The Mississippi Fine Arts Framework is designed to develop K-12 students' interest and expertise in dance, music, theater arts, and visual arts. The introductory fine arts course, for secondary level students, explores the relationship and the function of the arts in both historical and contemporary culture through creative projects, performance, oral presentation, cooperative learning activities, and research projects. Courses in dance, music, theater arts, and visual arts are to be implemented beginning with kindergarten and continuing through each elementary grade, middle school grade, and through high school. Each subject area is divided into strands with specific competencies and suggested objectives presented. Each subject (dance, music, theater arts, and visual arts) contains a glossary of terms and a suggested resource list. (BT)

"... The arts have been an inseparable part of the human journey; indeed, we depend on the arts to carry us toward the fullness of our humanity. We value them for themselves, and because we do, we believe knowing and practicing them is fundamental to the healthy development of our children’s minds and spirits. That is why, in any civilization - ours included - the arts are inseparable from the very meaning of the term "education." We know from long experience that no one can claim to be truly educated who lacks basic knowledge and skills in the arts."

CLASSICAL BALLET

GRADES 4-12 COURSE DESCRIPTION

In the beginning of classical ballet training, the exercises at the barre are executed facing the barre. They are first executed à la seconde and then devant. When these are relatively secure and understood, exercises will be introduced derrière.

Only when placement and posture are secure for the level of training, students begin to execute barre exercises with one hand, on the barre. Periodic returns to facing the barre are necessary to re-emphasize proper placement and to introduce new pas.

First and second positions of the legs are used in the beginning weeks. Third is introduced next and fifth on an individual basis. Fourth position is the last one to be introduced.

Classroom protocol is strictly observed from the very beginning of training, as is the discipline of preparing the hair and being prepared with all of the proper attire. This includes proper entrance and exit of class and proper stance at the barre and in the centre. In addition, each student is expected to show respect to the teacher, accompanist, and fellow students. No deviation will be tolerated.

This curriculum is designed by correlating the objectives to the acquisition of proper classical technique and a knowledge of the vocabulary of classical dance. Four levels of instruction are delineated. However, these do not necessarily denote grade level. Several years may be required to complete one level.
Level I
The main emphasis of the beginning year of training is on the correct alignment and body mechanics, placement of the torso, legs, arms, and head. This is to be accomplished by using simple classical training exercises and developing coordination skills. In addition, the student's musical ear needs to be developed. Basic skills and concepts are mastered. Training proceeds slowly and carefully to ensure a strong foundation for future work.

Level II
Level II continues to focus on placement as new vocabulary is introduced. The aims of the second year focus on development of strength in feet and legs, and the emphasis is on acquiring the qualities of aplomb and ballon. There is an increased use of demi-pointe to develop this needed strength, and proper alignment and distribution of weight is carefully monitored. In addition, there is an increase in tempo of the music and change in rhythmical structures to aid in the development of musicality.

Level III
This level focuses on mastering the already known vocabulary of classical dance and adding more advanced movements and enchainements. This further develops the dancer's strength and stability, as well as fostering artistry. Pointe-work may be introduced at this time.

Level IV
Level IV and beyond builds on previous work by continuing perfection of placement in turn-out with proper alignment still being carefully guided. Artistry is developed through increased strength and technical proficiency.

DANCE GLOSSARY

Abstract - to remove movement from a particular or representative context and (by manipulating it with elements of space, time, weight, and force) create a new sequence or dance that retains the essence of the original.

Aesthetic - a guiding principle in matters of beauty and artistic taste; a heightened sensitivity of beauty. Of or relating to the philosophy of art and artistic principals.

Articulation - clear and precise movement clarity (of the arms, legs, torso, head, fingers).

Axial movement - movement in one spot moving around the axis of the body.

Body alignment - correct alignment of the head, spine, and pelvis. The alignment reference points on the body are the top of the ear, middle of the shoulder girdle, the center of the hip, back of the kneecap, and the front of the anklebone.

Choreography - the art of creating and making dances.

Collapse - movement characterized by passive, release of weight into gravity.

Dance literacy - an appreciation and fluency of dance knowledge as it pertains to terminology, world history, culture, and the history of dance.

Dance study - a compositional assignment based on certain choreographic principles. It is to satisfy the parameters of the assignment and lengthy enough to demonstrate understanding and show a beginning, middle, and end.

Direction - a dancer can travel forwards, backwards, sideways, and on a diagonal. A dancer can face towards the audience, or away, and still travel in all of the aforementioned directions.

Dynamics - the expressive content of human movement, sometimes called qualities or efforts. Dynamics also manifests the interrelationships among the elements of time, space, and force/energy.

Echoing - repeating exactly a movement done before or previously. Also known as canon.

Elements - the use of the body moving in space and time with force/energy.

Energy - exertion or power. Ranges from very light to very strong; very free to very bound. One of the elements of dance.

Focus - focus may be the direction the dancer is looking in or where the energy of the movement is directed.

Folding - allowing the limbs and body to envelope each other.

Imitative - to copy or mimic. Impetus - where the movement originates (i.e., the pelvis or arm or even head).

Improvisation - movement that is created spontaneously, ranging from free-form to highly structured environments, but with an element of dance. Provides the dancer with the opportunity to bring together elements quickly, and requires focus and concentration. Improvisation is instant and simultaneous choreography and performance.

Kinesphere - the movement space, or the space surrounding the body in stillness and in motion, which includes all directions and levels both close to the body and as far as the person can reach with limbs or torso.

Kinesthetic - refers to the ability of the body's sensory organs in the muscles, tendons, and joints to respond to stimuli while dancing or viewing a dance.

Levels - the height of the dancer in relation to the floor. There are 3 main levels: high, middle, and low.

Literal - non-abstracted; verbatim.

Locomotion - to travel in space, to walk, run, hop, jump, leap, skip, gallop, slide, or crawl.

Motivation - may be emotional and movement based. It is the why of the dancer's movement.
Pedestrian - movement as it is performed or executed by the average person.

Personal Space - the "space bubble" or the kinesphere that one occupies; includes all levels, planes, and directions both near and far from the body's center.

Phrase - a brief sequence of related movements that has a sense of rhythmic completion; can be thought of as a movement sentence with a beginning, middle, and end, and a subject, noun, and verb.

Quality - the identifying attributes created by the release, follow-through, and termination of energy which are key to making movement become dance; typical terms denoting qualities include sustained swing, percussive, collapse, and vibratory, and effort combinations such as float, dab, punch, and glide.

Repetition - to perform a single movement at least twice in a row.

Shape - may be circular or square, symmetrical or asymmetrical, high, middle, or low; it is the shape the body makes.

Suspension - movement that occurs in a movement of resistance to gravity, such as the instant in which the dancer hangs in space at the type of a leap or jump.

Sustained - movement that is smooth and unaccented; there is not an apparent start or stop, only continuity or equalized energy flow.

Time - time may be natural time, as in the breath or heartbeat; clock time, as in second, minutes, or hours; or metered time as in 2/4, 3/4, 6/8, or even mixed meter. One of the elements of dance. Time includes beat, tempo, duration, repetition, rhythm, and unmetered time.

This Curriculum Guide is designed to provide a rationale for and an overview of the suggested educational scope of a high school general music class. The document assumes that all students participating in a high school general music class will be exposed to and gain some appropriate level of experience from the comprehensive approach of this experience-based curriculum guide. The competencies and expectations of this guide extend beyond the "traditional" course of study to include an understanding of music within the realm of the human condition in our global culture.

1. Understand the attributes and trace the development of music of Antiquity and the Renaissance.

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover aurally and visually the individual characteristics and stylistic features that identify a musical composition of this historical period.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher plays quality records of vocal and instrumental repertoire of the historical period and discusses the harmonic, melodic, timbral, and formal characteristics which the selections have in common.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Upon completion of an aural study of music from this historical style period, students are asked to list the various characteristics discussed and name an example of the given selection which they feel best demonstrates the characteristics.

b. Interpret the musical content, writing about the music and its representative composers, and aural and visual examples of this music relative to its historical or cultural context.

c. Evaluate the musical and expressive elements inherent to the content of musical compositions of this historical period.

d. Integrate the concepts of musical classification and the musical traditions of the cultures which have produced this music with the concepts of oral and written communication (literary and dramatic arts).

2. Understand the attributes and trace the development of music of the Baroque Period.

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover aurally and visually the individual characteristics and stylistic features that identify a musical composition of this historical period.

b. Interpret the musical content, writings about the music and its representative composers, and aural and visual examples of this music relative to its historical or cultural context.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Students are asked to compare the keyboard music of France with the keyboard music of Germany. Determine which stylistic compositional elements are similar, which are different, and why. The teacher provides brief aural and visual examples for comparison. Once musical comparisons are made, the teacher presents new examples of the representative keyboard music of each culture (French and German) and asks students to determine the country of origin of each selection.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Following the lesson and after familiarizing themselves with the various stylistic attributes, students should complete a worksheet on the characteristics of Baroque keyboard music in France and Germany to be included in their evaluation portfolio.

introduces examples of written dynamics in the late chamber music of Mozart. The teacher asks students to compare and contrast the methods of use and types of dynamics found in the various aural and visual examples offered in class.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

The teacher prepares a "drop the needle" test which mixes several examples of dynamic treatments in both the Baroque and Classical style periods. Students must determine which style period each example is from by listening and discerning characteristics.

which have produced this music with the global concept of oral and written communication.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

After studying the folk music of several countries, the teacher presents vocal examples by Brahms and Billings which are based on folk melodies.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Students are asked to write a paragraph or two in their music journals on their opinions and ideas about why these composers chose to base vocal works on folk melodies.

5. Understand the attributes and trace the development of music of 20th-Century Art Music.

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover aurally and visually the individual characteristics and stylistic features that identify a musical composition of this historical period.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Following a discussion of serial technique and 12-tone composition, the teacher plays a recording of Schoenberg's Suite for Piano. Students are asked to look at a copy of the score with the tone row marked and listen to the recording to aurally identify its characteristics.

Present sample records of Ives, Copeland, and Stravinsky.

visual examples of this music relative to its historical or cultural context.
c. Evaluate the musical and expressive elements inherent to the content of musical compositions of this historical period.
d. Integrate the concepts of musical classification and the musical traditions of the cultures and societies which have produced this music with the global concept of oral and written communication.
Suggested Teaching Strategies:

After study of the musical characteristics of the contemporary art music based on new technology produced by American composers, the teacher asks the students to divide into groups of 2 or 3 students to briefly research and prepare a 2-page group report on the many ways similar technology is used in everyday American life.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

After completing the group research/writing project, students will present their findings to the class. The class will have a student-designed evaluation/information form to complete following each presentation.

Some examples could include music of the colonists, slaves, and other immigrants; American jazz, rock and roll, blues, rhythm and blues, country, soul; the music of Appalachia; American folk music and music of Mississippi.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher briefly discusses the characteristics of the music of Chuck Berry and the early days of Rock and Roll. Exemplary recordings of this music are played. A comparison is drawn with the early music of Elvis Presley and other Mississippi Blues composers/artists and the similarities and differences are identified and discussed.

The teacher traces the evolution of American jazz from its Ragtime and Dixieland roots through the development of Big Band, bebop, and modern jazz forms.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Following the comparison lessons which will include many quality aural examples, the students are given an aural test which requires them to distinguish between the early roots of rock and roll and the rock of today (Aerosmith, Van Halen).

Comparative listening exercises should have students compare such diverse styles as those of Jelly Roll Morton, Miles Davis, and others.

A discussion of the historical times during which the songs were written as well as the motivation and personal information about each composer is presented and sets of historical and musical characteristics are prepared as part of the discussion. The teacher then introduces Irving Berlin's God Bless America. Students compare and contrast the patriotic feeling, compositional devices, and lyrics employed by Berlin with those employed by the composers of the other studied selections.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Divide the class into groups of 4-6 students. Choose a melody presented in the lesson (listed above) and write another, up-to-date set of nationalistic, patriotic, or inspirational lyrics which express the splendor and reverence of the music.

c. Evaluate the characteristics and function of this genre of music relative to traditional American culture and the American culture of today.
d. Integrate the characteristics and function of this music with effective oral and written communication.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

After the study of American music in celebration, students are asked to prepare a five-minute speech appropriate for a celebration occasion (graduation, wedding, Fourth of July celebration, etc.). Each student decides the scenario for his/her speech and picks one musical selection from a collection prepared by the teacher to highlight the presentation of the speech. Each student further decides where to place the music - as "background" for the speech, as an introduction portion, as a rousing closing portion, etc.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Following the preparation of the speech, each student presents his/her speech to the class with the accompanying musical selection. The class will be asked to evaluate, using a teacher/student made Likert scale, the effectiveness of the speech and the contribution the musical selection makes to the total delivery of the message.

- Integrate the concept of musical improvisation with improvisation in the other Arts disciplines as a spontaneous expression of the human condition.

2. Improvise rhythmic and melodic variations on specific melodies including those based on major and minor keys and those on pentatonic scales. (B) 2.2.3.b

Suggested Objectives:

- Discover the individual properties of rhythm and melody and the combination of the two musical elements. Examples could include diatonic, chromatic, pentatonic, and blues melodies, and rhythmic patterns such as Latin, swing-style, and rock.
- Interpret aurally and express vocally improvised variations upon given melodies in a given harmonic context.
- Evaluate an improvised melody in a specific harmonic context based upon a determined set of cognitive and affective criteria appropriate for the prescribed context.
- Integrate knowledge of the role of musical improvisation in other cultures.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

During a lesson on vocal jazz improvisation, the teacher presents recordings and information about vocal improvisation over a rhythmic choral pad as seen in the music of many African tribal cultures. In both instances, improvisation can be thought of as a spontaneous expression of emotion and/or storytelling.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

After analyzing the rhythmic and melodic elements of the African improvisations, students attempt their own vocal improv in a similar style with the purpose of "telling a story" to the audience (class).
3. Improvise original melodies in a given progressional chord context, each in a consistent style, meter, and tonality. (B) 2.3.3.c

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover aurally the harmonic structure presented for improvisation.

b. Interpret vocally-appropriate melodies in a specific harmonic context.

c. Evaluate improvised melodies based upon a determined set of cognitive and affective criteria.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

After a study of the harmonic elements of a 12-bar blues and after various attempts to improvise over that particular harmonic structure, students will design a set of criteria (e.g., uses an appropriate amount of "blue notes," moves smoothly through the chord changes by singing common or appropriate leading tones just prior to chord changes, etc.) which will be used for self-evaluation of each improvised solo.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Students will record their own improvisations over the 12-bar blues chord progressions and utilize the student-selected evaluation criteria to assess their personal performance. This procedure could be repeated several times during the course of the unit on blues for comparison and evaluation of progress on objectives.

d. Integrate the importance of the role of musical improvisation as a discrete compositional component and as an element of the musical heritage of various cultures.

4. Improvise stylistically correct harmonizing parts in a number of diverse styles in a group setting. (A) 2.4.3.d

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the properties of harmony in general and the components of stylistic harmonization in the context of varied choral styles. Examples could include the use of thirds and sixths, open fourth/fifth (Renaissance and Country).

b. Interpret the aural and visual attributes of choral harmony in an improvisatory situation.

c. Evaluate improvised harmony based upon performance practice and stylistic expectations.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Students develop and agree upon a harmonic context for a song which everyone knows well (e.g., a Christmas carol, folk song, etc.). Part of the class then sings the melody of the song while students take turns creating a harmonizing part which fits with the chord structure. Experimentation with harmonies in intervals with the melody of other than thirds and sixths (e.g., major or minor seconds, fourths, etc.) will help students hear the differences between a harmony part that fits with the chord structure and one that does not.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

The teacher presents a teacher-made recording of an unfamiliar song, melody alone, then melody with a chord structure played or sung with it. Following this selection is a recording of the melody with several different harmonizing parts presented one at a time and separated by silence on the tape. Students are asked to rank the separate harmonizing parts on a Likert scale which is designed to elicit affective response to the performances.

d. Integrate knowledge of the stylistic attributes of music with the stylistic characteristics of the other art disciplines and literature.

5. Improvise original melodies in a diversity of styles in a given progressional chord context, each in a consistent style, meter, and tonality. (A) 2.5.3.e

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover aurally the harmonic structure presented for improvisation including the expected and implied stylistically idiomatic elements (e.g., blue notes, appropriate melodic embellishments, etc.).

b. Interpret vocally-appropriate melodies in a specific harmonic and stylistic context.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Following a study of melodic and implied harmonic and stylistic elements of Gregorian chant, students are challenged to improvise their own chant based on a given incipit.

Suggested Assessment Methods:
Students will tape their improvisations for self-evaluation with regard to appropriate use of melisma, appropriate melodic content, etc.

c. Evaluate improvised melodies based upon a determined set of cognitive and affective and stylistic criteria.
d. Integrate the importance of the role of musical improvisation as a discrete compositional component and as an element of musical heritage of various cultures.

Strand: READING AND WRITING MUSIC.

COMPETENCIES:

1. Illustrate the ability to read a vocal score of up to four staves by explaining how the elements of music are used. (B) 3.1.5.a

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover visually the notational/symbolic elements presented.
b. Interpret musical notation, including articulation and dynamic markings, and translate the notation into appropriate vocal sound.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher will analyze a piece of music with the group, pointing out articulation and dynamic markings, unfamiliar rhythmic patterns, chord progressions, and the form, using the full score. The teacher will give students an unfamiliar piece and note errors in their performance of the piece.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

The teacher will record the first reading of the unfamiliar piece for student self-evaluation in the group setting.

c. Evaluate the musical notation with regard to the effectiveness and suitability of the symbolic sound representations.
d. Integrate the notational elements of the music with the perceptions of the composer's musical intent for the performance of the prescribed composition.

2. Sight sing in a group setting, accurately and with expression, choral music with a level of difficulty of 3 on a scale of 1 to 6. (B) 3.2.5.b

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover visually the music notational system and corresponding symbolic performance information.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Students are given a 2-voice hymn for sight-reading. Prior to actually singing the hymn, the teacher questions the class about the notation and performance information which will enable them to perform the exercise well. Through this questioning, the teacher also is instructing the class in his/her preferred method of approaching the sight-reading of a new piece.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

The teacher gives the choir an unfamiliar but similar hymn and asks the students to volunteer to lead the class through questioning to decode all notational and performance symbols.

b. Interpret the symbolic notation and translate it into appropriate vocal sound.
c. Evaluate the sight-reading experience with regard to accuracy and error correction.
d. Integrate the concept of symbolic representations of sound with standard oral and written communication.

3. Illustrate the ability to read a full vocal score by describing how the elements of music are used. (A) 3.3.5.c

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover visually the notational/symbolic elements presented, including appropriate clefs.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:
The teacher distributes copies of a familiar English partsong written in the original notation, using soprano, alto, tenor, and bass clefs, to the select Madrigal ensemble. The teacher assists students in discovering that the original clefs were used to make the reading of the parts simpler for the singers, as all notes would appear on the staff rather than above or below it. Students sing through the partsong, attempting to read the clefs.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

As an enrichment activity, the teacher distributes an unfamiliar partsong written in the original clefs. Following the above lesson, students are given staff paper and are asked to transcribe their own part into contemporary clefs. The teacher collects the transcriptions and prepares a new score of the partsong for rehearsal.

b. Interpret musical notation including diacritical markings and translate the notation into appropriate vocal sound.

c. Evaluate the effectiveness and suitability of the symbol/sound relationships.

d. Integrate the concept of symbolic representation of sound with the global concept of oral and written communication.

4. Decode and translate nonstandard notational devices used by some twentieth-century composers. (A) 3.4.5.d

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the specific symbolic language relative to some 20th century compositions.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher distributes copies of Dennis Kam's "Two Moves and the Slow Cat," a "sound" piece for SATB choir based on the stylistic element of scat. The choir reads the composer's instructions for performing the piece and begins to look at the score for the first movement (written in horizontal blocks rather than on a staff; notation is often just syllables written high, middle, low in block; use of triangles and other shaded line figures). Without hearing a recording, the choir begins to decipher the notation and translates the notation into vocal sound.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Without further instruction from the teacher, the choir attempts to "sight read" the second movement of the same piece.

b. Interpret the nonstandard notation symbols and translate them into the sounds that they are designed to represent utilizing specific translational sound vocabulary and rule systems.

c. Evaluate the musical notation with regard to the effectiveness and appropriateness of the symbol/sound relationships.

d. Integrate the concept of nonstandard symbolic representations of sound with the global concept of nonstandard oral and written communication.

5. Sight sing in a group setting, accurately and with expression, music with a level of difficulty of 4 on a scale of 1 to 6. (A) 3.5.5.e

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover visually the symbolic notational system and corresponding symbolic performance information.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher prepares a familiar hymn harmonization or simple SATB folk song harmonization by adding unexpected articulation and dynamic markings to the score. When the hymns are presented to the choir as a sight singing exercise, students are told to pay special attention to the articulations and dynamics as they perform the selections.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

For an enrichment activity, several good music readers in the choir are asked to prepare hymns and/or folk songs in a similar fashion to be sight read by the choir in later sessions.

b. Interpret the symbolic notation and translate it into appropriate vocal sound.

c. Evaluate the sight-reading experience with regard to accuracy and error correction.

d. Integrate the concept of symbolic representations of sound with standard oral and written communication.
Strand: RESPONDING TO AURAL MUSICAL STIMULUS, INVESTIGATING, AND CHARACTERIZING MUSIC.

COMPETENCIES:

1. Examine aural examples of a diverse repertoire of music, representing various genres and cultures, by explaining the use of elements of music and expressive devices. (B) 4.1.6.a

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover aurally the use of the elements of music and expressive devices as major contributors to the diversity of various musical examples.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher presents recordings of Jean Berger's "Alleluia" from Brazilian Psalm, Leonard Bernstein's "Gloria Tibi" from MASS, and Randall Thompson's "Alleluia." These selections, each by a 20th century American composer, can be characterized as having energy and emotion created by rhythmic activity, especially syncopation and mixed meter. Through questioning and building upon the input from the class, the teacher helps students discover that the element of rhythm is also used as a type of expressive compositional device as shown in these examples.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Following this lesson, the teacher asks the choir to think about their current repertoire and list and describe those pieces which use the element of rhythm in a similar manner.

b. Interpret the varied uses of elements of music and expressive devices as presented in aural examples representing diverse genres and cultures.

c. Evaluate the effectiveness of the uses of the varied musical and expressive elements inherent in diverse genres and cultures.

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover visually and aurally the notational and symbolic elements presented in a prescribed musical composition.

b. Interpret diacritical markings of a particular composition and express effectively their musical significance.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

In the early stages of rehearsal on a particular selection, the teacher helps the choir to identify and define the various expressive markings in the score. Immediately after identifying an expressive marking, the teacher has the choir rehearse this section of the score adding the expressive quality suggested by the marking.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Following several identify-define-perform sessions, the teacher asks for volunteer student conductors to attempt to accurately interpret the expressive qualities of the score. A variety of interpretations should be encouraged. The choir can decide collectively which interpretation they prefer.

c. Evaluate the effective use of the technical vocabulary with regard to various musical presentations.

d. Integrate the technical vocabulary of music with basic oral and written communication.

3. Locate and describe compositional devices and techniques used to provide unity, diversity, tension, and release in a musical work, and list examples of other works that use the same devices and techniques. (B) 4.3.6.c

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the properties of compositional devices and techniques in stylistically diverse choral literature.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher presents quality recordings of several choral compositions demonstrating the compositional devices apparent in ABA song form. Through the use of teacher questioning and student investigation and discovery, the compositional devices and techniques can be compared and contrasted.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

A list of the compositional devices discovered is provided for students to utilize as they match the particular device to a "drop the needle" aural presentation of the recorded works studied.

b. Interpret the uses of the compositional devices and techniques as key elements in the process of identification of selected choral works.

c. Evaluate the compositional devices and techniques as inherent components of the compositional unity and variety of a musical work.

d. Integrate diverse compositional devices and techniques with musical works in which similar uses are made of these elements.

4. Exhibit the ability to perceive and recall musical events by explaining in detail significant events occurring in a specific aural example. (A) 4.4.6.d

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover aurally the musical framework that characterizes a specific musical event.

b. Interpret the musical content relative to the performance of a given aural example of music.

c. Evaluate the listening experience with regard to the content and effectiveness of the performance.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

During the next class period following a performance by the choir, the teacher leads the class in discussing the performance and its overall effectiveness. A list of remembered errors or other concerns is made for reference when the class views the videotape of the performance.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Students compare their remembered errors or concerns to the actual events on the tape.

d. Integrate the perception of a particular musical event with effective global, oral, and written communication skills.

5. Assess ways in which musical materials are used in a specific example relative to ways in which they are used in the works of a similar genre or style. (A) 4.5.6.e

c. Evaluate the artistic value of the characteristics of a particular genre or style.

d. Integrate the meaning and value of the selected genre or style as it relates to music of our own and other cultures.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The choir rehearses and performs a medley of the music of American composer Cole Porter entitled "Cole Porter" and arranged by Mac Huff. Porter made a significant contribution to American Musical Theatre of his day and many of those famous songs are included in this arrangement. The teacher presents for consideration for performance in subsequent concerts, similar arrangements of medleys of the music of Steven Sondheim, and Rodgers and Hammerstein. The choir is asked to compare and contrast the arrangements and discuss their views on the contributions these composers made to American Musical Theatre repertoire.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

The class derives a rating scale by which they can judge the quality of other music arrangements of this genre.

6. Examine and explain uses of the elements of music in a specific work that make it different, interesting, and expressive. (A) 4.6.6.f

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover analytical techniques necessary to describe distinctive musical characteristics in a given musical work.
Suggested Teaching Strategies:

While studying and preparing Schubert's Mass in G, the teacher helps the choir to discover the various compositional devices which cause this piece by an early Romantic composer to evoke the emotions intended by the composer. Analysis of the harmonic content reveals many "Romantic" chord progressions. Analysis of the form of each movement reveals a similar structure to masses of the Classical period, etc.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

The teacher presents aural examples of the "Kyrie" from Schubert's Mass in G and the "Kyrie" from Schubert's Mass in Eb. The choir is asked to analyze this new work with regard to the similarities and differences heard in the two settings of the same text.

b. Interpret analytically the unique elements encompassed within the framework of a given musical composition.

c. Evaluate the structural elements of music with regard to its unique, interesting, and expressive qualities.

d. Integrate the structural analysis in a given work with effective oral and written communication skills.

c. Evaluate the given musical presentation based upon defined or original criteria.

d. Integrate these evaluation procedures and experiences in music with evaluations of other human artistic endeavors.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The choir members discuss, define, and compile a set of evaluation criteria for critiquing choral performances. The drama students have also spent some time discussing, defining, and compiling a set of evaluation criteria for critiquing dramatic or theatrical performances. The teachers arrange for both classes to view Leonard Bernstein's musical drama West Side Story together. Following the completion of the performance, the entire group uses both sets of criteria to evaluate the performances from several perspectives and levels. Comparisons and contrasts of the evaluations are then discussed by the entire group.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

As a group and with the aid of a certified dance educator, the entire group develops a set of criteria for critiquing the dance and choreographic segments of West Side Story.
3. Judge a specific musical work in terms of its expressive qualities and identify the musical means it uses to bring out feelings and emotions. (A) 5.3.7.c

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the expressive qualities of a given musical work.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The choir is studying and preparing "Plorate filii Israel," from Carissimi’s oratorio Jeptha. Through analysis of the score and its compositional devices, a determination is made of the emotional and/or expressive intentions of the composer in conveying the text "Weep oh daughters of Israel."

c. Evaluate the effectiveness of the various processes with regard to the resulting affective responses.

d. Integrate the analysis of these usages with appropriate oral and written communication skills.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The choir is preparing a medley of selections from The Phantom of the Opera. In preparation for presenting the medley, the choir teacher divides the choir into groups of ten students and assigns sections of the original book as a reading activity. During a subsequent choir rehearsal, each group presents an oral report on the segment of the original work.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Following the presentations by each group, choir members are asked to write two paragraphs in their music journals about how the musical setting of the story reflects the actual prose version.

2. Compare characteristics of other arts within a specific historical period or style and give examples from global cultures. (B) 6.2.8.b

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover through visual or aural stimuli the characteristics of varying art forms contained within a particular historical period or style from numerous global cultures.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher presents several pictures of Baroque/Rococo architecture, sculpture, decorative artifacts for the home, and representative paintings of the period. The choir compares each picture and develops a set of common characteristics (use of embellishments, elaborate decorations, goldleaf detail, etc.). The teacher plays recordings of solo and choral music from this time period which also displays some of these same characteristics. Comparisons and conclusions about the lifestyle and culture of the people of that day are drawn.
Suggested Assessment Methods:

The class breaks into groups to briefly research the art and architecture of the Renaissance and Classical historical style periods and attempts to develop common characteristics of the music of those periods.

b. Interpret the expressive qualities of given examples of various art forms as evoked by the artistic endeavor of its creator.

c. Evaluate the similarities and differences of prescribed examples of varying art forms within a designated historical period.

d. Integrate the analysis of art forms of a particular historical period or style with the oral and written communication skills of human culture.

3. Describe ways in which the principles and subject matter of other disciplines outside the arts are interwoven with those of music. (B) 6.3.8.c

5. Describe how the roles of creators, performers, and others involved in the production and presentation of the arts compare and contrast. (A) 6.5.8.e

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the many facets of experience involved in the creation of an artistic work.

b. Interpret the function of creators, performers, and others involved in each art form relative to the prescribed artistic work or set of compared works.
Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The role of the solo performer of traditional music (music of the Classical and Romantic eras in particular) is compared to the role of the solo performer in American jazz or popular music. In the former, it is expected that the performer adheres to the composer's exact notes, rhythms, etc., and in the latter, the performer acts as a co-composer, spontaneously improvising and altering the original version to suit his/her particular mood at the time.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Once the choir members are familiar with the performance characteristics of several style periods, the teacher can assign certain works to be prepared according to those guidelines but without exact instruction from the teacher.

c. Evaluate analytically the artistic work or set of compared works based upon a developed or prescribed system.
d. Integrate an evaluation of the effectiveness of the function of each participator in the creation of an artistic work with other appropriate examples of participatory events in our global culture.

b. Interpret, based upon an aural stimulus, the musical content relative to genre, style, historical period, or culture.
c. Evaluate the characteristics that denote the specific identification of the composition presented aurally.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher reviews diverse stylistic performance practices of several historical periods. After discussion, students listen to a variety of musical performances and classify them into groups based on stylistic characteristics.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Have students list the characteristics of each group that led to the placement of the aural selections within that group.

d. Integrate the concept of musical classification with the global concept of oral and written communication.

2. Locate sources of American music genres, trace the evolution of those genres, and cite familiar musicians associated with them. (B) 7.2.9.b

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the source and historical evolution of various musical genres in the American culture.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

While preparing music from Les Miserables, students discover that the compositional techniques and type of singing required in this musical theatre work is most closely associated with techniques and singing found in the operatic repertoire. The teacher plays recordings of late Mozart ensemble finales, excerpts from Verdi's Turandot and Aida, and demonstrates contrast by playing any Gilbert and Sullivan chorus or "The Telephone Hour" from Bye Bye Birdie.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

The choir prepares music from the Sondheim musical Company. Students determine, through score study and listening to the original cast recording, whether this piece has more in common with opera or popular music.

b. Interpret specific American musical genres and the compositional techniques of certain well-known composers of that genre.
c. Evaluate the musical content, style, and performance practice inherent in the performance of various American music genres.
d. Integrate the diversity of American musical genres with stylistic influences in various musical cultures.

3. Identify different roles that musicians perform, list representative individuals who have functioned in each role, and explain their activities and achievements. (B) 7.3.9.c

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the criteria cited as representative of various musical roles in a global society.
b. Interpret the activities and achievements of representative individuals in the context of various musical roles.
c. Evaluate the function and effectiveness of various musical roles within a global culture.
D. Integrate the various roles of musicians within a societal environment of a particular culture.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The teacher presents information on the role of the musician in today's American life. As a contrast, the teacher also presents information on the role of a musician during the patronage eras of the Baroque and Classical historical style periods. The various roles are compared and contrasted.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

As an enrichment exercise, members of the choir can be assigned to interview musicians within the community. Can these individuals support themselves by working as a musician or must they supplement their income in other ways? Do today's community musicians perform in only one area (orchestral, opera, etc.) or do they perform as needed in all areas? What attracted them to the lifestyle of a musician, etc.? Perhaps the musicians interviewed can attend a choir rehearsal to discuss careers in music.

4. Identify and describe the stylistic features of a specific musical work that serve to define its expressive tradition and its historical or cultural context. (A) 7.4.9.d

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the stylistic features which characterize a given work as a component of a prescribed historical or cultural context.
b. Interpret the musical content relative to its historical or cultural context.
c. Evaluate the musical and expressive elements inherent to the content of a prescribed musical composition.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The choir is preparing Hutcheson's "Lament for a Lost Child," written in 1974. The piece requires speech, wailing, notated singing on neutral syllables, dramatic dynamic contrasts, tone clusters, etc., all to express the memory of a lost child. After the notation and expressive elements of the piece are translated into sound by the choir, a discussion of how these elements are used and the types of emotions they evoke can be held to assist the choir in interpreting and presenting the full emotional impact of this piece.

Suggested Assessment Methods:

Similar discussions of the value and impact of the expressivity of other works to be presented on the program with the "Lament" can be held. How should these pieces be programmed? Should something be said to the audience; if so, what, by whom, etc.?
d. Integrate the musical analysis with effective oral and written communication skills.

5. Identify and explain the music genres or styles that demonstrate the influence of several cultural traditions, identify the cultural origins of each influence, and trace the historical conditions that produced the synthesis of influences. (A) 7.5.9.e

Suggested Objectives:

a. Discover the musical traditions of various cultures and the characteristics evident in each style or genre.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

The choir is preparing a program of traditional arrangements of spirituals. The teacher discusses what an oral tradition is and that spirituals are part of our American oral tradition. Comparisons of arrangements of the same spiritual will enable the students to see that each arranger felt at liberty to make alterations to the rhythms and melodies as he/she saw fit in order to offer another interpretation of the traditional tune.
Suggested Assessment Methods:

A similar lesson can be done with American folk music, which is also based upon an oral tradition. Students can collect recordings or arrangements to be utilized for information on interpreting these selected pieces.

b. Interpret the various musical styles or genres and identify the influence of each upon various cultures.
c. Evaluate the influential factors surrounding the music of numerous cultural sources.
d. Integrate numerous musical traditions of various cultures with the historical conditions that produced a synthesis of the musical influences upon each culture.

SMALL GROUP JAZZ IMPROVISATION COURSE DESCRIPTION

1-4 years

This Curriculum Guide is designed to introduce student instrumentalists to improvisation in the Jazz idiom.

Prerequisites: Participating students should be able to play all or most of their major scales and be able to match pitches played on the piano both with their instrument and their voice. It is not necessary for them to be band program members especially in the case of guitarists or bassists.

STRANDS: Musical Performance, Music Appreciation, Music Theory

Strand: MUSICAL PERFORMANCE.

COMPETENCIES:

1. Play and sing major scales modally up to five sharps and flats.

_Suggested Teaching Strategies:_

Beginning with the concert B-flat major scale, have students play the scale from the root upward and downward and follow that by taking the same scale and playing it for one octave from the second step, third step, etc., on up to the seventh step. Special attention should be paid to the modes based on the second, fourth, and fifth, in addition to the major scale itself.

2. Apply scale knowledge to the development of a jazz rhythmic sense.

_Suggested Teaching Strategies:_

Students will play the major scales and modes in a swing eighth note style. Articulation should be legato with slight accents placed on the upbeats. Repeat the procedure displacing the starting note one half of a beat.

3. Play a simple melody without written music and develop variations on it setting it in different rhythmic styles such as a waltz, a swing, etc., and later begin embellishing the melody by adding notes.

_Suggested Objectives:_

a. Utilizing a familiar theme that students can play by ear involves the process of thinking in music as they recall it from their tonal memory. Since they will begin to think of it in rhythmic styles other than what they remember they will also be learning to spontaneously create or compose music (i.e., conceive musical ideas that they have not heard or played before).

4. Begin working with a jazz accompaniment track.

_Suggested Teaching Strategies:_

Students will listen through the track to hear the form and get an idea of when the chords will change. In addition, they should listen to the individual instruments (i.e., piano, bass, and drums) and give attention to the role of the different instruments. Students should also sing and play the corresponding modes along with the track in half notes, then quarter notes, and lastly, eighth notes. After they have become acquainted with these, they should begin experimenting with improvisation. (Resource: Jamey Aebersold Vol. I, track 1)

5. Become familiarized with and begin improvising "The Blues."

_Suggested Teaching Strategies:_

Students will listen to some examples of the blues including Bessie Smith (Smithsonian Classic Jazz Collection) and the selections can extend to artists such as B. B. King or Stevie Ray Vaughn. The traditional form of the blues (i.e., vocal/melodic form of statement, restatement, and response) should be highlighted as well as the use of "blue notes." The blues scale, as it appears in the Jamey Aebersold Play-along tracks literature, is the recommended choice. (1, flat 3, 4, flat 5, natural 5, flat 7, 1 in this case. The glossary and some jazz history texts differ from this scale description to some degree but this example is both simple and effective.) After the students have heard some examples, have them play the scale along with an accompaniment track (JA Vol. 54, Track 3) and then begin to experiment with improvising over the track.

6. Introduce and begin improvising the ii7>V7>Imaj7 progression.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Play all of the modes associated with the progression (i.e., dorian on the ii7, mixolydian on the V7, and ionian [or major scale] on the Imaj7). Make students aware of the fact that these are all the same scale in reality and they are simply starting them on the second step, fifth step, and first step respectively. Have them re-familiarize themselves with these modes in all 12 keys and begin playing them along with the play-along track. Have them also arpeggiate each of the chords on their instrument. After completing this, they may begin improvising with the play-along track.

7. Apply the previous skills on a standard selection from the jazz repertoire. (Recommended choice is Duke Ellington's "Satin Doll" found on JA Vol. 54, Track 8.)

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Have students learn the melody and commit it to memory. Utilizing a theme and variations technique, have them develop improvisations with the play-along track. They will also benefit from looking at the chords and seeing what keys the song moves through. All minor seventh chords should be referred to as ii7 chords since a dorian mode will be used on each of them and all dominant seventh chords treated as V7 chords since a mixolydian mode will be used on each of those. Also having the students sing and play arpeggios, each chord in the song is very helpful.

Strand: MUSIC APPRECIATION.

COMPETENCIES:

1. Listen to significant jazz recording. (Resource: Smithsonian Collection of Classic Jazz)

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Have students listen to and identify the instruments involved and, if possible, have them describe the roles of each of the instruments. A chronological sequence is recommended but it need not cover every selection in the collection.

Strand: MUSIC THEORY.

COMPETENCIES:

1. Learn chord spellings for diatonic seventh chords, particularly the major seventh, minor seventh, and dominant seventh chords.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Make a four-by-four square grid on the board (or larger if dealing with 5 or 6 note chords) and write a note letter name in the upper left hand corner and continue it diagonally across the grid. Then write the numerical description of the chord across the top of the grid (e.g., a minor seventh chord is 1, -3, 5, -7.) Example:

2. Play the blues using the Mixolydian Mode.

Suggested Teaching Strategies:

Utilizing a blues progression in B flat, have the students play the corresponding Mixolydian Modes for each of the different dominant seventh chords. The mixolydian mode is based on the fifth step of a major scale or can be thought of as a major scale with the seventh flatted. In blues in the key of B flat, there are three different dominant chords: Bb7, Eb7, and F7, and the respective mixolydian modes would begin with the pitches Bb, Eb, and F. After the students are able to play each of the modes without the track, have them perform them along with the track (JA Vol. 54, Track 3) and then follow that up by utilizing them in their improvisations.

Concluding Comments: While there are many systematized methods for teaching jazz improvisation, there are three factors that should be considered.

1. Students need to spend plenty of time experimenting, both in and out of class, with improvisation. It is not enough to just do it in class.

2. Students must work on developing their ears through listening, mimicking, and call and response, as well as singing. Singing is included in this list because a player's ability to sing something is the measure of how well he or she hears it.

3. The teacher should also be a student of improvisation. This does not necessarily mean that he or she needs to be an accomplished jazz musician, but rather that the teacher has experimented with it enough to know the experience of improvisation. Improvisation is essentially "on the spot" problem solving and in order to aid students in developing as improvisers, the teacher will have to have faced similar types of musical situations.

THEATRE ARTS

Overview of Theatre Arts

Theatre uniquely embraces all of the arts and sciences while encouraging introspection and self-knowledge. Theatre nurtures cultural appreciation and satisfies the aesthetic, intellectual, and emotional needs of both performers and audiences.

The curriculum proposed in this guide is developmentally sequential. It is inclusive of learning styles and a diverse array of cultural perspectives. It is believed that the primary resource for accomplishing the stated competencies will be the teacher's own expertise and imagination. The suggested objectives, teaching strategies, and resources included in this document will serve as useful tools for teacher and students as they journey together in the process of learning and discovery.

INTRODUCTION

A comprehensive and sequential visual arts program is essential to the education of every student. Such a program provides:

- Opportunities to communicate visually
- Encouragement of creativity
- Development of higher order thinking skills
- Connections in cultural and historical context
- Reinforcement of self-esteem
- Development of perceptual awareness
- Exposure to a variety of career opportunities and avocations
- Interdisciplinary learning
- Experiences that build self-discipline
- Fulfillment through the creative process
- Understanding of a unique body of knowledge
Use of the Curriculum Framework

This framework should be used as a guideline to develop curriculum that is pertinent and has meaning within each district or school situation. It is not meant to be a text or lesson plan format. This document is strictly a framework to be used by districts in creating their own curriculum.

Competencies were developed using the National Standards providing a high quality, sequential framework. The competencies are comprehensive yet provide ample opportunity for local and individualized goals. Only competencies are required. Objectives, strategies, and assessments are suggested.

Curriculum Framework Parts

Strands are basic components that are included at every grade level throughout the framework. Each of these strands is an integral part of the total study of the visual arts. The strands are Production (P), Media (M), Criticism/Aesthetics (C), History (H), and Integration (I).

Competencies are desired results from students' experiences in the learning environment. The competencies in this framework are required.

Objectives are means by which the student achieves the desired results of learning. Objectives listed in this document are simply suggestions. Each district and/or school may use these suggestions or develop their own objectives to fulfill the required competencies.

Strategies are methods and activities through which the students achieve objectives/competencies. Strategies are suggested as examples only. Each district and/or school should individualize strategies according to the needs of their students. Strategies are identified as to learning styles: Visual (V), Auditory (A), and Kinesthetic (K).

Assessments are methods of evaluation to determine achievement of competencies. These methods are suggested and should be adapted for use by each district and/or school. Assessment modes include open-ended (OP), rubric or checklist (R), and fixed response (FR).
