Based on Stephen Crane's poems about war and his novel "The Red Badge of Courage," this lesson plan presents activities designed to help students understand that Crane examined war-related themes in prose and poetry; that close study of a poem for oral presentation helps readers see meaning or techniques not noted earlier; and that not all readers give the same answers to questions about a poem--more than one answer may be acceptable. The main activity of the lesson involves students in oral presentation of some of Crane's war poems, and a panel discussion about war literature. It includes objectives, materials, procedures, adaptations, discussion questions, evaluation methods, extension activities, annotations of suggested readings and web links, vocabulary, and related academic standards and benchmarks addressed in the lesson plan. The lesson plan also contains a description of a video clip related to the lesson, comprehension questions related to the video clip, and answers to those comprehension questions. (RS)
TITLE OF LESSON PLAN:
War Literature

LENGTH OF LESSON: Two class periods

GRADE LEVEL: 9-12

SUBJECT AREA: Literature

OBJECTIVES: Students will understand the following:

1. Crane examined war-related themes in prose and poetry.
2. Close study of a poem for oral presentation helps readers see meaning or techniques not noted earlier.
3. Not all readers give the same answers to questions about a poem; more than one answer may be acceptable.

MATERIALS:
For this lesson, you will need:

Several of Stephen Crane's poems about war from his collections The Black Riders and Other Lines (1895) and War Is Kind (1899), perhaps the most famous of which is reprinted here:

War Is Kind

Do not weep, maiden, for war is kind.
Because your lover threw wild hand toward the sky
And the affrighted steed ran on alone,
Do not weep.
War is kind.

Hoarse, booming drums of the regiment,
Little souls who thirst for fight,
These men were born to drill and die.
The unexplained glory flies above them,
Great is the Battle-God, great, and his Kingdom—
A field where a thousand corpses lie.
Do not weep, babe, for war is kind.
Because your father tumbled in the yellow trenches,
Raged at his breast, gulped and died,
Do not weep.
War is kind.

Swift blazing flag of the regiment,
Eagle with crest of red and gold
These men were born to drill and die.
Point for them the virtue of slaughter,
Make plain to them the excellence of killing
And a field where a thousand corpses lie.

Mother whose heart hung humble as a button
On the bright splendid shroud of your son,
Do not weep.
War is kind.

Table and chairs that can be arranged for panel discussion in front of audience

PROCEDURE:

1. Inform students that Crane wrote not only realistic fiction such as The Red Badge of Courage but also short and bitter poems, some of which deal with war. Assign a different Crane war poem to each group of students, who will be responsible for presenting an oral interpretation of the poem and a panel discussion about the poem and their interpretation of it.

2. Teach or review the fundamentals of oral interpretation of literature:

   - The group might begin by individually reading the poem silently and then aloud.
   - The group must think about and discuss the meaning of the poem as well as its craft: sound (repetition, alliteration, onomatopoeia, rhyme), language (word choice, imagery, figurative language), and form (stanza division).
   - Based on early thoughts about meaning and craft, the group must decide who will read which lines during the presentation. Will only one student read? Two in unison? All in unison? Will the students share the reading by stanza?
   - During rehearsals, students should mark up the poem to indicate where to pause, where to place emphasis, where to change tone and pacing.
   - Assure students that it is not unusual to make revisions in oral presentations during the rehearsal period.
   - The oral presentation cannot just start. One of the students should write and speak an introduction, including of course the name of the poem by Crane. The student should try to catch the audience's attention with the introduction and be clear where the introduction ends and where the poem itself begins.
- Advise students to stand when they read from their marked-up poems, to speak slowly and clearly enough for the audience to absorb the poem, and occasionally to make eye contact with the audience.

3. Give students time to work in their groups, figuring out the meaning of the poem, determining how to present it orally (see previous step), and planning the details of the panel discussion (see following step). Perhaps the group will decide that each student should become familiar with the general meaning and craft of the poem and also have responsibility for a detailed study of one particular aspect of the poem—say, its sound, language, or form.

4. Go over the basics of panel discussions about literature:

- The panel is made up of experts (often five or six) about the literature and the author.
- The discussion consists mostly of remarks by the members of the panel to questions and comments from a moderator and other members of the panel.
- The questions posed by the students can ask for facts or opinions.

5. Elicit or summarize the moderator's responsibilities in a panel discussion:

- Setting up the room to make discussion easy and to help the audience hear questions and responses
- Explaining why the panel has been brought together
- If necessary, introducing each member of the panel (There should be a name tent, or placard, for each panelist to sit behind.)
- Clearly stating each question, directing it to the panel at large or to one individual, then giving other members of the panel a chance to respond
- Calling on panelists who indicate they have questions for one another
- Noting for the audience what points panelists seem to agree on and what points they seem to disagree on
- Watching the time and eliminating some planned questions if necessary
- Opening the floor to questions from the audience
- Summing up the discussion and thanking participants and audience members

6. Direct the students in the group to work together to discuss what questions the moderator should ask the panelists during the actual panel discussion and to decide who will be the lead-off panelist in answering each question. During this working session, all students, not just the moderator, should contribute to a list of questions. The following list includes sample questions that a moderator might ask about "War Is Kind." Point out to students that the sample questions cover a broad range of issues related to the poem.

- Who among the panelists would like to comment on why you read the three appearances of the line "War is kind" as you did in your group's oral presentation? What were you trying to get across to the audience?
- What are your thoughts on the specific word kind?
- Would the poem have worked just as well with only stanzas 1, 3, and 5? What do stanzas 2 and 4 add to the poem?
- Do you like this poem? Why or why not?
- In what ways is this poem similar to elements in The Red Badge of Courage? In what ways in this poem different from the novel?

7. Proceed with the panel discussion. See Evaluation regarding a postmortem on the strengths and weaknesses of the participants.

ADAPTATIONS:

Play the role of the moderator yourself, controlling the difficulty and intensity of the questions you ask the panelists.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS:

1. Although The Red Badge of Courage is a story about the Civil War, list the ways it is also a symbolic story about every war.

2. Discuss Crane's use of irony in The Red Badge of Courage.

3. Analyze the effect of Crane's frequent use of descriptive tags—such as "the youth," "the tall soldier," or "the loud one"—to refer to the characters, rather than the use of their actual names.

4. Compare Henry Fleming to the main characters in other war stories you have read; how is he similar, and how is he different?

5. Debate the statement that war can possess beauty.

6. Discuss the idea that every individual is capable of heroic actions.

7. Analyze the idea of "badges of courage" in contemporary society; identify some symbols or tokens of courage and debate their validity.

EVALUATION:

With the students who will be in the audience, consider developing an evaluation chart that they can use to rate the group's oral presentation and each student's participation in the panel discussion. Categories for rating the group as a whole and the individual participants might include the following:
- Expressiveness of performance
- Delivery style of performance
- Familiarity with the poem during panel discussion
- Clear, easy-to-hear speaking skills during panel discussion
- Level of participation in panel discussion

You may suggest students use symbols to indicate how the group or a participant performs on each measure—perhaps "+" for "good," "-" for "poor," and "" for "excellent."

Collect the evaluation sheets. Review them, keeping in mind your own evaluation of each student. Meet with each participant individually to discuss his or her strengths and weaknesses.

EXTENSION:

Weapons of the American Civil War
One of the reasons the Civil War exacted such a huge toll of human lives is that the soldiers were fighting with new weapons, invented with the help of the technology of the time. Invite your students to research the weapons used for the first time in the Civil War and to generate written reports. Tell them that the audience for their reports is military leaders of the war. Suggest students' reports include a diagram of each of the new weapons, a statement of each weapon's properties and its superiority or inferiority to earlier weapons, and a safety warning.

Letters of War
Like the Civil War, the Vietnam War was an episode in which few Americans were left unscarred. In both cases, we have extensive primary sources in the form of letters from the soldiers, written to family and friends. Have your students find examples of those letters and then compare and contrast the feelings and attitudes expressed in them with those expressed in the fictional work The Red Badge of Courage.

Video Description

Stephen Crane's Civil War novel examines the soldier's worst fear—realizing he is a coward. The book's groundbreaking realism makes it important not only as literature, but also as a window into the life of a soldier during the Civil War.

The Red Badge of Courage

VIDEO COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS:

1. What profound questions does The Red Badge of Courage explore?
The Red Badge of Courage explores profound questions such as What would you die for?, What would you kill for?, and What is it like to face death?

2. What historic time does Stephen Crane capture in The Red Badge of Courage?
The Red Badge of Courage captures the time in the Civil War when volunteer armies of young men were fighting and dying for different beliefs about the United States.

3. Why does the main character in The Red Badge of Courage join the war?
In The Red Badge of Courage, Henry Fleming joins the war in search of imagined thrill and glory of battle.

4. What is the literary significance of The Red Badge of Courage?
The Red Badge of Courage is significant in American literary history because it is considered the first modern war novel and establishes Stephen Crane as the first modern war writer.

5. How is The Red Badge of Courage different from war stories that came before it?
The Red Badge of Courage is different from war stories that came before it because it focuses on the common soldier and not the officers, and it tells what people feel in war, not what they do.

6. How did technology add to the horror of the Civil War?
Military technology, such as the introduction of John Hall's breech-loading rifle with precision-crafted interchangeable parts, added to the horror of the Civil War because the soldiers fought with the most accurate and deadly modern weapons that had yet been devised.

7. Why were the common soldiers of the Civil War particularly vulnerable?
The common soldiers of the Civil War were particularly vulnerable because they had little or no military training.
8. How does Crane present an ironic twist to Henry Fleming's red badge of courage?
Crane adds an ironic twist to Henry's Red Badge of Courage, or his war wound, because it is the result of his being hit on the head by a fellow deserter.

9. Why is Crane's writing style considered modern?
Stephen Crane's writing style is considered modern because it is sparse and descriptive and presents a powerful picture with a minimum of words.

10. What is Crane's legacy to modern war reporters?
Crane's legacy to modern war reporters is his style of plunging the audience into the midst of battle and focusing on the view of the common soldier.

11. What are the different sides of the common soldier Crane represents in his main character, Henry Fleming?
In the simple farm boy, Henry Fleming, Crane characterizes the common soldier who is both a coward and a hero.
