, and community stories.

Reaching Out to Disadvantaged Rural Women Experiencing Substance Abuse Problems

This project is designed to help rural women experiencing substance abuse problems, poverty and economic disadvantages. Monthly workshops are given to encourage women to start home and small businesses. Life issue problems such as substance abuse, physical abuse, codependency, grief and parenting difficulties are discovered and help is provided. Women are seen by counselors weekly and the counselors report that the majority of caseloads are substance abuse related. Through anecdotal evidence, the program reports that attendance by women at the local Alcoholics Anonymous meeting is up by about 30 percent. For more information, contact Janis L. McLaughlin at Heartland Circle, 133 Bennett Street, Wellington, OH 44090; Tel: 440-647-6086; Eml: HEARTLANDCIRCLE@prodigy.net.

Residential Treatment Program Prevents Fetal Alcohol Syndrome

Southcentral Foundation Dena A. Coy Transitional Support Program is a residential treatment program designed for the prevention of Fetal Alcohol Syndrome and Fetal Alcohol Effects. Women with substance abuse and other co-existing issues are provided with individualized residential treatment addressing addiction, mental health, parenting education, life skills, spirituality/culture and wellness as well as comprehensive aftercare services. The goal is to have participants progress to sober, independent living and return to the community as productive and responsible adults and parents. To meet this objective, the Transitional Support Program service consists of four primary components including Mental Health Therapy; Life Skills Case Management; Chemical Dependency Case Management; and PyschoEducational Groups and Family Activities. For more information, contact Lorraine Namyniuk at 3916 E. 9th Avenue, Anchorage, AK 99508; Tel: 907-333-6677; Fax: 907-333-1716.
