Introduction

This resource guide for teaching the African-American experience in South Carolina's public schools is designed to serve as a supplement to the South Carolina Social Studies Curriculum Standards. Focusing on the history and culture of Africa and African-Americans within the specific context of the state's curriculum standards and enunciating specific performance-based content standards for the educators themselves, the document is an important tool for educators in their effort to infuse the African-American studies into the curriculum.

The primary section of this document, "Key Resource Books and Performance-Based Standards," presents in detail the content knowledge and the skills that are necessary for educators to infuse African-American history into the history strand ("Strand I. Time, Continuity, and Change: History") of the South Carolina social studies curriculum standards. Centering in key resource books and content standards for students and for teachers in the individual grade levels, this section consists of tables that are organized into three columns:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>South Carolina Social Studies Curriculum Standards</th>
<th>What Educators Should Know How to Do</th>
<th>Resource References</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 8.2.3 compare and contrast early European settlements in South Carolina and the American colonies, including political, economic, and social institutions | E8.2.3 compare and contrast the various African-American lifestyles in South Carolina and the American colonies | Botsch, chaps. 1–5
| | | Franklin and Moss, chaps. 3–4 |

The left column, "South Carolina Social Studies Curriculum Standards," contains the specific history content standards for each grade level as they appear in the South Carolina Social Studies Curriculum Standards.

The middle column, "What Educators Should Know How to Do," contains performance-based content descriptions of what teachers are expected to know and be able to teach. These statements are numbered according to the specific social studies standards with which they correlate. In the above example, the content standard is numbered E8.2.3, which means "educator," grade eight, the third specific standard under the second general standard.

The third column, "Resource References," provides specific references to the key resource books, indicating where in these books the information on the particular content statements is to be found.

Because it not only presents the South Carolina history standards in the immediate context of performance-based standards for educators but also provides a wealth of information on resource materials, Teaching the African-American Experience in the Palmetto State: Educator Resource Guide should play a unique and valuable role in public education in South Carolina, directly impacting the preparation of lesson plans and instructional materials as well as instructional approaches and methodology.

The larger goals of the document are that people of all races and nations be represented equitably in history, that the roles and contributions of people from diverse backgrounds be appreciated by our society, and that the perspectives of such people be examined in our classrooms. The document's more immediate goal is to ensure that the contributions of African-Americans and the African-American perspective are not lost to the children of South Carolina.

EDUCATION IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1984

The Education Improvement Act of 1984 stipulated that the following statement be added to Title 59 of the Code of Laws of South Carolina:

PROGRAM GOAL

To ensure that the history of Africa and African-Americans, their culture and experiences, is integrated into the existing K–12 social studies curriculum.

CONTENT AREAS

I. South Carolina History

Grade level: Grades 3 and 8

Content knowledge goal: To provide instruction on the cultural, political, and economic contributions of African-Americans in the context of South Carolina history.

Educators should know

- the impact of African culture in South Carolina,
- the impact of the Civil War and the Reconstruction era on African-Americans,
- the socioeconomic and cultural lifestyles of the African-American community in South Carolina,
- the contributions of African-Americans throughout South Carolina’s history,
- the impact of the African-American community on South Carolina’s economy, and
- the African-Americans’ struggle for equity in South Carolina’s political arena.
II. African History

Grade level: Grades 6 and 7; secondary global studies

Content knowledge goal: To provide instruction of Africa in the context of world history and civilization and geography.

Educators should know

• the facts that dispel the popular myths about Africans;
• the socioeconomic, political, and geographic characteristics of the countries of Africa; and
• the African culture and thus understand its influences on South Carolina, the United States, and the world.

III. United States History

Grade level: Grades K–2, 4–5, and 8; secondary government, economics, and United States history

Content knowledge goal: To provide instruction of cultural, political, and economic contributions of African-Americans in the context of United States history, government, and economics.

Educators should know

• the role of African-Americans in science and technology,
• the history of African-Americans’ economic progress,
• the literary and cultural history of African-Americans,
• the impact of the Civil Rights Movement,
• the contributions of African-American women in the history of America, and
• the African-Americans’ struggle for equity in the United States political arena.

We should emphasize not Negro History, but the Negro in history. What we need is not a history of selected races or nations, but the history of the world void of national bias, race hate, and religious prejudice.

—Carter G. Woodson
Founder of Negro History Week, 1926
(now known as Black History Month)

The Africans

Grades 9–12
Hailed as stimulating, challenging, and superbly crafted, this journey into the soul of Africa is a poetic and political adventure, illustrated with stunning cinematography filmed on location in 16 African countries. This series asks hard questions as it examines the complexities of a continent influenced by its indigenous roots, Islam, and European Christianity. From the history of Egyptian pharaohs, matriarchal social systems, and the slave trade, to the contemporary political crises of post-colonialism, famine, and apartheid, the series examines African developments from the perspective of its triple heritage. Dr. Ali Mazrui is the host and writer of the series.

Black Excellence

Grades 5–12
Produced by “Ebony” and “Jet” magazines, this series presents three lessons about Black leaders Dr. James Comer, Marian Wright Edelman, and Lawrence Douglas Wilder; Black entrepreneurs John Johnson, Joshua Smith, and Oprah Winfrey; and Black entertainers Bill Cosby, Charles Dutton, and Maya Angelou. For catalog numbers and lesson lengths, go to www.itv.scetv.org/seriesinfo.

Black History Specials

Grades 3–12
Designed for use in February, these programs come from other ITV series, PBS programming, and SCETV specials. Special teleconferences and programs related to the observance of Black History Month will also be included in this series; additional schedules and rights will be announced as other programs are added. For catalog numbers and lesson lengths, go to www.itv.scetv.org/seriesinfo.

The Middle Passage Voyage

Grades 5–10
Captain Bill Pinkney invites students to come along on his extraordinary trip retracing the original slave trade route from Africa to the Americas. This series is an unprecedented project that explores the music, history, and culture that African slaves brought to the Americas. The first program focuses on Captain Pinkney, who is an excellent role model. Having grown up in inner-city Chicago and worked as an executive in New York, he was the first African American to sail around the world. The second program takes students aboard the ship for the 3,700-mile journey across the Atlantic to the Americas. The last program highlights the entire voyage and its culmination in Charleston, South Carolina.
The Palmetto Special
Grade 8
Using site visitations, dramatizations, interviews, visuals, and historic photographs and illustrations, this series explores South Carolina history. Produced by Daniel H. Pipes, the series not only teaches students the history of South Carolina, but helps them appreciate their state. For catalog numbers and lesson lengths, go to www.itv.scetv.org/seriesinfo.
