Foreword

In keeping with the functions of the Office of Education, the Laws and Legislation Branch is presenting a brief résumé of the laws having statewide educational implication enacted by the 46 State legislatures which met in 1957.

This publication was prepared in response to requests from Chief State School Officers and other educators and specialists, and in compliance with the Branch policy to exchange information relating to educational laws with personnel of State Departments and other interested educators.

The Office appreciates the excellent cooperation of Chief State School Officers and their staffs in forwarding to the Laws and Legislation Branch copies of State codes, session, and school laws.

RALPH C. M. FLINT, Director
Laws and Legislation Branch
State School Legislation, 1957

Introduction

AN UNPRECEDENTED NUMBER of laws of significance to education was enacted by the States during 1957. Legislatures in all States except Virginia and Kentucky met in regular or special session, or both. One State, Mississippi, convened only in special session. Twelve States convened both regular and special sessions. These States are Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, Texas, and West Virginia. All other States met in regular session.

No attempt is made here to evaluate the educational significance of each act or to indicate the frequency of activity in a given area of legislation. As reported an act may introduce or modify one or many educational achievements. It is listed under the heading with which it is most closely associated.

During 1957, the following matters received noteworthy attention:

ADDITION AND ORGANIZATION—Creates or extends provisions for study commissions on all phases of education; modifies procedure at State and local level in areas of census, records, contracts, bids, purchasing, facsimile signatures, elections, district reorganization, parental responsibility for minors, non-public schools, and numerous other matters.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT—New or expanded foundation programs; more State aid; more local taxing power with maximum limits raised and scope extended; debt limits increased; administration at State level improved through newly created finance divisions; and finance and tax study commissions.

HIGHER EDUCATION—Provides new programs or increases funds for scholarships; new or expanded building authorities and programs; increases general appropriations and establishes new methods of financing; establishes new or extends present study commissions; salaries or benefit of personnel increased or liberalized.

PERSONNEL—Improves procedures or liberalizes benefits to personnel consisting of administrators, teachers, and other em-employees in relation to higher salaries or allowances; retirement provisions and benefits; and certification, employment, contract, leave, tenure, and other provisions. The term "personnel" as used here applies to administrators, teachers, supervisors, board members, trustees, attendance officers, bus drivers, cafeteria, and other school employees.

School Building Construction—New or expanded State aid programs; bonding capacity and levy limits increased; State loan funds increased and expanded; new building authorities created and powers of others extended; improvements in procedures involving standards, leases, and condemnations.

Special Education—Provides new programs and increases funds for existing programs in areas of adult education; mentally advanced or retarded, and physically handicapped children; vocational and industrial education; automobile driver training and aviation education; practical nurse training and educational television.

Students—Improves procedures and expands services in elementary, secondary, and higher education in areas of scholarships, loans, and tuition benefits; health, safety, and physical examination procedures; curriculum, guidance, attendance, assignment, employment, and rehabilitation procedures; and textbooks, library, and recreational facilities. The term "students" applies to pupils, students, and all others under instruction or training at all grade levels.
