Research Brief

Grants for Alternative Programs.

Questions: What are sources for grants?
            What are some resources to help with writing grants?

Summary of Findings: There seem to be no grants directly geared toward alternative programs (although the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation has an interest in funding projects focusing on reforming high schools). This should not be a deterrent, however, as there are plenty of funding sources interested in projects and activities which would support an alternative education program. Below are sites that will lead to collections of potential funding sources, grant writing tips, and other resources.

Online Resources:

Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation
The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation is building upon the unprecedented opportunities of the 21st century to improve equity in global health and learning. They currently have a special interest in restructuring high schools.
